Senate Heads Toward Hot Floor Fight On 3d Term

Subcommittee Promises Hearings On Bill to Limit President's Tenure

Out in the Open

Post Staff Writer

The Senate's long-awaited third-term debate appeared definitely scheduled last night.

Public hearings on limitation of the Presidential term of office were promised before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee "in a week or two."

This would be followed by a report to the Senate and "free and open" floor debate as the campaign swings into its stride.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee, decided to "move the whole issue out into the open" after the President struck back at his third-term bolt.

Six-Year Term Urged

He said he has authority under Judiciary Committee action early in 1939 designating a five-man subcommittee with himself at its head to consider his proposed amendment to the Constitution limiting Presidential service to a single six-year term.

Earlier yesterday, Burke had announced formation of an independent organization to take the third-term issue to the country "as an extension of the President's grasp for power exemplified by his attempt to pack the Supreme Court."

In Kansas City, former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, meanwhile, postponed a meeting of anti-third-term "Jeffersonian" Democrats he had set for today in Chicago. He said the meeting was deferred to accommodate the unexpectedly large number of Democrats who wished to attend.

As the President left Hyde Park for Washington to confer today with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, his running mate, Senator Burke, the first Senate Democrat to bolt, announced he will "concentrate upon the third term as an issue and there will be no conflict with any of the other groups, recently announced."

To Hear Both Sides

In the meantime Burke revived the joint six-year single term resolution he introduced January 4, 1939, and announced it would be broadened for purposes of hearings to cover the advisability of a limitation on tenure in the office of President.

Referred to a subcommittee led by himself last summer, the original resolution was unanimously approved by the group. Later the full subcommittee divided, but Burke was authorized to report it to the Senate "without recommendation."

He said he had never reported the measure because he sought full committee support behind it. As no public hearings ever were held, he declared now was the time for them, "when we have a President who has actually been nominated and agreed to accept a third term."

Burke said anyone having any views on a third term will be free to testify before the subcommittee, and this goes for both political parties (the Republican platform has an antithird-term plank) and for the candidates themselves.

Other members of the Senate subcommittee, which approved the original Burke resolution, are Sen-

Handshakes, back-slaps and pretty girls were much in evidence as headquarters of the Willkie Washington Committee swung open its doors at 727 Fifteenth street northwest.

The only thing lacking was a brass band—"and we'd have had that if there had been time to find one," grinned Chairman Haven B. Page.

Surmounted on each side by large Willkie banners, a picture of the Republican Presidential nominee adorns the entrance and around the elaborately-paneled interior are more pictures, signs and banners. Last of Charted Elements Found in Radium Residue

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, July 24.—A young Swiss radiologist announced today he had discovered the last of the world's missing known elements—tiny particles left in the residue from radium—to complete a list of 92 which science has been trying to fill in since 1789.

Dr. Walter Minder, 35, chief of the radium institute at Bern, said he has isolated the element—a speck no bigger than one ten-thousandth of a milligram and already is studying its rays.

"The quantity so far," he said, "is too small to make practical experiments on possible uses of the new element."

Dr. Minder calls the element helvetium. He said its properties, whatever they might be, perhaps would be discovered first in the United States because larger amounts of radium are available for examination there.

Dr. Minders' earlier search for the last element was said to have led to the discovery of the next to the last found element, variously called actinium and virginium.

Better Late Than Never! Boy Marks Birthday in Bandages

Two-year-old Paul Stanley Dodson celebrated a belated birthday yesterday—but for his parents it was Thanksgiving in July.

When he toppled out of a second-story window on his birthday Sunday and suffered a severe head injury, his father, Paul Dodson, put away the gifts and said: "Nobody's going to open them . . . until he comes back from the hospital."

PAUL DODSON

Mrs. Dodson didn't say much, but somehow her hope was so strong that she saved the chocolate-covered cake, just as if Paul would be back in time to eat it.

And he was.

With his blue eyes bright under a slanting bandage, Paul came from Emergency Hospital yesterday afternoon back home to 1223 Fifteenth street northwest. The parents marveled at their own words as they told the neighbors that his condition is good, and that they reckoned their biggest worry now is how to keep such a lively youngster quiet in bed for a while.

Within a half hour after his return, Paul was digging into the packages and finding a new blue suit and a woolly white toy dog. To the delight of his sister, Emmagene, 3, he seemed more impressed with the toy airplane which had cost her most of her havings.

She ransacked her bank to buy a welcoming gift for him. Finding a total of 11 pennies, she spent 10 on the airplane yesterday.

Paul came back to a new home at the same address. Almost immediately Sunday, the Dodsons moved to a downstairs apartment, to take a tuck in the near-fatal distance from windows to ground. Paul fell 11 feet and landed on a concrete-edged iron grating. Dodson took the day off from his filling station job.

Continued Heat Forecast; D. C. Breaks Water Records

Four men were prostrated yesterday as the District's heat wave continued unabated and the United States Engineer Office reported sweltering Washingtonians had broken all records for water consumption in the last two days.

Meanwhile, an autopsy at the District Morgue revealed W. B. Crews, 40, of 740 Third street northwest, who collapsed Tuesday while at work for a construction firm remodeling the Hecht Co. store, had died of thermal fever (heat prostration).

Earl Ross, 35, of Rockville, Md., collapsed from the heat while working near Montrose, Md. He was taken to the Montgomery County Hospital at Sandy Spring, where his condition was described as serious.

Those prostrated here were Preston Donnally, 39, of 1005 L street northwest; Hugh Carthal, colored, 33, of 1644 Sixth street northwest, and Ferdinand H. Brickwedde, 62, of Baltimore. All were treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Committee Favors Vote For District

Majority of House Judiciary Group Pledged to Approve Some Suffrage Bill

House Judiciary Committee approval of some form of District suffrage legislation was virtually certain last night with seven Democrats favorably committed and the Republican membership of ten apparently bound by the pledge of their leader, Representative Martin, to give Washington residents the right to vote.

Martin, House minority leader, yesterday pledged Republicans, with 167 House seats, to any legislative move to bring the issue to a vote before Congress adjourns.

"If the Democrats bring out a satisfactory suffrage bill," Martin said, "there is no doubt of its passage as the Republicans will give it substantial support."

Seven Democrats Pledged

These Democratic members of the Judiciary Committee, which will meet Tuesday to consider Chairman Sumners' resolution to give the District national representation, have told The Post they favor suffrage, at least in principle:

Kefauver, of Tennessee; Gibbs, of Georgia; Weaver, of North Carolina; Celler, of New York; Murdock, of Utah; Massingale, of Oklahoma, and Tolan, of California.

Four Republicans likewise have given personal pledges of support for suffrage in some form, but Representative Martin's indorsement, observers conceded, should give the movement majority support of the committee of 26 by a comfortable margin.

As House members began to return to the city for the first meeting of Congress today since Monday, Martin declared:

"I am sympathetic with the demand of the people of Washington in their desire to participate in the affairs of their government."

Speaks Ironically

The new chairman of the Republican National Committee observed with a smile that "of course, every Democrat will vote for it." Later he explained he was speaking ironically, and that, as with the Hatch bill, suffrage would have to be put over by the minority party if the legislation comes to a vote, as seems probable.

Representative Kefauver declared he expected to support Sumners' bill, stating that he "always felt the people in the District should have suffrage."

Representative Gibbs said that from newspaper accounts of Sumners' proposal he thought a "very fair proposition" was being made to the District.

"We are all in favor of suffrage," Gibbs said. "That's what the American Government is based upon. If the people of Washington want the vote, I don't see why they shouldn't have it."

"Imagines" He'll "Go Along"

Representative Weaver, reached shortly after his return to the city, said he believed residents of Washington have a right to express themselves and "imagined" he would "go along" on Sumners' proposal.

Representative Spring, Republican member of the committee, said he was "sympathetic" toward suffrage

U. S. Ministers In Soviet-Seized Lands Recalled

The State Department disclosed yesterday that American Ministers had been recalled from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, the three Baltic republics whose absorption by Soviet Russia was denounced by Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary.

John C. Wiley, Minister to Estonia and Latvia, and Owen J. C. Norem, Minister to Lithuania, were summoned here for "consultation."

The recall orders did not apply to other employes of the legations, numbering altogether ten men at the three capitals.

Disaster Rumors Upset Canal Zone

Balboa, Canal Zone, July 24 (U.P.).—The entire isthmus was in a high state of nervousness late today as the result of a sudden inexplicable flood of "disaster" rumors, one of which was to the effect that 60 persons were killed in an explosion at Pedro Miguel Locks, 10 miles from Balboa.

All were officially denied by Canal Zone authorities. (Army officials in Washington confirmed that the rumors were false.)

Draft to Skip Men With Dependents

Army Will Not Call Them for Training During Peacetime, Congress Assured

By John G. Norris

The Army assured Congress yesterday that men with dependents will not be drafted for military service in time of peace if the pending conscription bill is passed.

At the same time, the Senate Military Affairs Committee agreed in principle to exempt conscientious objectors from military service and will write into the Burke-Wadsworth bill a broader exemption clause than that in effect during the World War.

Two Congressional committees have been working simultaneously on the measure and expect to have conscription legislation ready for the Senate and House next week. Action is being stepped up in an effort to pass the measure early next month so that some 11,500,000 American men may be registered about September 1, and from 300,000 to 400,000 drafted for service October 1.

Brig. Gen. William E. Shedd, assistant chief of staff for personnel, gave the assurance that "never in peacetime" would the War Department draft men with dependents. This was in reply to questioning by members of the House Military Affairs Committee as to how married men would be protected during their Army service at $21 a month if they were making payments on a home or life insurance.

Moratorium Suggested

Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said his group would consider the problem of single men in this situation. Suggestions of a moratorium on debts have been made, he stated.

Senator Sheppard said the committee had voted to grant exemption of military service to all true conscientious objectors, whether or not they belong to a religious sect which forbids its members to bear arms. During the World War only Quakers, Mennonites and members of other such orders were exempt, he stated.

Conscientious objectors, however, would be liable for a year's compulsory noncombatant services under the bill, Sheppard added. He said the committee had not yet agreed on the method of determining exemptions on this score.

Key Workers Also Exempt

The group did approve the exemption of legislative, executive and judicial officers of the United States and the various States, Territories and District of Columbia. "Executive officers," it was said, are policy-making officials and not those with purely administrative functions.

Approval was also given to the deferment of men "whose employment in industry, agriculture or other occupations or employment is found to be necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety or interest," ordained ministers and men with dependents. Deferment would be passed on in each case by one of some 6,000 local boards to be created under the measure.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, appeared before the House committee to urge immediate

Royalty Arrives In D. C. Today From Luxembourg

The U. S. S. Trenton is scheduled to slip into Annapolis harbor before 10 o'clock this morning bearing Prince Consort Felix, of Luxembourg, and his six children, the first royal refugees to reach these shores from a blitzkrieged country.

The royal party, it is understood, will motor to Washington to lunch with President Roosevelt and then will entrain for the Long Island (N. Y.) estate of Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Belgium and Luxembourg, at whose invitation they are coming here. Davies, now a special assistant to the Secretary of State, heads the reception committee.

Secretary Hull's Committee at Havana Weighs Plans to Smoke Out and Limit Activities of Foreign Agents in America

By the Associated Press

Havana, July 24.—Firm measures to stamp out "Fifth-Column" activities by foreign diplomatic agents or other persons and knit hemisphere defenses were urgently advanced tonight by foreign ministers of the American republics.

Proposals before the peace preservation committee headed by Secretary of State Hull included an investigation of diplomatic and consular agents and possible limitation of their immunity privileges.

Another conference group, the neutrality committee, moved to make the Western Hemisphere neutrality measures more effective. Leopoldo Melo, Argentine delegate and committee head, said it had adopted three resolutions designed to strengthen the meaning of the 300-mile safety zone drawn around the Americas last October at Panama.

Simultaneously Cuba went a step ahead of the United States proposal to establish a "collective trusteeship" over western colonies of European nations in the event they are threatened with acquisition by other non-American states.

Cuba suggested that the Pan-American nations issue a declaration warning that "any Western Hemisphere territory offering peril" to any American nation may be occupied by armed American forces.

The United States already has begun investigating foreign consular agents at home and warned the German Embassy in Washington in one case that its officials must refrain from public discussion or activity in domestic affairs or leave the country.

Justice Laws Orders Inquiry In Contempt

Telegrams Seek To Influence Passport Case

By Dillard Stokes.

Contempt of court prosecution last night hung over whoever tried to influence Justice Bolitha J. Laws with six telegrams about a case he was about to try in the District Court yesterday.

Justice Laws did not read the wires, but directed District Attorney Edward M. Curran to investigate and present contempt of court informations if they were called for.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Civil Liberties Union last night were working to track down the senders of the telegrams, which were sent from Washington, Philadelphia and New York. Also sought was a man who telephoned Justice Laws' chambers from Philadelphia yesterday, but was not permitted to speak to the justice.

Several persons whose names were signed to the telegrams repudiated them. The American Civil Liberties Union, named in all the telegrams and in ten others sent to Curran as being active in the case, denied the connection. None of the signatures to wires sent the justice could be confirmed.

Case Filed Last Week

Justice Laws was subject to the barrage of pressure in connection with a case that attracted wide sympathy when it was filed last week. Mrs. Wera Giegerich, 48, and Mrs. Fanny Rubinowics, 46, told the court in their petitions they were American citizens held in German concentration camps in France and Germany. They asked that Secretary of State Hull be compelled to issue them United States passports, which would effect their release and enable them to return to America. They said they were born in New York and had lived in Europe since the late 1890's.

Passports had been refused the women on the ground that their citizenship was compromised by declarations they made 20 years ago to the effect that they were natives of Russia. They claimed they said

Big Tobacco Firms Named In Trust Suit

8 Major Companies, 26 Others and 33 Individuals Cited

The Justice Department filed criminal charges under the anti-trust laws yesterday against some of the biggest names in the tobacco industry, the official hope being to bring down the price of cigarettes and raise the income of 3,500,000 persons throughout the South who make their living from the leaf.

After two years of preparation, the suit was instituted in the United States District Court at Lexington, Ky., naming eight major tobacco companies, producers of the leading popular brands of cigarettes, 26 other corporations and subsidiaries, and 33 individuals.

The names of defendants listed in connection with charges of deliberate domination of the growth, marketing and distribution of tobacco read like a Who's Who of the tobacco industry, which produces over a billion dollars worth of products a year.

Big Firms Named

Among those named in the charges are the American Tobacco Company, Liggett & Myers Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., P. Lorillard Co. and Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc.

Britain Strikes Hard

By the United Press

London (Thursday), July 25. Germany sent American dive-bombers captured from the French against the British Isles in relays of bombing and machine-gunning attacks yesterday after British fliers struck deep into the Reich and "partially destroyed" the great Dornier airplane works, the air ministry reported.

In the English Channel the first squadron of German motor torpedo boats to be sent against the British Isles was said to have been turned back Wednesday in a predawn battle with a lone British motor torpedo boat.

More than 100 planes battled furiously over the Thames Estuary yesterday when 12 German planes were shot down against the loss of only two British planes, it was said.

U. S. Plane Downed

The American planes in the hands of German pilots battled furiously with British squadrons of Spitfire fighters, it was said.

In one of the many battles a squadron of Spitfire fighters was said by the air ministry to have shot down an American-made Vought-156 dive bomber. Another staggered away with a badly damaged wing.

Other American planes seized by the Germans in the military collapse of France were said to have participated in the attacks.

(The Vought "Corsair" V-156 scout-bomber monoplane is an export version of the Vought "Corsair" planes used by the United States Navy and made by the Chance Vought Co., a division of the United Aircraft Corporation, at East Hartford, Conn. There are two types of the United States Navy Corsairs, fitted with 750-horsepower Pratt-Whitney twin-wasp engines.)

The air ministry, in a communique shortly before last midnight, described as follows German air attacks on the British Isles extending throughout Wednesday:

"Since the small hours of this morning our Spitfires and antiaircraft guns have been beating off attacks by German bombers, fighters and mine-laying aircraft against ship and shipping routes around our coasts.

ators Van Nuys, of Indiana, and Connally, of Texas (Democrats), and Austin, of Vermont, and Wiley, of Wisconsin (Republicans).

Burke said he already had on file a long list of persons who had asked to be heard.

He said he first introduced his single term resolution three years ago so "my present position is in no sense a new one."

Burke decided to form an independent organization after discussions "with many of my associates who feel as I do" and after he had been urged to take a leading part, he said.

Same Issues at Stake

The Nebraskan, who originally came to the Senate as a New Dealer but soon broke with the President, called the third term an "attempt at self-perpetuation in the office of Presidency on the same level with the unsuccessful attempt to make the Supreme Court subservient and subordinate to that office.

"The same vital issues are at stake and there is the same fundamental cleavage between those who believe that the Government belongs to the office-holders and those who believe that the Government belongs to the people, free, untrammeled, unfettered," he said.

Reed's Kansas City announcement that the antithird term conference of Jeffersonian Democrats in Chicago will be postponed said the former Missouri Senator had originally called only a conference of six members of the group's executive committee.

"But it was widely publicized as a general meeting of the Jeffersonian Democrats," Reed said. "Thus the impression has been created that the meeting was general and I have been flooded with applications from all parts of the United States for participation. It, therefore, seems proper that no meeting should be held until arrangements are made for general representation. Besides the situation is changing and developing rapidly."

Follows Opening Blast

President Roosevelt's return from Hyde Park today to confer with Wallace follows his opening campaign blast Tuesday at Burke, Reed, former Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes and Former Budget Director Douglas, all Democrats who have swung to Willkie. In his first talk with Wallace since the convention, they are expected to outline in their respective campaign roles, with Wallace on the stump, and the President remaining mostly at his White House desk.

Other developments:

While Republican leaders determined to cultivate growing Willkie sentiment in the South, the three Senate Southern Democrats declared the "Solid South" would hold for Roosevelt. They were Senators Pepper, of Florida; Ellender, of Louisiana, and Harrison, of Mississippi.

In Spartanburg, S. C., Senator Byrnes told newsmen he has asked party leaders to eliminate him from consideration as next chairman of the Democratic National Committee. He predicted a November victory for Roosevelt and Wallace.

In a letter to affiliates of Labor's Non-Partisan League, President John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., said "regardless of who may be the next President" the league's important task is to elect Congressmen and Senators who will "support the welfare of the people through legislation."

Roland L. Hill, president of the National Young Democrats Willkie Club and former Minnesota State director of the National Emergency Council, said Minnesota Farmer-Laborites "blame Roosevelt for their downfall and this fall they will go for Willkie in a big way."

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, of Des Moines, Iowa, whose husband was Secretary of Agriculture under Wilson, offered to lead a Willkie-for-President drive among Democratic women of the Middle West. Mrs. Meredith wired Republican National Chairman Martin she will support Willkie in an effort "to preserve the venerable two-term tradition."

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 24.—A Crowd of more than 100,000, here for the annual covered-wagon day celebration, cheered Wendell L. Willkie as he drove along the parade route, and watched the pageant of pioneer times from the Main street reviewing stand.

The Republican nominee announced upon his arrival from Cheyenne, Wyo., early this morning that he would make no political speeches here, and he held that pledge through the day's long program of events, which included two rodeo performances, a luncheon and a public reception at the Hotel Utah.

At the Utah State fair grounds this afternoon, however, he told a rodeo audience that the same American spirit which had prevailed over dangers and hardships in the settlement of Utah 93 years ago, would bring this country through its present difficulties.

The warmth of Utah's welcome to the Republican nominee was apparent early this morning when a crowd of 3,000 greeted Willkie at Salt Lake City Airport shortly after midnight, and another milling throng waiting in the lobby of the Hotel Utah cheered him upon his arrival there.

Cheers Are Constant

Those cheers, and recurring shouts of "We Want Willkie" echoed all morning long as the Republican nominee drove between massed thousands lining the curbs along main street, and mingled with the music of marching bands as Willkie watched the covered-wagon parade.

Other thousands cheered him at the Fair Grounds this afternoon and at a rival rodeo performance at Ogden, forty miles north of Salt Lake City tonight, and nearly 3,000 persons waited in line to shake his hand at a public reception at the Hotel Utah.

"You folks came out here to have a good time, and so did I," the Republican nominee told the fair grounds audience. "I wanted to see you and you wanted to see me, and all I can say is that if you have as good an impression as I have, I am in good shape."

He paused, and his voice took on a more serious tone as he looked out over the heads of the crowd.

"We are living in troubled times. Our democratic way of life is at test throughout the world, and thoughtful people are disturbed. But when you remember that some 93 years ago your ancestors came out to this area, faced and sloved problems and difficulties which make our problems today seem somewhat trivial, you and I know that America is going to come through this time.

To Save American Way

"We are going to preserve this great democratic way of life, with all of it's fineness, and cleanness and decency."

From the reviewing stand, seated beside Gov. Ralph L. Carr of Colorado, and Gus P. Backman, president of Covered-Wagon Days, Inc., he watched the long procession of old prairie schooners, floats, cowboys and cowgirls on horseback, high school bands, Indians and comic figures with keen interest.

Willkie held a brief conference at the hotel with Republican leaders of Utah. In the group were George W. Snyder, national committeeman; David J. Wilson, State chairman; D. K. Moffat, secretary of the Republican State Committee; George T. Hanson, treasurer and Harold P. Fabian, vice chairman of the finance committee.

He called on Heber J. Grant, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, who wished him success in his campaign.

Committee workers were on hand to see that few, if any, passersby got away before signing a registration book labeled "We Want Willkie." The headquarters opened at 11 a. m. and by noon voluntary contributions had exceeded the $50 mark.

"We are Oren Root's godchildren," said Page, exhibiting a telegram of congratulations for the chairman of the Associated Willkie Clubs of America. "We are an independent group working in harmonious cooperation with the regular Willkie organization."

He paused to hand a red-white-and-blue "Willkie" button to a pretty blonde who stepped up to register, and continued:

"Our purpose is to bring home the great floating vote. We want to reach the eligible independent and Democratic voters who don't ordinarily put their names to a ballot."

Page said his group would leave crusading among died-in-the-wool Republicans to the regular Willkie organization and concentrate on Democratic, anti third-term party bolters and the "man in the street."

Represented in yesterday's registrations were District residents who never cast a Presidential vote in their lives, Roosevelt supporters of 1932 and 1936 and old-line G. O. P. champions with a gleam in their eyes.

One of the first to appear and offer aid to the cause was Judge D. W. Davis, former Governor of Idaho and Special Assistant Secretary of Interior under President Harding.

The committee headquarters will open daily at 8:30 a. m. and close at 6 p. m. through August. Thereafter, the office will remain open until late at night, said Page.

A tabulation last night showed a total of $807 in contributions.

U.S. Heat Holidays Are a Hot Issue

'Automatic' System Draws the Fire Of Some Officials

By Edward Ryan

Heat and confusion over the problem of when it's too hot to work, mount together in Government offices, a checkup showed yesterday.

While two departments are testing a new "automatic" heat policy, numerous other agencies rely on actual observations of office heat conditions, as reported by supervisors and division chiefs, to decide when employes should be released.

Personnel chiefs in numerous agencies, it was reported, are individually seeking to have their organizations adopt a uniform standard for excusing employes in hot weather.

Both the Commerce and Agriculture departments are testing a new standard policy based on "effective temperatures," an arbitrary scale prepared by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, to combine mercury readings and humidity in one "comfort" index.

New System Criticized

During this summer, officials of these departments said, employes will be dismissed when the Weather Bureau reports that the effective temperature is 84. This would result, for example, when the mercury read 94 and the humidity reached 50 per cent.

Although the Commerce Building is comparatively new, officials pointed out, only the Secretary's suite, including a score of offices, have air conditioning. The rest of the building soaks up heat from half a dozen inside courts, and from direct sun on the outer walls.

One executive, quizzed about his agency's policy on hot weather, said flatly "We're against it."

In the Treasury Department, officials said, employes are excused only when severe heat conditions are brought to the attention of the Secretary's office. These reports are checked against reports on the number of employes seeking first-aid heat treatment at the relief rooms. Word to dismiss employes is given by the Secretary's office.

Maj. Lemuel B. Schofield, executive officer of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said that he plans to seek air-conditioning equipment for 325 employes in Hutchins Building at Tenth and D streets northwest. Meanwhile, he said, employes will be excused whenever the heat becomes unbearable. No standard temperature will be used to decide when employes are to be let out, he said, and officials in charge will decide when the heat is unbearable.

James L. Baity, executive officer of the General Accounting Office, said his organization was not using any fixed temperature scale in deciding when employes would go. The word to stop work, he said, is given on the basis of actual heat conditions. Operating chiefs in the Accounting Offices' 18 buildings are authorized to dismiss the employes when the heat becomes unbearable, he said.

Dr. Vergil Reed, assistant director of the Census Bureau, said that in the new southwest Census Building, and in the agency's annexes, thermometers in every room are checked at hourly intervals on hot days. Census officials report heat conditions in their offices, to the Commerce Department, and get from Commerce officials the word to send employes home.

35,000 Dismissed

As an example of the current variety of hot weather policies in the Government offices, it was pointed out, the 35,000 employes dismissed from 44 uncooled buildings during Monday's heat blast received the go signal at intervals from noon to 2:45 p. m.

James Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said he plans to survey hot weather policies in Government offices here. He said his organization had urged giving employes Saturdays off during the summer. A second possibility, he suggested, might be to let employes start work earlier to escape the afternoon heat.

Miss Eleanor Nelson, secretary of the United Federal Workers, said that most of their locals start negotiating for the afternoon off when the mercury soars. Usually, on bad days, the negotiators have won agreement from supervisors that employes be dismissed. In general, she said, employes have not favored the "effective temperature" plan, and have urged instead that the dismissal signal be given when the mercury hits 92.

Dr. Edgar Woolard, of the Weather Bureau, said that an 11-year record of Washington weather showed that use of the effective temperature of 84 as a standard signal to quit work, would give employes eight or nine afternoons off during the summer. He said that on the hot days, the Weather Bureau plans to make hourly readings of "effective temperature" for the agencies that use these reports.

Designer Reveals Plans For $1,000 Metal Planes

Detroit, July 24 (INS).—Plans for the large-scale production of a light, all-metal airplane by William B. Stout, pioneer aviation engineer, to sell eventually at $1,000, were revealed today.

Stout, designer of the Ford tri-motor plane, says the plane will be a two-seater of stainless steel equipped with an 80-horse power motor and will be able to land at 35 miles an hour.

Woman, 51, Held in $500,000 Theft of Employer's Funds

Accused of Stealing Securities to Back Dabbling in Stocks

By the Associated Press

New York, July 24.—The arrest of Mrs. Mary B. Roberts, 51-year-old divorcee, of nearby Scarsdale, on a grand larceny charge accusing her of the theft of "at least $500,000 in securities from her late employer, Samuel C. Thomson, was announced today by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

Mrs. Roberts was for 20 years confidential secretary to Thomson, 71-year-old mining engineer who died July 13.

Dewey said the action grew out of an investigation begun after Thomson's death by his son, Clifton S. Thomson, a lawyer, into a custody account his father had possessed.

The late Thomson was an official of the International Mining Corporation with offices in Rockefeller Center, and had opened the account, Dewey said, with a deposit of "about $70,000 in good listed securities."

As the district attorney described it, Mrs. Roberts had power of attorney given to her by her employer. She would call for and have delivered to her securities from the custody account, sign a receipt for them and deposit them in brokerage accounts which she had opened in the name of her mother and her 19-year-old son.

Mrs. Roberts was reported confined to her Scarsdale home suffering from nervous collapse.

She invested the allegedly stolen funds, the district attorney's office said, in the stock market, real estate speculations and a White Plains furniture company. Most of the money, allegedly taken over a considerable period, was said to have been lost in the various transactions.

Duchess' First Husband Says Third Wife Tried to Knife Him

By the Associated Press

Santa Monica, Calif., July 24.—Mrs. Norma Reese Johnson Spencer was awarded a divorce today from Commander Earl Winfield Spencer, U. S. N., retired, after she testified the commander, first husband of the Duchess of Windsor, had been guilty of habitual intemperance and cruelty.

Mrs. Spencer, whom Spencer married three years ago, said the naval officer went on week-long drunks and that she was forced to lock him out of their home because she feared for her life.

On such occasions, she added, he was "really a mental case." Her daughters by a previous marriage, Mrs. Kathryn Wade and Mrs. Betty Legare, testified that when he became intoxicated, Spencer would speak Chinese.

Mrs. Wade declared that once when she was visiting the Spencer home and her mother was ill in bed, Spencer made improper advances to her. Spencer had denied this.

Spencer, testifying earlier in support of his plea for a divorce, said that during one of their almost weekly arguments over money Mrs. Spencer lunged at him with a knife. He denied her charges of intemperance, asserting his weekly liquor bill was only about $10 and that his wife "drank as much of it as I did."

Superior Judge Orlando H. Rhodes denied Mrs. Spencer's petition for $100 a month alimony but gave her title to the family automobile. She testified her income last year was "about $4,200."

Spencer married Wallis Warfield, now the wife of former King Edward VIII of England, 23 years ago. It was while they were living at Coronado, Calif., that she met the then Prince of Wales. They were divorced in 1927 and each remarried twice.

Blood Bank For Defense Under Survey

Red Cross Recruiting Donors, Setting Up Collecting Centers

Plans for development of a national "blood bank" in connection with the defense program were announced yesterday by the American Red Cross.

Acting at the request of the Army Surgeon General, Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis reported that a project was under way in which volunteer blood donors would be recruited and collecting centers established throughout the country.

A unique feature of the program is that plasma, rather than whole blood, will be stored for transfusion purposes. The use of plasma, which is the colorless portion of human blood with the red corpuscles removed, has increased markedly in the past year due to its many advantages.

Whole blood deteriorates rapidly, must be kept at low temperatures, and must be typed and cross-matched before it is transfused. Plasma, on the other hand, can be kept indefinitely at room temperatures and does not require typing. A patient, for example, who has type 4 blood can be safely transfused with plasma separated from the blood of a type 1 donor.

Volunteers to Be Studied

Davis said a preliminary study involving 1,300 Red Cross volunteers in four cities will be conducted under direction of a special committee named by the National Research Council.

Dr. William DeKleine, Red Cross medical adviser, will meet tomorrow in Ann Arbor, Mich., with Dr. Cyrus E. Sturgis, of the University of Michigan, and with the Ann Arbor chapter's board of directors to plan the donor enlistment project.

In the next two weeks Dr. DeKleine will hold similar conferences with three other blood specialists of the National Research Council: Dr. Everett Plass, of the University of Iowa; Dr. Alfred Blaylock, of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Max Strumia, of Bryn Mawr Hospital, Philadelphia.

Preliminary Surveys

"Preliminary studies must be made to perfect methods of collecting, storing and administering plasma under conditions comparable to wartime emergency," Dr. DeKleine declared. "Blood for this initial study will be furnished by volunteers at the various hospitals where members of the research committee are regularly employed. The plasma collected will be stored and used as emergencies arise at these hospitals."

Ultimately the Red Cross will work out with the Army Medical Corps plans for enrolling prospective donors in cities where collecting centers will be set up. In event of an emergency, the Red Cross could start delivering plasma within 10 days after enrollment is completed, Dr. DeKleine said.

For the last four years 12 Red Cross chapters have been furnishing whole blood from volunteers to hospitals for civilian use, Chairman Davis asserted. He revealed that also under consideration is a plan to furnish voluntary plasma for treatment of war victims abroad.

The British Red Cross suggested this relief, Davis said, adding that two possible plans are being studied. Under the first, the American Red Cross would gather plasma in the United States and fly it to Europe for transfusion purposes. The second plan, which is considered more feasible, calls for the American Red Cross to furnish England with the equipment and technicians required.

Laurens Hamilton, Florida Attorney, Marries Horsewoman

Special Dispatch to The Post

Middleburg, Va., July 24.—Mrs. Eva Stewart Spilman, socialite horsewoman and a prominent member of Virginia's hunting set, today became the bride of Laurens Morgan Hamilton, of Palm Beach, Fla., in a simple ceremony at Byrnly, her estate near here.

Only immediate members of the couple's families attended the wedding, performed by Justice of the Peace Frank D. Gaskins. Among these were her father, Percy Hamilton Stewart, former New Jersey Representative; her two children by a former marriage, H. Wallace Shaffer, jr., 18, and Anne Childs Shaffer, 16, and the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Morgan Hamilton.

It is the third marriage for the bride. She was married to Harvey Wallace Shaffer in 1920, from whom she was divorced in 1933. She was married to Baldwin D. Spilman, jr., in 1934 and they were divorced in 1938.

The bride recently purchased Byrnly, where she maintains a stable of race horses and hunters. Her entries won seven races last season. She is a member of the Orange County, Piedmont, Middleburg and Warrenton Hunt clubs.

Hamilton is a grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, a nephew of J. P. Morgan and a great-great-grandson of Alexander Hamilton. He left Groton in 1917 to join the Army, was commissioned second lieutenant in 1918, and was attached to American military missions in Europe following the war. In 1920, he married Mrs. Gertrude Warren, of Paris. They were separated in 1931 and divorced this year.

He entered New York politics in 1932, and was elected to the State Assembly in 1936 from Rockland County, retiring at the end of one term. Hamilton resigned from the State Republican Committee in 1938 as a protest against the party's affiliation with the American Labor Party. He is a former president of the New York Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, and a member of many clubs in New York and Florida.

The couple will spend the summer at Southampton, Long Island, returning to Byrnly for the fall club hunt season.

Convict Quits Perch on Tower After 19 Hours

Atlanta, July 24 (AP).—Hunger and guards' arguments prevailed after 19 hours and brought a 20-year-old convict to earth today from the top of a 100-foot water tower at the Federal Penitentiary, where he had taken refuge to avoid return to a Georgia prison camp.

The prisoner, Andrew Wynne, climbed to the top of the tower at 1:30 p. m. yesterday and remained there until 8:30 a. m. today.

Officials said the prisoner's climb apparently was prompted by the fact that his two-year Federal automobile theft sentence was ending today and he was to be returned to the Chatham County Work Camp to complete a four-to-five year burglary sentence interrupted by an escape in 1937.

State deputies who went to the prison today to claim the prisoner came out without him. They said his 94 days of "good time" had been revoked as a penalty for the tower episode, meaning his return to State custody would have to be delayed that long.

'Draft Board' Nucleus Ready To Turn U. S. Boys Into Soldiers

Organization Would Expand Through Nation

By the Associated Press

Awaiting only the word from Congress, a "shadow" organization of some 450 men, which could be expanded to a million in possibly a week, stands ready to convert American boys into soldiers.

Authorized originally for wartime emergency, the organization would now be used, under the terms of the Burke-Wadsworth bill pending in Congess, to select men for peacetime service. The bill incorporates the general principles of the organization.

Beginning at the top, it would work this way:

A joint Army and Navy committee, which has been evolving draft plans for many years, would become the nucleous of a national headquarters.

Under the direction of State Governors, some 350 State staff officers would form the nucleus of State organizations.

The Governors would appoint a total of 6,500 local selective service boards, about one to each county or each geographical unit of 30,000 population.

200,000 Administrators

In addition, doctors would be appointed as medical examiners, lawyers as appeal agents, etc., a total of about 200,000 administrative officials for the whole country.

To conduct the one-day registration of men of military age—probably from 21 to 31 in the first call—some 700,000 registrators would be designated, probably from among election officials.

Most States already have drawn maps showing the local board areas. Many are reported to have begun drafting preliminary lists of administrative personnel. All of them have copies of the forms which would be used unless Congress makes some change in them.

If and when the call for registration is issued, this is what will happen, as outlined in an Army-Navy pamphlet:

Men in the prescribed age group will go to their election precincts—123,000 in all—to register. In the District, registration would be at schools and fire stations.

Registration cards will be collected by county clerks, who will distribute them to the local boards, which will shuffle the cards and give them serial numbers

Without seeing any man's name, National headquarters will make up a list of numbers by drawing them in a lottery in Washington, and men will be called to service in that order.

Meanwhile, each registrant will receive a questionnaire to be returned in five days. On the basis of the questionnaires, the local board will classify men as (1) available for immediate service, (2) deferred because of employment in a vital industry, (3) deferred because of family responsibilities and (4) deferred for obvious reasons such as physical handicaps.

Men in Class 1 will be further classified as fit for (A) unlimited service or (B) limited service or (C) unfit for service.

Advisory agencies will assist in classification—Government appeal agents to prevent favoritism and corruption, industrial advisers to protect essential industries, and medical boards to decide questionable physical cases.

Appeal Board Planned

Local men familiar with the community and its citizens will make the classifications. An appeal board will hear classification protests. A further appeal to the President will be possible, but difficult.

Finally, after all Class 1 (A) registrants are reported, national headquarters will issue a general call for men—probably 400,000 in the first class for compulsory training. That quota will be distributed locally in proportion to the number of Class 1 (A) registrants in each locality.

Some 22 days after registration, according to the 1933 schedule, the registrants will be called to concentration centers in the order by which they were selected by lottery.

And Johnny will be in the Army then.

These Cards May Be Common Sight Soon

choice of independence or annexation to an American nation.

Independence or restoration of a colony to its original sovereignty was declared a firm intention of the projected trusteeship but the proposal did not provide for a colony to become annexed by an American republic.

This apparently conflicted with Secretary Hull's declaration Monday that there was no thought of absorbing any of these territories or of permitting any nation to acquire a "special interest" in them.

Economic proposals to implement Secretary Hull's outlined methods of bolstering economy were studied closely by experts of various delegations.

Suggestions already before the committee, although their contents were guarded closely, were believed to leave much detail to be filled in after expert consultations. It was expected that any plans adopted here would be merely a framework with detailed negotiations to follow among the various governments.

Increased lending power and freedom of action on loans, recommended for the Import-Export Bank by President Roosevelt, was understood to figure largely in the United States plans for dealing with the export surpluses problem.

Whether the cartel project announced by the President some time ago entered directly into the economic plans was uncertain. But if the cartel plan itself had been laid aside because of some objections that it was impractical, it was clear that United States experts were devising some method of relieving burdened countries of excess products.

George S. Messersmith, United States Ambassador to Cuba, issued another warning before the International Lions Convention today of the "insidious attack on the unity, security and peace of the American republics."

Already, he said, this attack had developed into direct efforts by European states "to interfere with the internal policy and external policy of American states."

Declaring the "security and peace which we have so long enjoyed is now definitely and imminently threatened," Messersmith, who maintains close contact with the United States delegation at the conference, warned Latin American nations against adopting an "egotistic attitude" which "weakens the structure of defense and security of this hemisphere as a whole."

Dominated local tobacco boards of trade and the Tobacco Association of the United States in order to control the marketing of tobacco favorably to the companies and to deny growers substantial bargaining power.

Attempted to eliminate competition among the big firms in the purchasing of tobacco, to the detriment of growers of 500,000 farms in the Southern States.

Fixed factory prices in order to charge "unreasonably high and monopolistic prices," to eliminate competition on the sales end.

Pursued a common policy of dominating 750,000 retail outlets that sell the 171,000,000,000 cigarettes produced annually by the industry, the purpose of this domination being to protect the products of the Big Four and Philip Morris against competition from other tobacco products.

Carried out this domination by maintaining "preferred lists" of distributors and other devices.

Forced many stores, by means of high-powered advertising, to carry popular brands of cigarettes and at prices specified by the companies.

"Bottleneck" Charged

The Justice Department found that the effect of all these devices had been to create a "bottleneck" in the tobacco industry, whereby a few companies controlled an industry supporting millions of people, unduly lowered the income of growers and kept "from consumers, the benefits which otherwise would flow from free, vigorous and normal competition."

passage of the bill lest the United States find itself "too late and with too little, as have some in Europe."

He declared conscription is "the best means to keep us out of trouble; it is democratic, and will be beneficial to our young men, by making them more public-minded and aware of the obligations of citizenship rather than its rights."

In answer to a question, the Army chief said he favored some form of compulsory military service as a permanent thing. The pending Burke-Wadsworth bill would continue such training only until 1945.

Camps in Four Months

Col. A. L. Twaddle, chief of the mobilization branch of the General Staff, who preceded Gen. Marshall, said it would take the Army four months to prepare camps for the men to be drafted, except in the South, where tents could be used. Marshall, however, said the Army was ready to act within 24 hours after the bill passes, and can begin the training October 1.

Col. Twaddle said that under the conscription plan, 930,000 men would be under arms October 1—400,000 draftees, 300,000 in the Regular Army, and 230,000 in the mobilized National Guard. By April, the total would be 1,415,000, consisting of an additional 400,000 drafted men, 75,000 more Regulars and 10,000 more Guardsmen. In October, 1941, the Army would total 2,040,000 men, including 600,000 more draftees and 25,000 more Regulars.

By May 15, 1945, Col. Twaddle said, the United States would have a well trained army of 3,000,000, including reserves.

Provide for Rehiring

An amendment has been prepared by the department which declares it the "intent and purpose of Congress' that every man called for service should be reemployed unless the employer's circumstances make it impossible or unreasonable, and also provides for a Government reemployment bureau to aid men to get jobs.

Maj. L. B. Hershey suggested Congress might "set an example" for other employers by guaranteeing reemployment to Federal workers called.

Meanwhile, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared his opposition to the conscription measure, contending the Army could obtain sufficient men by voluntary methods. He called the draft "contrary to the fundamental principles of democracy and our American way of life" and predicted Democrats who support it will be "driving nails into their political coffins."

At the same time, Secretary of the Navy Knox told his press conference the Navy had under discussion with the defense commission, a plan to bring skilled mechanics in the interior to shipbuilding centers, rather than train unskilled men near shipyards.

Otto of Hapsburg Certain Hitler Will Be Defeated

Archduke Otto, 27-year-old head of the House of Hapsburg, yesterday expressed unshaken confidence in victory for democratic forces in Europe and restoration of an Austro-Hungarian monarchy in a post-Hitler Europe.

The handsome young claimant to the nonexistant Austro-Hungarian throne said he saw no contradiction between monarchy and democracy. He was interviewed at the Capitol during a visit with Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Austria is "totally" opposed to the Hitler regime, he stated, and has the best organized underground anti-Nazi movement in all the area under German domination.

Means of establishing unified action among the 21 American republics to resist any foreign efforts to influence American policies were studied.

An example cited was a recent German note to Central American republics described as seeking to influence them against Havana conference action which might be considered unfriendly toward Germany.

Lack of accord between the United States and the Argentine delegation on some problems was indicated today but it was believed it had not reached a stalemate.

After a private talk last night between Secretary Hull and Leopoldo Melo, head of the Argentine delegation, it was learned that further conversations were planned apparently in the hope of reconciling any differences outside the conference meetings.

Secretary Hull and other members of a subcommittee were busy drafting proposals dealing with European possessions in this hemisphere into one document. Those proposals were said to conform generally with Secretary Hull's idea of a collective trusteeship over any imperiled colony, but there were minor divergencies new Heinkel-113 fighter and even American aircraft captured by the Germans from the French.

"Antiaircraft gunners saw a Dornier-17 and a Dornier-215 crash after they fired at them. The Dornier-17 was caught by searchlights over the northwest coast of England at 3 a. m. and one battery reported that 'our second burst pushed its tail up.'

"The enemy aircraft then fell into a dive . . . burst into flames and crashed eight miles from the gunners who had brought it down.

"In the second antiaircraft success on the south coast our gunners saw their shells hit a Dornier-215 and watched it crash into the sea."

The Dornier airplane plant said to have been "partially destroyed" was at Wenzendorf, Germany.

This plant turns out the famous "flying pencil" and other types of planes which have staged repeated bombing attacks on Britain.

Salvoes of high explosives fell on the buildings and others struck sheds hidden in an adjoining woods," it was stated.

"Direct hits with four heavy bombs on the main factory buildings started a large fire and caused an explosion whose force could be felt by the crew (of a British attacking plane) flying several thousand feet above the target."

Two Mosquito Craft Hit

Special interest was aroused by an admiralty statement that a British patrol boat had turned back six German torpedo motor boats—first known to have approached the British coast.

An indication that the zero hour of the Nazi invasion attempt may be at hand was seen in this unsuccessful thrust at the British coast.

"In the course of a patrol carried out in the English Channel in the early hours this morning, one of our motor torpedoboats sighted and engaged six enemy motor torpedoboats," the admiralty said.

"The enemy made off at high speed and escaped in the darkness. One enemy boat had a searchlight put out of action and it is thought that casualties were inflicted on another.

"Our motor torpedoboat received no damage or casualties."

Although there was no up-to-date figures on these German craft, it was recalled that before the war Germany had completed a number of 62-ton boats and since then was understood to have been building 90-ton boats, all armed with 19.7-inch torpedo tubes with a maximum speed of 36 knots.

The British, at the beginning of the war, had a design for motorboats of 32 tons with a speed of considerably more than 40 knots, an armament of two 21-inch torpedo tubes, two antiaircraft guns and 12 machine guns. Before the war they cruised into the Mediterranean under their own power.

It was announced that a British airplane torpedoed a German naval escort unit of the Koenigin Luise class, 600 tons, in the North Sea.

Besides the attack at Wenzendorf, the air ministry said that Royal Air Force planes had bombed severely aircraft factories at Gotha and Kassel and also had attacked oil depots at Hamburg and Gelsenkirchen.

The British raiders loosened dozens of bombs on German and Dutch communications and freight yards, it was said. Oil tanks at Flushing, Holland, docks at Amsterdam and harbor patrol boats at the French port of Dunkerque were bombed.

A country manison in southeast England was machine gunned by a low-swooping German raider last night, it was reported, but the only damage was that of broken windows.

The same Nazi plane dropped 19 bombs in open country while antiaircraft guns blazed into action and British defense planes went into the air, finally driving the raider in flight through the clouds.

Another raider dropped two bombs on a residential district on the south coast without casualties.

The Air Ministry meanwhile reported what it called a German ruse staged off the English coast when a Nazi Dornier flying boat was forced down at sea after a battle with a British Lockheed.

The Dornier's signaled the British fliers in English: "One wounded," then took to a rubber boat.

The Lockheed sped back to its base and dispatched a fast launch to the rescue. When the launch arrived, however, it was subjected to an attack by a German plane, the Air Ministry said, adding that no trace was found of the rubber boat.

Rumania Seizes British-Owned Oil

Petroleum May Fall To Germans; Envoys To Meet With Hitler

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, July 24.—Rumania's pro-Nazi government took over operation of the country's largest oil company tonight, thereby placing huge stocks of British-produced petroleum within reach of Germany's mechanized forces.

Orders placing the $15,000,000 Astra-Romana Corporation under a national oil commissioner with full powers over production and distribution came a few hours before the departure of Premier Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Manoilescu for a conference with Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop at Salzburg.

A communique announced that Gigurtu and Manoilescu would proceed directly to Rome for conversations with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Ciano after the Salzburg meeting.

Strengthening Axis Ties

An officially inspired editorial in the government-controlled press tomorrow will say that the "basic idea" of these visits is the "preservation of peace in the Balkans and Danube Basin . . . Rumania's ties with Germany and Italy will become ever stronger."

An indication that Rumania is moving rapidly to improve relations with Russian before the Salzburg conference was seen in a report that Russia has agreed to the appointment of Grigore Gafencu as Minister to Moscow.

Large quantities of oil in storage will become available to Germany under the new arrangement. Because of previous refusal of British and Dutch companies to ship oil to Germany, and because of the closure of the Mediterranean export route by Italy's entrance into the war, vast oil stores have accumulated.

Guard Against Sabotage

Today's action coincided with publication here of the German White Book purporting to expose Franco-British plans ot wreck wells and refineries rather than permit Germany to get the oil.

Tonight Rumanian army sentries continued to guard the oil fields against sabotage. British sources said the expected the next move would be to requisition scores of British owned or chartered Danube barges to provide additional transport facilities for Germnay.

In justification of today's seizure, a Government order asserted that the company had failed to supply "information on production" required by law.

U. S. Interests Not Affected

[The Astra Romana Co., whose daily oil production exceeds 3,500 tons, was said by officials to be under Dutch control, although British interests hold much of its stock, the United Press reported.]

United States oil men said the government's action does not directly affect American interests, but creates a precedent which might be used against any oil company.

Last week the government removed an important obstacle to Germany's efforts to get oil by commandeering all tank cars and earmarking for German use 3,000 of them—a third of the whole supply.

Previously transport had been crippled because Germany was required to furnish its own tank cars.

of brief duration. The forecaster predicted today would be warmer than yesterday when the mercury reached 89 degrees at 2:50 p. m. Humidity at times reached 58 per cent.

According to the United States Engineers Office, which operates the District aqueduct system, over Monday and Tuesday a daily total of more than 150,000,000 gallons of water were filtered at the Dalecarlia and McMillan filteration plants.

Exceeding by 7,000,000 gallons the previous record of July 4, 1938, consumption neared the capacity daily output of 155,000,000 gallons.

While no shortage is expected, Engineer Office officials said an enlargement of the Capital's water supply, as recently recommended by the Commissioners, is needed.

France Orders Trial of Men Who Led Her Into War

Daladier and Others Already Confined To Marseille; Leaders Accused of Ignorance And Ineptitude by Petain Minister

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, July 24.—The authoratarian regime of conquered France, in a dramatic statement declaring "on the day of their trial our dead will be present among the accusers," solemnly pledged punishment tonight for the men who "plunged our country into war."

Speaking in the name of the government of Marshal Phillippe Petain, Minister of Interior Marquet denounced in a nation-wide broadcast the men he termed responsible for declaring war against Germany and assured his hearers the guilty soon would be tried.

His address came shortly after it was revealed that former Premier Daladier and 16 other former government leaders or members of parliament were confined to Marseille.

Accused of Ignorance

Dramatically the minister exclaimed:

"In the name of justice those responsible for so much political ineptness and military ignorance will be punished."

He described the men who must be punished as "those who plunged our country into war at a time when it was not prepared to fight."

When the German army attacked, he said, "a spent political, economic and social organization collapsed over your heads.

"We are buried under the ruins of a liberal parliamentary capitalist regime.

"You have lived on lies. The hour of truth now has sounded."

Marquet frankly admitted there is more order now in the occupied zone than in the unoccupied. This will be rectified, he promised, when the throngs of refugees have been returned to their homes.

He estimated the refugees in the unoccupied zone at 1,500,000 Belgians and 4,000,000 French.

Return Hastened

The government is hastening their return, he said. The first to return will be public employes of towns, cities and departments; then farmers, businessmen and industrial managers, then the people in general.

Daladier and the others facing trial were confined to Marseille "pending investigation" when they arrived yesterday from French Morocco where they had gone June 20, two days before the signing of the armistice.

Home on the Range is Safer

Each Nazi Bomb Hitting British Urban Center Kills or Injures 3 Persons, Minister Warns

London, July 24 (INS).—Every German bomb that has dropped in the urban areas of England has, "on the average, killed or injured three people," Minister of Health Malcolm MacDonald declared today in urging Britons to evacuate the metropolises unless their presence in the cities is necessary.

Revealing that 220,000 children have been evacuated from London and other big cities during the past week, MacDonald told a luncheon meeting of the national defense and public interests committee:

"It is actually 15 times safer to be in a reception (country) area than in an evacution (metropolitan) area."

[MacDonald, the Associated Press reported, said a well balanced wartime meal would be 4 ounces of bread, two-thirds of an ounce of oatmeal, half an ounce of fats, 5 ounces of potatoes, 2 ounces of green vegetables and one-fifth of a pint of milk.

[The menu of the luncheon included hors d'oeuvres, chicken, sherbet and coffee.]

Saw Mine Kill Husband

London, July 24 (AP).—Mrs. Tess Johnson, waited happily on a quay to greet her husband and son-in-law, who were coming home on the naval trawler Campina.

The British woman was glad for her daughter's sake, as well as her own, for her son-in-law was coming home to see his wife and 9-month-old child.

From the shore Mrs. Johnson could see her husband in the wheelhouse of the trawler. She smiled at him and waved.

A moment later the craft hit an enemy mine. Johnson and his son-in-law were killed.

The trawler's loss was announced yesterday.

Drought Threat in Canada

Ottawa, Ontario, July 24 (INS).—A wee nip may be hard to find in Canada for the duration of the war and the period of demobilization, if a move started today by the Canadian temperance union is successful.

Holding that restriction of the use of alcoholic beverages was necessary to safeguard the National interest, the union urged that the provincial government clamp down on both the manufacture and movement of liquor until the war ends.

In the first World War, the Dominion government took such measures.

Rich Baron Prisoner

Alexandria, Egypt, July 24 (AP)—Friends of Baron Jean Empain, of Belgium, one of the world's wealthiest men and husband of Rozazella Rowland, a former Brooklyn dancer, said today they have received word that he was wounded while fighting in Belgium and now is held as a prisoner of war by the Germans in Brussels.

Miss Ethel Fuss, Salvation Army Officer, Dies

Miss Ethel Fuss, 47, a Salvation Army officer here for 10 years, died of a heart attack Tuesday at Springfield, Mo., it was disclosed here yesterday.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Miss Fuss was a daughter of the late Thomas A. and Zora Fuss. She resigned from the Salvation Army here in 1936 to go as a missionary to China, where she remained until recently. At the time of her death she was connected with the Gospel Publishing House, Springfield, Mo.

Surviving is one brother, Carlyle Fuss, of Oakland, Calif.

D. C. Dentist Heads Defense Committee

Appointment of Dr. C. Thurston Ferebee, of Washington, as chairman of a national defense committee of the National Dental Association was announced yesterday.

Among other duties, the committee is charged with responsibility for compilation of a list of the Nation's colored dentists eligible for military service.

Other Washington dentists on the committee are Drs. J. C. Brazier, H. C. Edwards, R. A. Dixon and N. R. Dean.

Questionaires covering qualifications and military experience are to be mailed 2,000 colored dentists throughout the country. Washington dentists not receiving forms are asked to communicate with Dr. Ferebee at 1809 Second street northwest.

Planes for Britain To Be Increased

3,000 a Month Reported Approved By Morgenthau

London, July 24 (AP).—Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aviation production, declared in a broadcast tonight that the United States will approve a production plan to supply Great Britain with 3,000 planes a month.

He said, moreover, that since his ministry was formed May 14 Britain had purchased 12,115 airplane engines from the United States.

Lord Beaverbrook said Morris Wilson, head of the British aircraft purchasing mission in the United States, had informed him of American acceptance of the production plan, and that that word came from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

U. S. Qualifies Approval

(Defense officials in Washington explained yesterday that they had approved a British request that this country provide 3,000 planes a month, above the present program, beginning early in 1941 if it could be accomplished, but said that was the extent of the commitment.

(The request was made by Arthur Purvis, of the British purchasing commission, at a conference with William Knudsen, of the Defense Commission, and Army and Navy officials. The American officials agreed to undertake a survey to determine whether the request could be met.)

"It is our purpose, by every means we can develop and every device we can adopt, to give our air force bigger and better advantages when we come to grips with the enemy," Lord Beaverbrook said.

He added Britain's own aircraft production reached a record production last week, and that the output so far for this month was double that of the same period a year ago.

Await "Trial by Fire"

"If we are put to trial by fire we think we can demonstrate that workers in the aircraft industry will not fail you.

"At our posts we will stay on duty, we will stand at our benches, we will meet and defeat the enemy who tries to drive liberty from the land of freedom."

The minister said the new American plane production would begin "immediately." He did not reveal how many, if any, of the American engines had been delivered.

"I have just received a telephone message," he said, "from Morris Wilson, who is the agent of the aircraft ministry in the United States and Canada.

"He is authorized by Mr. Morgenthau to say to me that the United States Government will approve a plan to put into immediate production airplanes for our account up to a total output of 3,000 per month.

To Start Immediately

"These plans will be developed without delay. This is in addition to our present American program."

He thanked British housewives for their contributions of aluminum pots for the aircraft industry, "and also those American friends who give generously, for America is very necessary to us."

"Our own aircraft industry always has been reinforced in its labors by the American manufacturers," he continued. "Since this ministry was formed, we have purchased in America 12,115 engines for airplanes. Most of the aircraft frames will be built in Britain, and the American engines will be fitted here.

"The types of engines we have are both powerful and modern—tried and tested in many a long journey across the American Continent, reliable in cloud and storm and in ice and snow.

Will "Fortify" Empire

"The immense supply of engines through America will fortify the resistance and strengthen the endurance of these Empire children—the men and women of the aircraft factories.

"But our real source of supply depends, as always, on our home production. . . . The week just out was a record production, and the July output of aircraft and engines is more than double the output of last July."

Funeral Is Held For Dr. E. R. Casto

Emory, Va., July 24 (AP).—Funeral services for Dr. Earl Ray Casto, 56, professor of geology and geography at Emory and Henry College, were conducted today at the college, with burial in the Emory Cemetery. Dr. Castro died at his home here yesterday.

A native of Ruraldale, W. Va., he held bachelor of science and master of science degrees from West Virginia Wesleyan College. He had served as professor of chemistry and biology at West Virginia Wesleyan, superintendent of schools at Thomas, W. 2 Archenemies of Nazis Fall Into German Hands in Paris

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, July 24.—Otto Strasser, archfoe of Nazism whom Heinrich Himmler has accused of organizing the Munich bomb plot against Adolf Hitler's life, and Herschel Grynszpan, the young German-Polish Jew whose act of assassination precipitated the November, 1938, anti-Semetic riots in Germany, have fallen into Nazi hands in Paris, a well-informed German told me today.

Authorities declined comment, but my informant was in France at the time the Germans took over.

He said Grynszpan was found in La Sante Prison, awaiting trial for killing Ernst vom Rath, German diplomat, in the latter's Paris office November 7, 1938. He now is held for trial by German authorities on a murder charge. Another anti-Nazi of note, the author Hermann Rauschning, was said to have escaped to London.

A Founder of Nazi Party

A founder of the Nazi Party, Strasser broke with Hitler in 1930 and formed an opposition "Black Front." His brother, Gregor, stayed with the Fuehrer, and died in the 1934 blood purge.

Strasser fled to country after country, always waging his campaign. His Black Front newspaper, Deutsche Revolution, was smuggled into Germany by the thousands of copies; his secret radio station dinned forbidden propaganda into German ears. He was expelled from Greece and Switzerland and jailed in Czecho-Slovakia, but he always got away. Finally he entered France.

After Hitler had narrowly escaped death in the Burgerbrauhaus explosion in Munich last November 8, Gestapo Himmler declared Srasser had organized the plot, helped with money from the British Intelligence Service.

Reprisals Swept Reich

Strasser charged that Himmler, himself, had organized the bomb plot.

Violent anti-Jewish disorders swept Germany the day after Grynszpan shot Vom Rath in Paris. Jewish stores were smashed and looted in many cities and synagogues were burned. German Jewry was assessed $400,000,000 in collective fines.

Grynszpan's trial was delayed, although his aunt and uncle received prison sentences for sheltering him. After the war started the youth tried without success to get out of prison to join the French army, to "kill some more Germans."

He said he killed Vom Rath to protest against the fate of his family, expelled from Germany to Poland.

Elkton Remains Largest In Rockingham County

Special Dispatch to The Post

Elkton, Va., July 24.—Elkton retains its rank as Rockingham's largest town, passing the 1,000 population mark, according to preliminary reports of the census. The actual count was 1,050 a gain of 85 over preliminary figures of 1930. Bridgewater gained 38 to have a population of 969, and retain its rank as the second largest town.

O'Conor Waits Request For Labor Board Inquiry

Annapolis, July 24 (AP).—Gov. O'Conor said late today he had not received a formal request from Delegate John C. Luber (Democrat), Fifth District, Bltimore, for an investigation of the State employment commissioner's office.

Luber had announced earlier in Baltimore that he had written Gov. O'Conor asking an official inquiry into allegations of discrimination and arbitrary methods in the department, headed by Commissioner Harry C. Jones.

Luber said he wished to learn if all applicants for State jobs are given an equal opportunity. He asserted he had found a number of circumstances indicating they were not.

Italian Navy ClaimsRevenge On Australians

Cruiser, Submarine Reported Sunk; Air Raid Alarm Sounds in Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, July 24.—The Italian navy claimed today to have taken a measure of revenge for the sinking of the Bartolomeo Colleoni by the Australian cruiser Sydney. A war bulletin says:

"Our submarines in the Eastern Mediterranean sank an Australian destroyer and a submarine."

No details of the naval action were given.

The same bulletin claims that deposits in Malta were set ablaze during the latest of the 80 or more air raids on that island. It also mentions an air raid alarm, second of the war, in Rome. The communique said:

"Following an alarm signal given at Gaeta (about 75 miles southwest of Rome on the coast) the antiaircraft batteries of Rome went into action, laying down barrages two times."

Two were killed and four wounded by shell fragments. One of the unexploded antiaircraft shells dropped in the garden of an American diplomat.

The chief interest here at the moment is in Balkan developments, since it seems fairly certain the attack on Britain will not take place until the German conversations with the Bulgarians and Rumanians are over.

It was emphasized here again today in "Italian political circles" that the keynote of Rome's policy is to maintain peace in the Balkans and prevent a spread of the conflict.

Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu, of Rumania, will come to Rome Saturday after their conversations at Salzburg, Germany.

Dies of Battle Wounds

Alexandria, Egypt, July 24 (AP).—Capt. Umberto Navaro, commander of the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni, which was sunk in battle last Friday, died of wounds today and was buried with British naval honors.

Rotary Head Urges Club Coordination

Lexington, Va., July 24 (AP).—Rotarians of the 186th District of Rotary were advised by District Gov. Dowell Howard, of Winchester, today to strive for the coordination of all clubs within their communities engaged in civic betterment.

Such coordination, he said at an afternoon meeting which terminated a district assembly, should save time and effort for all clubs.

The question of community service was the topic of the afternoon session, held in Washington and Lee University's law building.

Members agreed to meet next at Winchester in the spring of 1941.

Too Much Rain Reported in Va. Tobacco Area

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP). Crops in Virginia showed general improvement last week although some reports from the flue-cured tobacco section indicated there was too much rain, it was announced today in the weekly weather and crop report of the Virginia Department of Agriculture.

Crops in the southeastern area of the State, where it had been very dry, showed greater improvement than most sections.

Ample rainfall was reported in most areas with heaviest showers reported at Dale Enterprise, with a total of 1.89 inches, Clarksville with 2.59, and Williamsburg with 1.5. Light precipitation for the week was reported from Norfolk, with only a trace.

German Propaganda Prepares Public for Attack on Britain

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 24.—The voice of German propaganda rose tonight above the roar of bombers over England in intense, psychological preparation for what the Reich expects to be the total onslaught.

The air force, deadly striking arm of this prelude to the real battle for Britain, struck with new fury at Britain and her sea-borne commerce.

Even as new German bombs fell, however, dispatches from German-occupied Holland said five persons were killed and many injured last night in a British air raid on Amersfort, heart of the invaded Dutch defense system, with two others killed at a town north of Amsterdam.

Leaders Called "Criminals"

Of Germany's own air exploits, the high command reported 31,000 tons of British commercial shipping destroyed in the last 48 hours and a British submarine, minesweeper and two patrol boats sunk.

Vitriolic denunciation of the British ruling class poured into the ears of radio listeners. The official broadcaster excoriated England's leaders as "vermin equipped with umbrellas and top hats," a "pack of criminals."

These "plutocrats," he said, were a voracious rabble who sent their children to Canada while millions of others suffered from malnutrition.

Likens Halifax to Beck

The official broadcaster likened Foreign Minister Lord Halifax's firm rejection of any peace talk to similar defiant statements by Foreign Minister Beck, of Poland, before the fall of that nation.

"Reynaud (former Premier Paul Reynaud, of France) also used these big words," he said.

The German press supplemented this drive to enrage the populace against England. A London Times editorial approving British bombing of German cities was widely cited as "evidence that England gloats over war on helpless women and children."

Roosevelt Needed, Wallace Declares

'Only Man for Job,' Running Mate Says, In Reply to Willkie

Chicago, July 24 (INS).—Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, was on his way to Washington tonight after refusing to give any hint of his campaign plans "until I have seen the President."

During his stay in Chicago, where he addressed the National Committee for Agriculture, a group of 50 farmers representing 13 States, the Secretary of Agriculture dodged political questions except to take sharp issue with Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential nominee, in the latter's declaration that Mr. Roosevelt was "not indispensable."

Without mentioning Willkie by name, Wallace said:

"The President is absolutely unique. It is incredible that he is so much needed. His knowledge of international statecraft and of internal affairs, from the standpoint of national unity and national defense, make him the only man."

To the farmers, sitting in their shirtsleeves because of the intense heat, Wallace said:

"The only road to peace is through preparedness. We must have such preparedness, military, economic and social, that it will command the fear and respect of every aggressor nation. There is no other road to peace."

It was the first speech by Wallace since his nomination in Chicago last week. In it some of his listeners thought they discerned his belief that war for the United States is almost inevitable.

He warned them that "the wolf may be at the door, but I hope not," and went on to say that agriculture in this country is well prepared for another war.

"We have an abundance of food products," he said. "We don't have to plow up the grass lands this time as we did in 1917."

Justice Laws Orders Inquiry In Contempt

this to escape from that country during the Bolshevik revolution.

The first two of the telegrams reached Judiciary Square yesterday morning shortly before Justice Laws was to open court to hear the Government's motion to dismiss the suit against Secretary Hull. One of them said:

"Mr. Baldwin, secretary of the American Civil Liberties Union, just phoned me regarding passport case which you will hear today. Much preliminary study has been put on this case by the union and they are steadfastly of the opinion that the ladies involved are American citizens. It seems that the State Department's attitude has been a little far fetched, especially now that these women are being held in German concentration camps. This case is particularly interesting because as I understand it of being a precedent. Perhaps some temporary relief could be afforded pending final investigation. Minimum surety bond could be required I anxiously await your decision.

"DAVID CUSHMAN COYLE,
"Cosmos Club."

Coyle said he never heard of the case, that he did not send the telegram and that he authorized nobody to use his name. In New York, Roger Baldwin, Civil Liberties Union director, denied he or the organization was interested in the case, and stated his own investigation.

Justice Laws read just far enough to see that the message was about a case before him and returned the telegram to Mrs. Gertrude Cave, his secretary, with directions to hold any other such message that might be received and not to give them to him.

Upholds Government

Justice Laws opened the hearing by stating what had happened and suggesting that he might be disqualified to proceed. Assistant District Attorney William S. Tarver and the petitioner's counsel, Attorney James J. Laughlin, said they did not think so and asked Justice Laws to proceed.

Justice Laws then upheld the Government's contention that the courts have no power to compel the Secretary of State to issue passports. However, he postponed final action so that counsel could amend the complaint to ask for a declaratory judgment that Mrs. Rubinowicz and Mrs. Giegerich were citizens.

The justice said he was sending copies of the telegrams to both Laughlin and Tarver for investigation and contempt proceedings if the evidence required it.

Friends of Women Warned

Attorney Laughlin said that he had warned friends and sympathizers of the two interned women that although they might address any appeals to Government officials, they must not address the court. He was retained, he said, by Miss Alax Tillo of Beverly Beach, Calif., a sister of the women.

During the proceedings four more telegrams were brought to the jurist. The purported signers of these were Rabbi Jacob A. Dubrow, of 339 M street northwest; John B. Kelly, of Philadelphia; Rabbi Harry Bornstein, of Philadelphia, Elbert Lenrow, of Philadelphia, and Charles C. Livingston, president, Carver Manufacturing Co., Washington. Kelly, who is chairman of the Philadelphia Democratic city committee, branded his signature as a "phony," and at Rabbi Dubrow's home here his daughter said the clergyman "had nothing to do with it."

Also due to be questioned were those whose names were signed to the ten telegrams received at District Attorney Curran's office. They were Edwin T. Kane, 1743 Irving street northwest; F. Vanness Persons, Bellvue Hotel; Rabbi Jacob Tarshish, Washington; the Rev. Jacob Tarshish, 5813 North Thirtenth street, Philadelphia; William E Greenfield, New York City; Harold R. Horn, Philadelphia; Mrs. Edward Hamlin Everett, 2304 Massachusetts avenue northwest; John T. Rogers, 1310 Connecticut avenue; Rabbi Samuel Fredman, Philadelphia, and Elbert Lenrow, Philadelphia.

Located in New York City, Greenfield, a furrier, said he had wired District Attorney Curran as a "private citizen" who was interested in seeing citizens of the United States be given "the same consideration as the refugees." Horn, who is associated with Prudential Insurance Co. of America, denied sending any telegram.

U. S. Charges Cult Sold 'Immortality'

"alias Joan of Arc, Jesus and Lotus Ray King." The son was identified as Edona Eros Ballard, his true name, and also "Lafayette."

Norman Neukom, assistant United States Attorney who presented the case to the grand jury said the "I am" cultists had collected close to $3,000,000 since the movement's inception in 1930.

The indictment accused the defendants of falsely representing that Guy Ballard "had attained a supernatural state of self-immortality, which condition enabled him to conquer disease, death, old age, poverty and misery," and bring forth money and riches.

On the contrary, said the true bill, Ballard died here last December 29 after an operation.

It was charged that the same representations were made as to Ballard's wife and son and that the three and other defendants claimed the Ballards could transmit this supernatural state "to others willing to pay therefor."

Sex continence was urged on the "I Am" followers, the indictment asserted, despite the fact that many of them "were happily married persons of normal condition."

In consequence, many followers separated and divorced, the indictment charged.

Others indicted, with bonds set at $1,000 to $2,500, included Sallie Bressler, Washington, D. C. leader; Bond Bressler, also of Washington; Stanley Conrad and Mrs. Ada Cox Fisher, Washington staff workers.

Johnson Urges Defense Speed

The United States needs an industry capable of producing military equipment for 1,000,000 men every three months, Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, said yesterday.

The statement was made after Johnson had appeared before the House Appropriations Deficiency subcommittee to urge speedy approval of President Roosevelt's $4,848,000,000 estimates to carry out plans for "total defense."

District Student Wins Scholarship

James Irwin Porter, 2712 Thirty-sixth street northwest, has been awarded a John McMullen regional scholarship in engineering at Cornell University, it was announced yesterday.

Porter, a graduate of Central High School, was a member of the National Honor Society, the track team and cocaptain of the football team.

The award was made by the faculty of the college of engineering at Cornell, with the advice of a regional committee, of which Creed W. Fulton, Washington, is chairman.

New Trial Ordered For 'Gimp' Snyder

San Francisco, July 24 (AP).—The California Supreme Court ordered a new trial today for Martin (The Gimp) Snyder, convicted of attempting to murder Myrl Alderman, his successor as husband of Ruth Etting, radio singer.

The Supreme Court ruled that the Los Angeles Trial Court committed prejudicial error in charging the jury in Snyder's trial. Snyder, now in San Quentin Prison, was accused of shooting Alderman, accompanist to Miss Etting. The two were married during Snyder's trial.

Sending Ships For Children Held Legal

Rep. Bloom Declares Neutrality Law Doesn't Ban Mercy Vessels

Dispatch of American ships to bring refugee children from England to this country will not require amendment of the Neutrality Act, Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, asserted yesterday.

The committee will open hearings at 10:30 a. m. today on bills introduced by Representatives Hennings (Democrat), of Missouri, and Celler (Democrat), of New York. Each amends the Neutrality Act to permit American ships to enter the war zone and bring back children, providing belligerent governments agree to give the vessels safe conduct.

Bloom, who sponsored the Neutrality Act in the House, contended that the President now has the power to send unarmed ships into the danger zone to aid in evacuating refugees.

Although stating that he will "go along" with the committee if a majority is favorable to the proposed amendment, Bloom termed such a measure "a very serious question."

The British government has not yet indicated willingness to assume responsibility for the project, he pointed out, while Ambassador Kennedy has expressed opposition to the plan.

Sinking of an American ship, loaded with refugee children, "would make every man in this country want to grab a gun," Bloom said.

Mass Migration Imminent

New York, July 24 (AP).—The United States Committee for the Care of European Children announced today that London developments had cleared the way for an immediate "mass migration" of English children—rich and poor alike—to this country.

Cablegrams said that space for 1,000 children had been allotted in ships bound for North American ports within the next few weeks.

Committee Chairman Marshall Field ordered committee representatives in London to make sure that the group would be a "representative cross-section of children, including those of poorer families."

The committee also cleared 1,000 visas in Washington for "unspecified" children and announced they should be issued in London tomorrow.

$315,000 Back Wages to Go To Lumbermen

Result of Campaign On Violators of Fair Labor Standards Act

By the Associated Press

Lumber workers of the Nation will receive more than $315,000 in back wages as result of a drive by the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department to force the lumber industry to comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator, said the drive inaugurated a month ago had shown about 800 violations of the act but added lumbermen were cooperative in correcting unwitting violations and in the main wanted to obey the law. He said $262,009 already had been computed as due workers with $53,000 more being figured. Fleming added additional cases nearing completion would add thousands of dollars to the total. The amount already determined he said, would benefit nearly 10,000 workers.

Some Records Inadequate

The Administrator said most lumbermen agreed to pay the additional amounts voluntarily and there were a minimum of court cases with only one criminal action.

Fleming said violations included failure to keep adequate records, falsification of records, sublegal wages and exploitation of child labor.

"In Minnesota our only criminal complaint cited the fact children of 8 years of age were doing hard labor with their families at starvation wages and under slum conditions," Fleming said.

Violator Fined $5,000

The Administrator said this was an extreme case where the violator was fined $5,000 on miscellaneous violations and $5,000 on child labor counts and restitution of $35,000 made to 700 employes.

Figures on the drive for the first month included:

Region 5 (Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland): 430 inspections completed; 196 complying; 94 not covered; 140 in violation; 68 restitution cases involving $31,363 to 1,396 employes; 11 restitution cases pending involving $7,000 to 130 employes; 1 consent decree obtained, 4 pending.

Mexican Labor Demands Voice In Oil Dispute

Unions Expected To Deny Charges Of Sabotage

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, July 24.—Serious economic problems confronting the government in handling the $400,000,000 oil industry expropriated in 1938 from British, Dutch and United States interests were heightened today by demands of labor.

President Lazaro Cardenas, insisting for months on a reorganization of the industry, wrangled with unions and government oil agency executives over the issue.

Executives of the government petroleum agencies also have demanded a reorganization. One was quoted recently as charging the union added unnecessary workers to the pay rolls, and tolerated inefficiency, waste and, in some cases, theft of oil and oil products.

The union's executive committee, today's newspapers said, will demand participation in the drafting of any reorganization plan.

It was reported that the union would direct an open letter to Cardenas asserting that conditions in the industry are not the fault of the workers.

Mexico's chief markets for oil—Italy and Germany—have been cut off by the war, and informed quarters say both countries owe the Mexican government about $4,000,000 for petroleum products shipped before the hostilities started.

The newspaper Excelsior, speaking of the union's open letter, said it would present the points that:

1. Salary scales are below the pre-expropriation period.
2. Government tax receipts from oil are greater than before.
3. Production is greater.
4. Some oil sales, notably those made in New York several months ago, were at 70 cents a barrel, or 13 cents below production cost.

Mexico, so far, has made no financial settlement with any of the companies expropriated except the Sinclair interests.

Snell to Aid Willkie

Potsdam, N. Y., July 24 (AP).—Bertrand H. Snell, former Republican House minority leader, announced today he would reenter politics to work for the election of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate.

Snell retired as Representative from northern New York two years ago to resume private business.

U. S.-Japanese Clash in China Started Over Restaurant Bill

Version as Given by Naval Officials Shows Affair Was More Serious Than Was First Reported; Settlement Progressing, Though

By the United Press

Tsingtao, Shantung Province, China, July 24.—American naval authorities today released their version of this week's quarrel between United States Navy men and Japanese, indicating that the fight was more serious than previously reported.

Meanwhile the United Press learned that the quarrel started in a cafe owned by Carl Meyers, formerly of Salt Lake City. In the fracas, Mrs. Meyers suffered a bruised face and leg and a scratched hand. Windows of the cafe were smashed.

The official United States Navy version of the incident said that two United States bluejackets, a petty officer, a Japanese merchant and a marine, all of whom had been drinking, left a cafe without settling their bills and became involved in a dispute as to who should pay.

The Japanese kicked one of the American sailors and was joined by a number of other Japanese in a general fight. By the time Japanese consular police and an American naval shore patrol arrived, an unruly crowd of Japanese and Chinese had joined in a general attack on the Americans.

Members of the American shore patrol (seamen police kept ashore while sailors are on leave to see that they keep order), who were trying to rescue the two United States bluejackets, were attacked by the crowd which apparently was being incited by a Japanese petty officer.

During the confusion, the report said, a number of altercations apparently took place between members of the American shore patrol and Japanese consular police but details of these fights could not be obtained.

An American patrol officer, in trying to make his way through the crowd, had his uniform torn and was slapped on the face by a Japanese student.

Those who took the most active part in the fight appear to have been Japanese nationals, the report said, adding that nobody was hurt seriously and that negotiations for a settlement of the incident "were proceeding."

Committee Favors D. C. Suffrage

"from the national standpoint," but added that he wanted to study the bill before expressing an opinion.

Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the House Judiciary Committee, said he would back the Sumners resolution when the committee takes it up in special session next Tuesday.

Guyer, who explained that he had favored suffrage for the District for years, said he believed the Sumners "compromise" resolution to be the best solution to the problem.

Two other Republicans joined in the indorsement of the move to bring the suffrage issue to a vote at this session. They were Representatives Bates, of Massachusetts, and Shafer, of Michigan.

Bates said he considered it "ironical" that a city that is larger than many States in population should be deprived of the franchise.

The action of the Democratic Party in putting the suffrage plank in its platform was termed "a break for the District" by Shafer, who predicted that Congress will consider the matter before adjourning.

The question whether the House District Committee will attempt to proceed independently in bringing out a separate local suffrage resolution will be decided upon the return to Washington today of Chairman Randolph.

Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee has suggested that no constitutional amendment is necessary to give Congress authority to delegate local self-government

Star-Spangled Pictures Promised for August

Loew Houses Announce 'Dog Days' Bookings; Roadside, Rained Out, Emulates Father Noah; This, That and the Other About the Theater

STAR-STUDDED ENTERTAINMENT is promised on the Loew screens in Washington for the month of August. Five titles are announced in the list of impending attractions for F street and each is decorated with a grist of potent box-office "names."

BELL

"Boom Town" heads the catalogue, with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr and Claudette Colbert in the stellar roles, supported by Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, Marion Martin, Sara Haden and Frank McGlynn, sr. That, in a manner of speaking, is sneaking up on the luminous effulgence of the roster of players once seen in M.-G.-M.'s film version of Vicki Baum's "Grand Hotel."

"Pride and Prejudice" comes next. This is the picturization of Helen Jerome's dramatization of the Jane Austen novel, in which Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier have the leads, with Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frieda Inescort, Edmund Gwenn, Karen Morley, Marsha Hunt, Heather Angel, Bruce Lester and Melville Cooper leading the support.

Then there will be Lew Ayres and Rita Johnson in "The Golden Fleecing" and W. E. Van Dyke's production of "I Love You Again," latest hilarious farce costarring William Powell and Myrna Loy, assisted by Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe, Donald Douglas, Nella Walker, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer and Pierre Watkins, among numerous others. "Busman's Honeymoon," a detective thriller produced in England, completes the August bookings that will be whacked up among the Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters. Leslie Banks and Seymour Hicks head the cast supporting Robert Montgomery and Constance Cummings in the costellar assignments.

The outlook seems to be less one of dreary "dog days" than dog-gone good ones.

For the first time in its history, the Roadside Theater was forced to cancel a performance on Tuesday night. That thunderous deluge that blew up in the early evening washed out the lighting plant and several of the 13 sets necessary to the presentation of Edgar Wallace's hectic tale of "The Frog." The sets were propped up against an outside shed for "safe keeping." By laboring all night Tuesday and all day yesterday, the Roadsiders were enabled to carry on last night. An audience of 52 that had dared the elements was refunded Tuesday night.

Ten average American citizens, who were screen stars for a day, were in attendance at the world premiere of "The Ramparts We Watch," at RKO-Keith's on Tuesday night. They were C. W. Stowell, Myra Archibald, E. L. McCabe, Marguerite Brown, E. D. Wragge, Alfredo U. Wyss, Richard McCracken, Elliott Reid, David Dean and Julia Kent, all prominent in the nonprofessional cast of the first feature-length picture ever made by the producers of "The March of Time." They are now, once again, just average American citizens. But they had their night of glory.

It is difficult to explain why the names of Gen. John J. "Black Jack" Pershing, Marshal Joffre, Winston Churchill, Hailie Selassie, Benito Mussolini, Hitler, the then Secretary of the Treasury, William Gibbs McAdoo, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and a number of well-known Washingtonians it would be useless to mention now, were omitted from the list of World War celebrities who come back to life in fleeting scenes in "The Ramparts We Watch." But there they are and each receives his deserved outburst of applause or hisses, as the case may be. To view this film is to relive the years of 1914-18 in astonishing detail.

"The Ramparts We Watch," incidentally, furnishes further corroboration of our recent Sunday suggestion that the cinema is retracing almost identically the procedures it followed during the period of the First World War. If things go on as they are, it won't be long now until we will have the 1940 counterpart of the George Creel Committee on Public Information. Maybe we need it.

Free swimming lessons still may be had at the Crystal Pool, out at Glen Echo Park, but the time is getting short. Only eight days remain in which to take advantage of this annual Glen Echo contribution to the safety of the Capital in the water. Pool Director Boyd Hickman makes known that his morning classes number 30; evening, approximately 20. Among the youngsters, he thinks he has a few Johnny Weissmullers in the making.

Ida Lupino Takes Down Hair, Tells All Concerning Career

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, July 24.—Now that she's a full-fledged star with a real hit picture to her credit, Miss Ida Lupino told us today the fantastic story of her arrival in Hollywood.

A few years ago the publishing of the yarn would have made her bosses sore and probably ended her movie career. Now the career is achieved. She's working for another studio. And if the master minds who brought her here gnash their teeth, we think it served 'em right.

"I was in pictures in England in 1932," Miss Lupino began. "One of them was titled 'Money for Speed,' and in it I played a rough, tough gangster's moll, with a whisky voice and a swagger. There was one brief passage in this film in which I was play-acting as a sweet young thing. I was gentle and gracious and wide-eyed for perhaps half a reel in the interests of the plot.

"So somebody representing Paramount Pictures sent to America this one fragment of film, and first thing I know I was in Hollywood to play. Of all things, 'Alice in Wonderland!'

Second-Rate Mae West

"I remember when I walked into the studio. You've never seen people so shocked. I was almost anybody except Alice. They wanted to know if I'd dissipated on the boat, or what. I said I hadn't and had they by any chance seen 'Money for Speed?' They said they'd only seen part of it. So I made them run the whole film and were they amazed! But they said they'd brought me here to do Alice and that they might as well give me the tests. So I made up as 'Alice in Wonderland,' and I'm afraid I gave a very poor imitation of Mae West.

"But the studio had brought me all the way from England. They had to do something with me. So I started playing in pictures which had me a kind of blonde scatter-brain.

"And I guess that's what I was. I certainly wasn't much of an actress. By 1936 Paramount had decided to get rid of me. And I had decided if I ever wanted to get anywhere in pictures, I'd have to learn how to act. I also wanted to lose some weight and let my hair grow back to its natural color.

"The studio handed me a part which was so brief it was an insult. I quit—and we both were happy."

Two Busy Years

Miss Lupino spent the next two years turning her hair from yellow to its natural chestnut, losing the extra pounds that made her face look butterballish, and taking dramatic lessons. She suffered a serious illness, played in several independent pictures, and married Louis Hayward, the actor.

Then she went back to Paramount and appeared there in one picture, "The Light That Failed." She was good, but the picture wasn't.

Warner Brothers thereupon snapped her up under a term contract calling for four pictures a year. The first one, just completed, was "They Drive by Night," a drama of the long-distance truckers, which is destined to be a hit largely because of Ida Lupino's performance.

From a plump-faced blonde who knew little except to look pretty on the screen, she had became a real dramatic actress. She didn't even look like the Ida Lupino who first walked into Paramount eight years ago.

Her next picture is "High Sierra," in which she will costar with Humphrey Bogart. All the other announcements she puts at the publicists' door. These gentlemen have a job to do. They've go to indicate to the movie fans that their Miss Lupino is an actress—not just another blonde.

She's an okay girl—and we hope the press agents are thoroughly successful in retailing the facts about her becoming an actress who can act.

She is beautiful, too.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 24.

When Metro was shooting "Pride and Prejudice," Greer Garson said, "You know who's going to be the star of this picture, don't you? Our cameraman — Karl Freund." She was right—he is. It's beautifully photographed and mounted. Greer's family isn't supposed to be opulent, but only a millionaire could buy the gowns for that family, which consists of five daughters and mother, Mary Boland. Every time they turn 'round, they've got on other creations. They change clothes as often as politicians change their minds. Acting honors go to Greer Garson, Maureen O'Sullivan and Mary Boland. Edna May Oliver billows in like a ship at full sail. And Laurence Olivier, who got my cheers for his performance in "Wuthering Heights," acts about as animated as an angleworm. Boy! He must have been thinking of "Romeo." If I wanted to be mean, instead of the kindly person I am, I might call it "Much Ado About Nothing."

HOPPER

They're thinking of sending out for the police force on George Abbott's set at RKO for "Too Many Girls." The traffic in men is terrific. But that Desi Arnaz gets in his innings just the same. Lucille Ball wasn't working the other day when I paid them a visit, so Arnaz lit on me and asked if I'd like to hear him sing the song that's going to be the hit of the picture. And when I said, "Yes," he played it on his portable machine and stood beside it, mooning about Lucille. The name of it is "You're Nearer." I just acted as stand-in.

I love Earl Carroll's method of giving the gate to one of his pretty girls when she goes overboard on weight. He has the prettiest girls and the finest entertainment for the least money in town. And I like his attitude toward tourists. He makes them feel he's just been waiting to bake a birthday cake for them and sing "Happy Birthday to You." His pretties are weighed in once a week. When they go a pound over, he sends them a box of chocolates. If they continue padding, they get candy daily for a week. At the end of two weeks, they're looking for other jobs.

Wayne Morris says that any likeness between the twins and himself in the picture, "Touchdown," is purely coincidental, and they can't hold him responsible for their faces.

Carole Lombard is so happy that her next picture will be a Norman Krasna story, and praise be to Allah, he's going to let her dress up in it.

Understand Columbia, with two other companies bidding, is paging Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh for "The First Woman Doctor".

A. C. Blumenthal has been down in Mexico for months, trying to promote some theaters down there. But the Germans beat him to it.

If you were lucky enough to hear that first Red Cross broadcast, with Mickey Rooney and scads of stars, you heard Negro Tenor Charles Holland make his debut. Since that time every studio in town has paged him, but Zanuck signed him up. You'll see and hear him first in Jane Withers' next picture. He's already booked for a coast-to-coast concert tour, and the interesting thing to me is that he's received all his musical training from a colored teacher on Central avenue and wouldn't dream of going to anyone else.

Party in Tom May's garden tonight for the Red Cross will boast Lotte Lehmann and Bruno Walter. And here's your chance! Top stars, male and female, will usher you to your seats—maybe slip you an autograph while they're doing it.

The first complete reunion of the Beery family on a film set occurred on location when Noah Beery, sr. and William, oldest brother, now an oil company executive, came to visit Wallace Beery and Noah, jr.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 24.—I will say for Robert Sherwood, 28-year-old producer, that he is getting some mighty big names for "Legacy," the Charles Bonner story. Constance Bennett, who has been waiting for months to make up her mind on a story, yesterday agreed to costar with Warner Baxter. An interesting combination — Bennett and Baxter—two people who know their movies from A to Izzard.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

The role the eldest Bennett plays is that of a French governess who goes to work for an American family. Connie can speak French fluently, and if you don't watch out, she will break into parlez vous Francaise without batting an eyelash. The American family has five sons, and Warner is their father. Nuff sed—you know the rest. Elsa Maxwell has a picturesque and colorful part and is delighted that for once she isn't playing herself. Columbia will release young Sherwood's movie effort which will be awaited with interest.

Lots of news about the Bennetts today. Joan, the baby of the family has been nabbed by Twentieth Century-Fox on a two-picture deal a year. That signing was to be expected after the fine work Joan did in "The Man I Married." Her dramatic performance as the American girl married to a Nazi sent her stock soaring higher than any picture since "Private Worlds." I really don't know any of our established actresses who have improved more this past year than Joan. I used to think of her as just another pretty leading lady, but you can't discount the way she troupes in the Nazi yarn. Joan's initial movie in the new deal will be "Western Union," with Dean Jagger, but first she must make "The Son of Monte Cristo" for Eddie Small.

Although Ginger Rogers' contract has a year and two months to run, the RKO boys have already started negotiations with her for a new deal. Her pictures have been consistent moneymakers and now she is about to start "Kitty Foyle," with that fine director, Sam Woods. Several of Ginger's fans have taken me to task in no uncertain way for my criticism of her. One of them says, "How can you be so mean to a great star and so unfair?" Maybe I was unkind, but I don't think I was unfair, for I was only stating a fact about her actions in Honolulu. I have never in any way criticized her work as an actress, for I consider her a fine actress, and that is why it is too bad that she acted like a silly child, but then we all make mistakes, and there is no use harping on that any longer.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Jane Pickens and Eddy Duchin have kissed and made up. The reconciliation lasted until 3 a. m. at the Beverly Derby; Burns and Allen called the Cocoanut Grove the "Cocoanut Grave" on their program and war was immediately declared with the ambassador saying that Eddy Duchin has really done a better business than any of his predecessors; Greta Garbo and Dr. Gaylord Hauser didn't cause a ripple when they attended "Skylark," Gertrude Lawrence's play; Robert Lowery and Vivian Wilcox, former Earl Carroll beauty, will take an altar march when her divorce becomes final; the cute redhead with "Big Boy" Williams was Patsy Carlstrom, of the Florentine Gardens; Buddy Rogers had two days vacation, so he flew in to see Mary Pickford who met him at the airport bright and early.

The James Roosevelt picture, "Pastor Hall," which was first mentioned in this column, will be previewed Friday night. That's the one for which Mrs. F. D. R. did the narrating; poor little Scotty Beckett had one of his front teeth knocked out riding the surf board at Catalina; Eddie Albert with his former flame, Kathleen Fitz, at the Hollywood Tropics; Andy Devine is heading back from Kansas to meet his wife and they'll start out in a trailer and tour the State exhibiting their jumping horses. Gloria Jean's father, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is well enough to go home; Maureen O'Sullivan and her baby son were guests at tea at the Canadian home of Princess Julianna, who is a refugee there.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

BERNHEIMER'S THEATERS

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 24.

RELIEF: Constantine Oumansky, the Russian Ambassador to this country, came to New York last week and attended the graphic arts exhibit. He was discomforted by the warm weather, and lamented the lack of an air-conditioning system in the exhibit hall . . . "America, such a great, powerful country—and yet no air-conditioning in this place," said Oumansky . . . "Well, does every place in Russia have an air-conditioning system?" he was asked . . . "We had one," he replied, "last year—at the Soviet exhibit at the World's Fair."

NAME: At a recent Hollywood party, a newly arrived guest was introduced to a group assembled in a corner. "This is Richard Rodand her daughter, Ginger Rogers, and this is Buddy Rogers" . . . He and her daughter, Ginger Rogers, and this is Buddy Rogers" . . . He then told the newcomer: "I didn't quite catch your name" . . . "My name," the guest informed, somewhat dishearitedly, "is Rogers—Roy Rogers."

PRIDE: Arnold Schonberg, the composer, has a 2½-year-old son; for whom he made a small fiddle less than 12 inches long . . . The boy was brought before some of Schronberg's friends and began scratching his bow across the home-made fiddle, unfrightened by the strange screechy noises which resulted . . . "Isn't it wonderful?" Schonberg beamed. "An infant—and already he's improving."

ENTERPRISE: Eleanor Roosevelt influenced Jimmy in his decision to abandon his plans to produce "The Bat" for his Globe Productions. Jimmy did not renew his option on this story, which was to have been his first presentation . . . When Lillian Hellman saw Eleanor Roosevelt, the First Lady asked the playwright: "Frankly, what do you think of Jimmy's plan to make 'The Bat?' " . . . "Frankly," said Miss Hellman, "that was disappointing—doing a revival of an old story, as his first picture, when so much is expected of him" . . . "You're quite right," Mrs. Roosevelt agreed. "That's the way I feel about it, too."

SONG: Christopher Morley, who had a best-seller this season—"Kitty Foyle"—and who recently played the Frank Craven role in a summer stock version of "Our Town," is confessing that he also may be included now among the ranks of the songwriters . . . Morley makes this confession in an indirect way. In the Saturday Review of Literature, Columnist P. E. G. Quercus admits that the popularity of Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" has induced him to dig out of the trunk a national anthem he himself had written in 1917 . . . And P. E. G. Quercus is one of the pen names used by Christopher Morley.

ACTION: The War Department in Washington, where form and tradition always have been adhered to, is shedding some of its formality because of William Knudsen. The phone operators and secretaries there, accustomed to stalling with incoming callers until the caller himself, and not his secretary, gets on the phone, already are reconciled to Knudsen's changes. Knudsen calls the War Department himself, and is put through immediately. He never asks for "the Assistant Secretary," nor for "Mr. Louis Johnson." The operators recognize his call: "Is Louis there?"

QUALITY: Larry Adler, who opened at the Waldorf's Starlight roof Monday night, has spent most of the past ten years in touring throughout the world—from Monte Carlo to India, from London to Australia. During his absence from this country, Adler has performed before six rulers, and met some of the most eminent personages in the world . . . Monday his brother came to New York to visit him. "Have I changed any?" Larry asked him. "Has all this traveling made me any different?" . . . "Yes, there is a change," his brother assured. "You say 'thank you' too damn much."

ENTERPRISE: Last week one of the editors of PM went into retreat for 48 hours, to contemplate upon changes which might add improvement to the newspaper . . . After two days he returned to the office, and issued a memo advising the staff that the paper lacked two essentials—sex and humor . . . That's why for the Friday issue the composing room found eleven photographs all bearing the new, permanent slug "legs."

RELUCTANCE: Eddie Buzzell, the M.-G.-M. producer, was asked to be the producer of "Sporting Blood," the Robert Young-Maureen O'Hara movie about Virginia horse racing . . . Buzzell read the script, and decided, fortunately for him, that it wasn't good and that he wouldn't take the job. His superior summoned Buzzell, and said: "Well, Eddie—will you do 'Sporting Blood?' " . . . "No," Buzzell stated. "I know nothing about horse racing. I never go to the racetrack—not even on Saturdays."

TRIUMPH: Jack Tirman, press agent for Georgia Hale, went to Detroit for the premiere of the new Jolson-Hale musical. Tirman, who press agented many clients who failed to pay him, returned from Detroit, elated at having obtained four new clients there and at having discovered a new system of reducing the amount of unpaid fees due him . . . "I've got a contact in Detroit, who'll collect the dough for me, keep half for himself, and send me the other half," he explained . . . "But suppose," he was reminded, "that man doesn't send you the dough, after he collects it?" . . . "That's still all right," said the press agent, "because then I'd still be losing only half."

July's Finale Includes Four New Pictures

Amusement Interests Continue Full Tilt As Heat Antidote

"MARYLAND." With a climax filmed at last spring's Maryland Hunt, this Technicolor story of thoroughbreds opens tomorrow morning at the Palace Theater. Three Academy Award winners head the cast: Fay Bainter, Walter Brennan and Hattie McDaniel, while the leading romantic roles are played by John Payne and Brenda Joyce. The story details a mother's determination to keep her son from the accidental death which claimed his father in the sport of kings. Charlie Ruggles and Marjorie Weaver are others featured in this new Darryl F. Zanuck production.

Earle

"MY LOVE CAME BACK." Olivia de Havilland and Jeffrey Lynn costar in this new comedy of a music school and its youthful students. Eddie Albert plays a swing extrovert who plays the classics in swingtime. Miss de Havilland is the sweet young violinist whose lack of finances compels her to accept a scholarship from wealthy publisher Charles Winninger. Jane Wyman, Spring Byington, Grant Mitchell and Ann Gillis are featured. "Red" Skelton returns to head the stage revue with partner Edna Stillwell. Franklyn D'Amore, Gil and Bernice Mason, Yvette and the Roxyettes are the other stage performers. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH." This documentry film, suggested by Maj. George Fielding Eliot's book of the same name, is the first feature-length film from "The March of Time" producers. With an international compilation of newsreels covering the World War years and a slight story of the war's effect on a New England town, the film franly proposes forceful armed defense on the part of the United States. Current and on a continuous showing basis.

Capitol

"GOLD RUSH MASIE." Ann Sothern's lively characterization of the stranded showgirl returns in a new adventure. This time "Maisie" befriends a group of dust bowl refugees who are hoping to strike a fortune during a Western gold rush. The breakdown of her old jallopy on her way to a singing job starts the ball rolling. Lee Bowman, Slim Summerville, Virginia Weidler, John Hamilton, Mary Nash and Scotty Beckett are in the cast. On the stage, Gene Ford's third annual "Crazy Show" stars Funster Jay C. Flippen; Dancer Eunice Healy; Songstress Sara Ann McCabe and the Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"TOM BROWN'S SCHOOL DAYS." Freddie Bartholomew, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Jimmy Lydon and Billy Halop head the cast in this screen version of Thomas Hughes' celebrated school classic. One of the best sellers in the English language, "Tom Brown's School Days" recorded the experiences of its resolute hero and his friends against the bullying of the school terror, Flashman, played by one-time "Dead End" Kid Billy Halop. Josephine Hutchinson and Comedienne Polly Moran are the feminine leads. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"AIR ARMY." America's sky armada as it is today forms the central short feature at the newsreel house for the coming week. Burma road is the setting for "In the Land of Pagodas," the travelogue, while "Screen Snapshots" retails the sporting hobbies of the film players. "Mr. Duck Steps Out" is the Disney cartoon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Comic Fellow

JAY C. FLIPPEN, one of the stage's most reliable laugh-makers, who comes to Loew's Capitol on Friday to headline the "Crazy Show"

Columbia

"SAFARI." Madeleine Carroll Douglas Fairbanks, jr., play this story of love on an African wild animal chase. Tullio Carminati, Muriel Angelus and Lynne Overman are other players. Opens tomorrow morning after a previous week at the Capitol.

Cross Roads

"FALLEN ANGELS." A Noel Coward comedy, new to this locale, is the widely heralded novelty of this summer's Cross Roads season. Reported to be composed in Mr. Coward's brittle, sophisticated manner, play will be performed by a cast headed by Catherine Ryan and Elizabeth Winburn, with Sidney Bassler, Austin Gattis and Forney Reese in the leading male roles. "The Skull," a mystery thriller, continues through this Saturday evening at the Virginia barn theater.

Roadside

"THE FROG." The first American production of the melodrama by Ian Ray, adapted from Edgar Wallace's novel, "The Fellowship of the Frog," will continue for a second week at the barn theater on the Rockville pike. Kenn Romney, Maccubbin Waters, William Zuckert, Edna Evans, Herbert Lupton, Peter Bradford, A. Alan Fischler and Paul J. Sears head the cast.

Sylvan

"KISMET." This story of the Bagdad of the Caliphs will be performed this evening on the Monument Grounds, a production which was set back two days to allow its audiences to attend the weather-bogged Stokowski concert at the Watergate. Kathleen Davis, Charles Shoemaker, Rhodes K. Scherer, Alice Louise Hunter and Lillian Penn are the leading players in this production by the Eckington-Roosevelt Players. In case of inclement weather this evening, "Kismet" will be given tomorrow night.

Open-Air

"HONEYMOON DEFERRED." Edmund Lowe and Margaret Lindsey have the leading roles in this comedy of a fast-thinking detective whose marriage plans are dependent upon the threatened murder of his wealthy employer. Fifty minutes of Walt Disney cartoons supplement this feature. Opens a three-night run this evening.

Wilson Line

CRUISES by moonlight and daylight are scheduled by the streamlined S. S. Mount Vernon. Trips down the Potomac to Marshall Hall amusement park with hour-and-a-half stop-overs at Mount Vernon sail from the Seventh street wharves at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. There are moonlight trips every evening except Mondays and Tuesdays at 8:30 p. m., with McWilliams' orchestra aboard for dancing. Kiddies' Days every Friday and Monday.

'Biscuit Eater' A Second Week At the Little

The year's most endearing film, "The Biscuit Eater," will continue to win further friends at the Little for a second week.

This Georgian story of a bird dog and his two youthful champions boasts a cast of little public repute, but it has a sense of humanity which more than makes up for any lack of accustomed faces. Billy Lee, whom you've seen in children's roles before, has the lead, with Tiverton Invader, a prize pointer known for his winnings in England and America, as the hero of the title.

A "biscuit eater" is a hunter who cops for himself the prey he has quarried for his master. Such dogs are useless to the demanding huntsman and are destroyed or sent away. When Promise was a pup he was a runt, and saved from death only because his master's young son begged to have him for his "very own." Promise very nearly becomes a biscuit eater, but is well trained by the boy and his colored pal. A heated contest develops between the father and son when their dogs are opposing each other in the county dog show.

Filmed entirely in and around Albany, Ga., the picture boasts a uniquely compelling authenticity. There are moments of shattering laughter when the two boys undergo all sorts of troubles for their dog, as readers of the Saturday Evening Post story by James Street, from which this was adapted, will recall. Some of the players are as native Georgian as the dogs, quail and settings. The Hollywood contributors include Director Stuart Heisler and Players Cordell Hickman, Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Glen Echo

COOLING BREEZES, man-manufactured if not nature's own, are the proud boast of the amusement park these days. The Flying Scooter promises not only its riders some hefty breezes, but to act as a fan for diners on the new roof garden cafe. The Spanish Garden ballroom is air-cooled and the swimming pool is an ever-cool retreat.

"Stirring . . . Challenging . . . Memorable . . . Inspiring"

That's what Washington thinks of "THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH"

"A strikingly different and challenging motion picture—an encouraging and provocative spectacle. The story has drama, poignance, humor, movement. An inspired lesson from history reduced to the simple intimacy of the family album. 100% timely today."
Jay Carmody, Washington Star

"A moving, prophetic, significant story. No American who sees it will ever forget it."
Major George Fielding Eliot

" 'The Ramparts' is an utterly true picture of the most exciting period of American history. To those who lived through the great war, the emotion this picture brings is so personal as to be an intimate experience. It is exactly what each of us saw and heard and felt."
Mark Sullivan

"It is marvelous. I enjoyed every minute of it."
Major General T. Holcomb, Commandant of Marine Corps

"A magnificent success as a complete, accurate and stirring presentation of the events of 1914-18. This is a picture that American youth must see. It will make them think."
Charles W. Taussig, Chmn. National Advisory Comm., NYA

". . . deeply impressive."
Senator George W. Norris

"I think the real accomplishment of the picture is that it puts back in perspective the first World War and our part in it and the reasons we went into it. The fact that we won the war made us sort of forget why we went into it in the first place. The picture really recreates the perspective and feeling of the time."
Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress

Senator Carter Glass

" 'The Ramparts We Watch' is timely to a split second—chronicled with an impact that is stunning—vastly inspiring in its inescapable reminder of the capacity, the courage and the greatness of a unified America. It was spontaneously cheered by the audience."
Nelson B. Bell, Washington Post

Britain's New Taxes

Great Britain's grim determination to fight it out with Hitler is reflected in the drastic tax increases that have once more been adopted. British taxpayers, meaning practically everybody, were already giving an enormous portion of their incomes to the exchequer. Now they must dig deeper into their pockets and tighten their belts again in the effort to finance their government's stupendous defense program.

The basic income-tax rate in Great Britain is now 42½ per cent. About 90 per cent of large incomes is taken by the exchequer. A family of three with income of $4,000 a year must pay nearly one-fourth of it in direct taxes. In addition, stiff levies have been placed on tobacco, wine and virtually all commercial sales. On a large list of articles in the luxury class this sales tax amounts to 24 per cent.

These levies will fall most heavily upon families of moderate income and on the poor for the simple reason that large incomes are already taxed almost out of existence.

In presenting his budget to Parliament Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, estimated military expenditures for the current year at more than half of Britain's national income in peacetime. That staggering burden cannot be entirely financed through new taxes.

When all Sir Kingsley's emergency taxes have been collected, the British government will still have to cover about 63 per cent of its total expenditures by borrowing. Consumption taxes were made particularly drastic to discourage purchases and increase savings that may be lent to the government. Thus the new program involves a double burden. Yet there is no question that these hardships will be cheerfully borne for the sake of national security.

No comparable effort is being made in this country to keep abreast of mounting expenditures. Great Britain is in mortal peril. Yet she is courageously attempting to meet a large percentage of her military expenditures from current revenue. The United States, by contrast, is not at war. Yet Congress has increased taxes by only a billion dollars and will soon have authorized the Army and Navy to spend about ten times that sum.

With approval of the President's latest defense requests, the estimated current deficit will mount to approximately $6,000,000,000. If that estimate proves to be accurate, the Government will collect slightly more than half as much as it spends this year. Nor will this gloomy outlook be substantially changed if Congress passes a drastic excess-profits tax.

Congress has properly voted enormous sums to strengthen our inadequate defenses. It has not yet begun to face the problem of paying the bill. In this respect, it is far less courageous and far less realistic than the British Parliament. Apparently our legislators are still laboring under the delusion that social security and national defense can be safely purchased on a long-time charge account.

Doctors' Bills

According to the Department of Labor, the families of wage earners and clerical workers living in cities spend on an average $13 per year for the services of doctors. Dentists take $11 of the family income. Medicines, drugs, hospital expenses, eyeglasses, accident and health insurance absorb $35, making an annual outlay for medical care of about $59 per family.

It may appear from this showing that complaints of the inability of families of small means to cope with the emergencies presented by illness are grossly exaggerated. But the amounts spent on health seem to vary directly with the size of the family income, indicating that the state of the pocketbook rather than the health of the family determines the number of visits made to the doctor and dentist.

Since illness is more prevalent where living standards are lowest, the greatest need of medical care is found among the poorest groups. Thus it does not require any elaborate survey of family budgets to show that the cost of adequate medical care is beyond the reach of many people who are regularly employed.

It is highly improbable that any feasible public health service will ever be developed to the point at which all the sick and suffering can hope to receive the maximum benefits that medical skill and knowledge is capable of conferring. That would be physically impossible of accomplishment, even if no question of cost were involved.

Much can be done to relieve needless sickness and premature death, however, by spreading the cost of medical care. Health insurance and plans for prepayment of medical costs on a yearly basis hold out a good deal of hope to self-supporting families that are now frequently overwhelmed by an emergency illness.

Aerial Armageddon

Yesterday's dispatches from London indicate that the aerial phase of the Battle of Britain has begun in deadly earnest. And it may well prove that the "history of the next thousand years," which Hitler said was to be written in the vernal fields of Flanders, will be written instead in the midsummer skies of England.

If the Royal Air Force can continue to beat away the increasing swarms of attacking planes, if it can meanwhile continue its effective bombing of German concentrations, Hitler will come no nearer to accomplishing the invasion of England than did Hoche or Bonaparte. Then, by a curious paradox, the blitzkrieg will turn into an unanticipated aerial war of attrition with victory going in the end to the side having the greatest reserves. And they will be reserves not so much of planes or even of oil but of pilots and the human raw material out of which pilots can be made.

The British claim, and there is no reason to doubt it, that so far as the production of planes is concerned they will presently achieve parity with the Germans, and eventually may outstrip them. At any rate both sides are turning out planes much faster than they can be shot down. But turning out pilots is another thing.

Almost any mentally normal and reasonably healthy man between 18 and 40 can be trained for some service in the army or navy or war industry. But of war fliers something very exceptional in the way of neural, mental and physical coordination is demanded. Thus men over 30 are almost automatically excluded, and even of men under 30 not one in 200 is capable of being made into an efficient war pilot, and perhaps not one in 100 into an aerial gunner or bomber. Thus it is no mere question of gross man power.

The flying personnel of the Royal Air Force is, neuro-physically speaking, the very flower of the British Empire. To this quality is due their remarkable exploits against Marshal Goering's numerically stronger Luftwaffe. Plainly the British fliers have been far more carefully selected and more thoroughly trained than their adversaries. In choosing and training their aviators the Nazis, with their usual genius for mass organization, seem to have aimed at a standardized level of competence, compatible with the immensity of their armada.

As the air battles over England increase in scope and ferocity, so of course will the casualties. Will Britain and her dominions be able to replace all the brave and brilliant pilots who are fated to perish in the defense of the island? Or must the steady loss of these rare and precious youngsters fetch the human quality of the R. A. F. in the end below the average German standard? Will mediocrity prove, as it sometimes does, more effective than virtuosity?

In a way it will be a fair as well as an unutterably horrible test of those two philosophical systems which are now at death grips for the mastery of the world—the system whose base is the individual, and the system whose base is the mass.

Wise Public Opinion

Regardless of what public opinion may think of a third term for President Roosevelt, it does not favor amendment of the Constitution to prevent any Chief Executive from remaining in the White House more than eight years. The Gallup poll indicates that only 41 per cent of the voters now approve such a change in the basic law, compared with a maximum 48 per cent affirmative vote a year before the present war began.

Of the Republicans polled, 31 per cent are opposed to the third-term amendment indorsed by the G. O. P. platform. It may be reasonably assumed that most of these Republicans will cast their votes against a third term for President Roosevelt. But they do not wish to see the Constitution loaded down with further unnecessary prohibitions.

Results of this poll reflect once more a fine sense of discrimination on the part of American voters. This is no time to be writing restrictive amendments into the Constitution. That document will be a far more useful charter of government if it is left sufficiently flexible to meet new conditions as they arise. The surest way to shorten its influence upon American destiny would be to incorporate in it all the restrictive devices that political parties might find temporarily useful.

The custom of limiting any man's service in the White House to eight years has been a useful tradition. It will stand so long as the people wish to preserve it. If there comes a time when a majority of the voters believe it should be abandoned, a constitutional amendment giving this custom the force of organic law would be a source of national weakness rather than strength.

Drafting Students

Opposition to the idea of peacetime conscription is sufficiently strong, and sufficiently well grounded in American traditions, to make it imperative that legislation to this end should be drawn with meticulous care. Unpleasant repercussions later will be much less likely if every reasonable criticism is weighed carefully in advance.

One such criticism emanates from educational circles. It is pointed out that the average American undergraduate attains his twenty-first birthday during his senior year. If drafted from his studies as he is preparing for graduation the dislocation of the student's life may prove to be a very serious matter. In many cases the probable result will be to prevent later completion of his college course, and thereby waste much of the effort which has been directed to this end.

Once a conscription law is on the statute books, exemptions from its effect should be granted sparingly. Otherwise there will be justified criticism that the law, in spite of its name, is not universal in application and, therefore, not democratic.

By raising the age at which the draft would begin to operate to 22 or at most 23, the problem of the college, for all but a small proportion of students, would be eliminated. Whether any general disadvantages involved in such a change would outweigh the obvious advantage to those eager for the advantages of college training is another matter.

But the issue is clearly one which the Senate and House Military committees should weigh with full sense of their profound responsibility.

No Ten-Gallon Hat?

Wendell Willkie rode through Cheyenne on a stagecoach one day this week, but he refused to wear a ten-gallon hat. He was sticking to his policy of "just being myself."

The most obvious conclusion to be drawn from this is that Mr. Willkie is an unusual Presidential candidate, but everyone knew that already. It also becomes apparent that he is a very unusual man. Few Americans, sartorially, want to be just themselves.

The question arises whether Mr. Willkie in refusing to put on whatever bizarre headwear may be available does not risk alienating the Shriners, the Tall Cedars of Lebanon, all the ladies, and most of the American Legion. Certainly he cannot be initiated into an Indian tribe if he will not deck himself in a feathered headdress.

Mr. Willkie's individualism may go further. What can you expect from a fellow like that? If he is elected he might even want to reduce superfluous spending, simplify administration and otherwise cut complexity to a minimum. In fact there is a growing suspicion, based on various chance utterances, that such indeed may be this candidate's iconoclastic purpose.

Traveling Madonna

From the St. Louis Star-Times

The Italians, it is reported, want Leonardo da Vinci's famed painting, "Mona Lisa," as part of the loot of the French capitulation. Their feeling is understandable, since Da Vinci was undeniably a son of Italy and since France stole the painting for the Louvre through Napoleon's victories in the Italian peninsula.

Leonardo, declares the Encyclopedia Britannica, worked at the portrait of Madonna Lisa, wife of Zanobi del Gioconda, the Florentine, during some portion of four successive years. He caused music to be played so that the "rapt expression" should not fade from his model's countenance. Ever since he completed the painting, it has been highly valued both monetarily and artistically, with many debates over the significance of the enigmatic smile in which he curved La Gioconda's lips.

Perhaps Madonna Lisa, in her centuries-old wisdom, today is smiling ironically at the "triumphs" of Mussolini, who is trying so strenuously to become a new Caesar but is bound to inferiority by the hard facts of Italy's dependence on the numerically more powerful, materially more wealthy Nazi state of Germany. She may return to Florence or to Rome, but in a world of international brigandage the end of her travels is not in sight.

Fossilized Ideas

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What might Thomas Jefferson have said to a suggestion that future wars would not only be fought on land and water but in the air and under the water as well? That commonly men would travel country roads in excess of 50 miles an hour, and all the while listen to announcements of events taking place in both hemispheres; that the human voice be made to span the world in seconds? Likely, Mr. Jefferson would not have deigned reply to such suggestion, it being so ridiculously absurd.

Without vision into the future, Mr. Jefferson would no doubt have considered just as foolish a suggestion that in time, and due to inventions and their inhuman use by vicious and self-seeking criminals, civilization would be threatened as it now is.

Conditions are in no wise what they were in Jefferson's time, and what Mr. Jefferson said or didn't say, thought or did not think, is of small importance at this critical time. Many sober judgments of Jefferson's time are ridiculous and laugh-provoking in this age. However, Mr. Jefferson must be credited with providing some of our prominent columnists with something to write about, notwithstanding the bore.

Fear of the third-term bugaboo is fast becoming taboo in this country. The common run of citizen knows perfectly well that the opposition to President Roosevelt is not sincerely based on the third-term "has been" excuse, but stems from reasons otherwise. Like the charge of dictatorship, all know that Mr. Roosevelt is not of the breed from which dictators spring. Why practice further subterfuge?

All free peoples face a critical situation, and when there is a capable and sincere man doing a good job, a man of large experience and unquestionable loyalty to his country and the best interest of humanity, is it not a bad idea to replace him with inexperience?

E. M. PETERSON.
Washington, July 20.

The War in Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It behooves me to raise my pen in opposition to your editorial of July 19 in which you make the statement, ". . . the rebellion against Leftist rule which after a long and civil war, etc." . . .

The recent war in Spain, as even a child now knows, was at no time a civil war in the real sense of the word. The world now realizes that German and Italian fascism was responsible for the so-called uprising in republic Spain. And it would be well to add that the neutrality legislation by the United States and the almost direct aid by "democratic" England did more to defeat a legally elected government than did the men and munitions of Germany and Italy.

Naturally there were those in Spain who stood to profit by Franco's victory; those people exist amongst every nation. But the war that you would term "civil" was in reality a people's war of defense. For the first time in the history of Spain the farmers and the workers were able to call their souls their own. Land taken from a parasitic nobility had been given to the poorer peasantry and it was this that Spanish grandees wanted so as better to exploit the people.

Hitler and Mussolini, on the other hand, wanted the rich mines and for those were willing to sacrifice their soldiers.

What people having once tasted the rich ripe fruit of democracy in their labors in mine and field wouldn't, if attacked, put up the same rigid battle as did the people's government and the people of Spain?

I say that the Spanish conflict was one of defense against tyranny and subjugation and not at all civil strife.

Military Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: France had compulsory military training for decades, yet it was no defense to Fascist attack. It is proposed that we adopt compulsory military training. It will not be a defense to us either if our country is taken down the same road as was France. There the pro-Fascists destroyed the democratic gains of the people and so there was, as they say, "no understanding of the war as there was in 1914." Rather, the French people were disheartened and thereafter a demoralized army. Contrast the determined fight put up by republican Spain and China. We will not be able to defeat fascism if our Government continues to hem in the liberties of its citizens, its alien but loyal noncitizens, and the substance of the gains in working and living standards won for the people through the New Deal (may it rest in peace). If the Government which cuts down on democracy also has at its command a conscript army, that army will be regimented for the Fascist sell-out as was France's.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to remind all who opposed the selective draft for preparedness that it is written in effect that he who is not willing to give up father, mother, wife, sister and brother and life is not worthy of the blessings of the heavenly kingdom, and likewise, he who is not willing to give up everything is not worthy of the blessings of life in a free republic.

My great-grandfather and many thousand others gave up everything, lived on parched corn, wore scanty clothing and fought for years to gain freedom.

I claim that these people haven't any right to jeopardize our freedom by opposing preparation for home defense.

Baltic Pacts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a clear example of pure venom, your editorial "In Three Bites" appearing in The Post of July 19, certainly would capture high honors.

You say the first "bite" was when Russia obtained certain concessions, as right to occupy certain strategic points in the three Baltic countries. You talk of this as an act to strike terror into the hearts of the peoples of these countries. In spite of the fact that news accounts for weeks following this mutual agreement between Soviet Russia and the Baltic states did try to convey just this impression, authentic statements from the three small countries involved refuted this. They stated that the U. S. S. R. was living up to her part of the agreement and it was a truly mutual assistance arrangement. The life and development of these countries was certainly not hampered by this agreement with Russia.

Now, you say that the final "bite" has been taken by a recent vote which overwhelmingly showed that the peoples of these countries favored a peoples' government advocating close collaboration with their powerful and friendly neighbor. It, no doubt, is a sharp and irritating thorn to know that the Baltic population honestly desires such a government—for quite obvious reasons when one considers the advantages involved for them. Therefore, you make it seem as if they have been hoodwinked into it!

Convention Insults

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that the delegates at Chicago were forced to nominate an eight-year New Dealer in preference to a lifetime Democrat, Speaker Bankhead, for President Roosevelt's running mate. This was insult No. 1 to the South, which "always goes Democratic."

When Senator Glass tried to point out the dangers of a third term he was shouted down. This was insult No. 2.

In view of these actions, I suggest that those who still believe in fairness organize "Jeffersonian" (or Liberty) Clubs throughout the South. These clubs should meet and study our Constitution, the early history of our Nation, and review the steps by which European dictators rose to power.

Places Faith In Britain

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: With decadent and hapless France now at the feet of Germany and with Britain standing alone, the bulk of all cold and calculating opinion places the demise of Britain herself as imminent and inevitable. I am writing to voice an opposing opinion. I am not basing my conclusions on points of strategy but upon the spiritual issues involved.

I, though believing warlike actions to be incompatible with the highest concept of Christianity, realize that wars through sin are inevitable. In this discussion I simply wish to apply the following elemental social principle to the question of the feasibility of the conquest of England: "from earliest times even to the present, the growth and prosperity of peoples, nations and empires has been dependent upon the influence of the Christian elements within their borders."

As surely as the state is built on the home and the home is founded upon the precepts of Christianity, so must one in the final analysis look to the size and caliber of the Christian population as the only barometer of the nation's basic strength.

Though England, even as no other nation can be said to be completely Christian, the influence of her Christian masses as evidenced by her large percentage of C. O. registration, has produced the national and typically English fighting qualities of courage, determination, and doggedness. It is through these qualities that Britain has built her empire. It is the continued possession of these qualities that constitute her great and abiding strength in her defense of her empire.

The social principle of the determination by the Christian element of the basic strength of the nation operates likewise in reverse. Throughout history, peoples, nations and empires have waned and gone down in defeat through a prevailing disregard for the moral tenets of their creeds and through the ensuing collapse of the unit of national structure, the home.

Although Germany has been traditionally a Christian nation, a new and materialistic order has come into being. Certain it is that should it come to pass that Germany overcome Britain, it will be only because the pagan presumption of the Nazi movement has not yet sufficiently undermined the pre-Nazi order to bear its inevitable fruit of defeat.

In view of the known spiritual caliber and corresponding fighting strength of Britain and the uncertainty of that of Germany, I confidently look to England to again demonstrate the age-old truth that the Christian peoples as "the salt of the earth" extend their sphere of influence beyond their own body and that through that influence weld and temper the character and fighting spirit of a nation to heroic resistance in times of crises.

Conversation

Sometimes it is just the way you approach a person, that causes that person to wish that a conversation ensue. That is just the way it happened that day.

He wasn't a day under 70. His face was lined and his light blue eyes still carried some of the youth that had taken refuge in the past. His cheeks were wan, and a bit of sternness was flashed from the thick gray eyebrows that every minute or so seemed to quiver, then become stilled. Let me say that he was shrunken; that he sat in his chair staring into space. That is much easier than to say that he still carried with him sprightliness and movement. His hands lay quietly on the arms of the chair, the thick veins bulging and forcing his heart into pumping and life. That was the way I found him. He said "Hello" as though the word had been formed for hours. He seemed happy about my talking with him; he later confessed that not many people cared to talk with him. When I asked why he replied that not many people cared for old age. Well, that is true. He said that, in just that way. "But I don't expect people to give a care."

Then he reached back and caught some of the wind of yesterday and started on his story. I had plenty of time. My train wasn't due for 30 minutes. Besides, I wanted to talk, talk . . . but I listened that day. And never did forget him.

"You wouldn't think that I had been young; now, now, don't nod your head as though it were true. Well, maybe I never was. That is all gone. But there was one who did believe me. Romantic, you think. Well, yes, and then no. I was only 20 at the time. She lived across the street; in those days it might have been called a dirt road. She wasn't a beauty, nor did she have any bit of finery about her. She was plain, like a new day. Nothing startling, nothing that today would be called glamorous, just something out of a flower, that you grasp, hold and watch fade. It wasn't very long that we became acquainted, and in a month or two, we were ready to marry. You might think I was frightened. No, not me. It didn't make me quiver, nor did it spoil my meals, or make sleep unrestful. It was too natural. Elsie, that was her name. The days piled up and we lived that normal life filled with the routine of everyday. Then came children, five children. You wonder where they are? Three are married and live in another city. Two of my boys died fighting in France. I smile, don't I? I should be bitter, but what would it give me, nothing . . . and now I have everything. But you wonder how I can have everything, who is old, gnarled, ready for the grave. Ha, ha, that is very odd.

"The other day I received a letter from my oldest girl, she wants me to join her. I haven't answered the letter. Just yesterday I was ready to shove off and join my daughter, but couldn't make it. Why do I stay away? Elsie is gone. Her grave is over the hill, buried close to the old house. The house is battered, beaten . . . just like me. But you wonder why I do keep smiling? How else would I be happy? I'm only waiting. To join Elsie? Sure. Then you wonder if I hear her speaking, well, sometimes I do. But she knows I'll be there soon. Morbid? Yea . . . sure.

"What has old age to offer? Gray, dull, smelly, cut by the knife of time. Hm, I have a pipe, A smoke. That is all. A bit of food, something to keep me up. Ambition has long run the trail of forgetfulness. Were I to be trumped with the riches of the world, I wouldn't appreciate it. I only appreciate what has given me happiness. Many times I ask myself if I have ever known happiness. You know how the poets speak of it. They talk in riddles, and run around circles, and make it appear that it is something difficult to ascertain. But it isn't all heavenly, or lurking in hills, clouds . . . no, no, son, it is here . . . right here."

The old man hesitated. There were no tears. No quivering. He had forgotten to light his pipe. I offered him a cigarette. He wouldn't have one.

"Yes, you are young, you are going away. Perhaps to marry. That is right, isn't it? I can always tell. The bright, cheery smile. Oh, and you will always have it, I hope. But don't let the years bother you. Soon, you will see your children grow, they will leave you, probably forget you. Well, that is what they should do. So many mothers and fathers expect their children to come back and pour gifts at their feet. You will never ask for it; I can see that. Will you?"

I couldn't answer. I gulped and wished the train were soon approaching. "Don't grow impatient, don't; at first you wanted to listen, you thought you could find something different about old age, but I'm no different than you are . . . I am just withered, and beaten, otherwise I'm like you. Are you surprised? You think of old age as tears, pain, sorrow and defeat. You wanted me to tell you of my hard luck, but you were fooled . . . ha, ha, you were fooled." He stood up, and lit his pipe. He walked away without another word. I heard the train whistle, I rose to wait.

Court Records

LAST WEEK, while William Green was presenting to the statesmen of the Democratic Party at the Chicago convention his desires and demands as president of the American Federation of Labor, your correspondent was pursuing inquiries regarding certain activities of big officers of unions under his general jurisdiction. It may be remembered that these dispatches have twitted Mr. Green about the moral character of the leadership of labor, with a capital L, under the American Federation of Labor, and that Mr. Green, far from exerting himself to disinfect the house of labor, first pleaded that he had no authority to do so, and, during the first week of June, blindly indorsed the criminals who control the union of stagehands and movie employes. This approval was personally given at the Louisville convention of that racket.

Therefore, it may be anticipated that Mr. Green will regard as another attack on labor, with a capital L, the revelation that the president, no less, of one of his international unions, to wit, Mr. Joseph Ozanic, of the Progressive Mine Workers of America, owes an unpaid balance on two fines imposed in the United States District Court in 1924 and 1925 for the offense of bootlegging.

INDEED, inasmuch as the two foremost criminals of the stagehands' union racket are, respectively, a panderer and a stick-up man, and bootlegging in 1925 was roguishly held to be as noble in purpose as the experiment which it ultimately defeated, Mr. Green might take the attitude that Mr. Ozanic's offense was a patriotic and humane service.

Be that as it may, the fact nevertheless remains that in 1925 bootlegging was, by law, an ignoble trade, and that Mr. Ozanic acquired a court record and a burden of debt to the United States Government which latter has not been discharged and is at present a subject of court proceedings brought by Howard Doyle, the United States district attorney at Springfield, the capital of Illinois and of the union.

Mr. Doyle chanced to be in Chicago last week, and on the subject of the Ozanic case he said that, of a certainty, Mr. Ozanic did owe a balance of $550 on two fines of $500 and $300 assessed in 1924 and 1925, respectively, and that Mr. Ozanic sat out a term of three months in the city jail of Springfield in the second case.

MR. DOYLE said the offenses involved the operation of a still, and your correspondent would like to give Mr. Ozanic's version of the act charged, and of the present status of the case, but is prevented from doing so by Mr. Ozanic himself, who insisted that no part of his comment, given over the phone, should be used for publication.

He discussed the affair freely, but forbade himself this access to public opinion which was offered as a matter of course.

Mr. Doyle has taken steps to collect the $550 which he claims to be due and unpaid, and his action suggests a possibility that a rather sizable total of unpaid fines imposed on offenders in years gone by, but placed in abeyance under the pauper's oath provision of the Federal law, may now be collected from defendants who have acquired money or property in subsequent years.

Under the Federal law a defendant who cannot pay may take the pauper's oath and go free after serving 30 days in jail, but the Government apparently reserves a right to proceed against that person's wealth, if any, for the full amount, at any future time.

Mr. Ozanic is not the only high officer of an international union of the American Federation of Labor against whose name there stands on the books of the United States Government a record of an unpaid fine. Another case will be cited tomorrow.

Commons Bars Death Penalty Without Appeal

London, July 24 (U.P.).—The government narrowly escaped defeat in Commons tonight when Sir John Anderson, home security minister, gave ground on a bill providing for emergency courts in war zones and promised that all death sentences could be appealed and sentences imposed for "serious offenses" would be reviewed.

The opposition's victory was obtained after numerous speakers criticized Anderson's plans for summary courts to be presided over by a justice authorized to hand down sentences including the death penalty for all types of offenses, even for looting.

After Anderson promised to modify the plan to provide the government's consultation with a "legally qualified and highly expert body as far as legal consideration may be involved" the bill was passed without division.

Holbrook Dairy Ordered to Post $20,000 Bond

Holbrook Farms Dairy, of Brentwood, Md., was ordered yesterday to put up $20,000 bond pending litigation of the Agriculture Department's milk marketing agreement for the district.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws requested the dairy to place its records at the disposal of C. I. Dunn, District Milk Marketing Administrator. He intimated that should Dunn find the bond excessive, he would entertain a motion to reduce it.

Sefton Darr, attorney for the dairy, protested that the order was retroactive, asserting that the dairy already had been operating under a bond set by Chief Justice Wheat. He asked the court to fix a more reasonable bond, saying that a large cash outlay would force the dairy to rearrange its price structure.

Today And Tomorrow

The Paper Schemes

THE PARAMOUNT question is how soon, if ever, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie or both will begin to tell the people the truth about the national defense. The people are not being told the truth. They are being dazzled and diverted by grandiose authorizations, appropriations, contracts, plans, promises, and commitments. These are the easy things to which politicians invariably resort when they lack the resolution to do the hard and necessary things. Placed as we are in this country today, the supreme problem in foreign policy is to clarify and define the relationship of the United States to the British commonwealth and to British sea power: the subject is treated by the politicians of both parties as unmentionable. Internally, the supreme problem of national defense is to increase rapidly the rate of industrial production in the munitions industries; since this cannot be done without inconvenience to everyone and without interfering with the vested interests of businessmen, trades unions, and consumers, the subject is regarded by the politicians as untouchable.

Because we are drifting aimlessly and failing to define our foreign policy or seriously to organize the national defense, we are deceiving ourselves most dangerously by a series of paper schemes in which the second scheme covers up the defect of the first and the third scheme covers up the defect of the second.

THE UNDERLYING paper scheme, our first and fundamental departure from the reality of America's vital interests, was the neutrality law. Even as amended last autumn, the law prevented the United States from acting to preserve in friendly hands the naval control of our two ocean frontiers; the neutrality law committed us to the immense gamble and the immeasurable risk of allowing British and French sea power to be destroyed, and of having, therefore, to let ourselves be isolated and compelled to defend ourselves in two oceans with one navy.

The conquest of France and the threat of the conquest of Britain tore a hole in the paper scheme of the neutrality law. The country reacted immediately. Thereupon, Congress and the Administration pasted another piece of paper over the hole. They authorized another navy. But the hole of the paper navy was that it could not be constructed in less than four or five years, and that was an optimistic estimate. So over this hole in the scheme for a paper navy, another piece of paper has had to be pasted. A great army is to be authorized in order that we may be able to defend by land and air forces those vital positions in this hemisphere which the Navy alone, should Britain fall, is now unable to defend. But the great hole in this scheme for a paper army is that while a million men can be conscripted and given rudimentary drill, they cannot be equipped with modern weapons much before 1942-1943.

For American industry and American labor are not now geared to produce these weapons rapidly, nor are serious and effective measures being discussed publicly, much less put into effect, to begin producing these weapons rapidly. Paper contracts are being signed. But the real task of putting the production of munitions ahead of everything else, ahead of private profit, private preferences, ahead of all peacetime reforms and all peacetime restrictions, has not begun. And neither political party and neither candidate has as yet dared to go to the people and tell them truthfully what sacrifices they must make if they are to translate any of these paper schemes into a dependable armed force.

THE GRIM TRUTH about the national defense is that by failing to use our whole diplomatic and economic power to insure ourselves against the conquest and collapse of the British Empire, we are compelled to authorize another navy which cannot be built before it may be needed, to authorize a great army which cannot be equipped before it may be needed, and to make pledges and commitments to our neighbors in this hemisphere which may not be valid if we lack the navy and the army to execute the pledges. And then, because the politicians are afraid to tell the people the truth, they are organizing the productive capacity of the country as if they had years of leisure ahead of them and as if no stringent measures were really necessary.

We are still going down the same road which all the other democracies have taken. We have not learned the plain lesson of their disasters. Our political leaders will not speak the truth for fear of shocking the voters. They will not speak the truth for fear that their opponents will make a demagogic attack upon them. They will not call capital to the colors; they are afraid to disturb the unawakened businessmen. They will not enlist labor for the national defense; they are afraid to ask the necessary sacrifices of hours, wages and peacetime restriction. They will not give the national defense priority over private consumption; they are afraid of the voting consumers.

They do not read the signs of the times; they read the Gallup polls. And they choose invariably those policies which promise much eventually and cost little immediately—as, for example, the promise of a two-ocean Navy and the promise of hemisphere defense. But they avoid the hard measures, such as coming to terms with the British nations because that would run into political prejudices, such as mobilizing capital and labor because that would call for real sacrifice to make real the big schemes.

IT IS DIFFICULT to imagine why any man should now wish to be elected President unless he had behind him an informed and awakened people. Does not experience show, the experience of Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier, that to assume responsibility without preparing the Nation for its task is to invite a national catastrophe and personal ruin? Elementary prudence, if nothing else, should make every candidate running for national office this year insist upon making the people realize what they must do to make themselves secure. For to be elected, and not to have told the people what will be necessary, is to accept an awful responsibility without making ready to meet it.

And so, though the immediate political risk of speaking the truth during the campaign is great, the political risk of not having spoken the truth will in the end be ever so much greater.

Books And Things

A Rousing Story

BRAVE WAS hardly the word for the new world Columbus found four centuries and a half ago, and Columbus did not believe it new. It was bewildering and baffling, and excitingly mysterious—and that is the mood in which C. S. Forester writes his romance of Columbus and Don Narciso Rich, lawyer from Barcelona—"To the Indies" (Little, Brown, 2.50).

Those who read "African Queen" or "Captain Horatio Hornblower" know that Forester is a master of the story teller's craft; he is an Englishman, but his writing has a quality akin to that of our own South Seas exiles, Nordhoff and Hall. Hall vouches for his precise knowledge of sailing ships, but there is no such tang of salt spray in his sea stories as in those of Masefield. The sea is in his stories, but to Forester, the story, not the sea, is primary. Compare the hurricane which wrecks Narciso Rich's prison ship with some of Nordhoff and Hall's great winds; the wind is here, too, but Forester let it blow and goes on with his tale. You can read "To the Indies" as sheer adventure story, mere escape, if you will; or you can let it lead you back to Madariaga's speculations on the character of Columbus, or recall David Garnett's dewy recreation of unspoiled Virginia in his "Pocahontas" and other efforts to restore the moods with which white men first met redskins on this hemisphere.

Don Narciso was a lawyer nearing 40, out of place among the roistering hidalgos who accompanied Columbus on his third voyage. He was, as Forester paints him, an orthodox Christian of his age, but an inquiring mind withal, shocked at the heresies to which his own observations and speculations sometimes led him. When Columbus heard rumors of new-world lands beyond the capes his ships sighted, he was sure that the gold mines of Ophir, the Biblical Garden of Eden, the Fountain of Youth were just around the bend. Columbus was a good navigator, but for all the obstinacy and firmness of character that held him so many years to a single goal he always found the distant prospect more alluring than the present. Don Narciso was a lawyer; his pedestrian mind was forever sifting the immediate evidence, and forever uncertain.

He was not sure that a gold ornament at an Indian's neck meant abundance of gold mines up the river. He could not quite accept Pliny's dictum that oysters, at low tide, opened their shells to receive drops of dew from the sky, and then solidified these drops into pearls—not when he saw Indian pearl divers plunge far below the tide levels to snatch pearl oysters from the bottom; yet he was no bold revolutionist to dispute Pliny, the church fathers or Columbus. He was—so Forester consistently depicts him—a puzzled man of his age.

CITY BRED, a thinker rather than an explorer, Don Narciso could nevertheless share the wild excitement of men faced with a great unknown. When, in charge of a longboat, he investigated the delta of the Orinoco, he could barely resist the temptation to investigate what lay above the rapids. The beauty of a parrot, the avid color of those hummingbirds which he first took for bees, had for him an attraction like that which roused his comrades at sight of a collaret of gold. He could be homesick for his orderly life in Barcelona and his books, and he could still regret leaving this mysterious new world. As much as Columbus or Cortez, he too, was a man of his age, half-medieval, half-modern.

Columbus, in chains on the return voyage, stared at the horizon and still dreamed magnificent dreams of the Golden City of Cambaluc, of the Tree of Knowledge and of the Fountain of Youth. Don Narciso picked lice from his shirt, and wondered whether, after all, the island of Espanola might not be made more profitable by growing cane and spices than by killing Indians and looting the gold which was, perhaps, the slow accumulation of unrecorded centuries.

Such are the undertones which give depth to Forester's rousing action story. They do not intrude. You may read the story swiftly, and recall only the terrible fight with the crocodile on the delta, the burning of the Indians, the bloody battle before the island fort, and swift destruction in the hurricane. Forester is no Conrad, obsessed with the human soul. He tells a rousing story. That, in these days, is a sound satisfaction.

Course Of Recessing

By Mark Sullivan

Congress Resisting Temptation

FOR A WEEK, interest centered on Chicago, to the neglect of Washington. While the Democratic Convention was in session at Chicago, Congress was in recess. Upon Chicago was focused the public's eyes and ears. At Chicago were most of the political correspondents and radio commentators.

Then the spotlight came back to Washington. On Monday of this week, Congress reassembled, recessing for three days to meet again Thursday. At the same time the Washington spotlight was divided. At least half of it, perhaps more, followed President Roosevelt to Hyde Park, where he went for a week's stay.

This changing of scene, this diffusion of interest, takes place at a time when events of immense importance are under way. And some of the steps being taken, in addition to having vast importance in themselves, are at the same time merely first steps. As such they determine courses of which the future consequences are impossible to overemphasize.

IN ALL THIS, the public, one feels sure, must be incompletely informed; and because incompletely informed, therefore confused. The writer of this column is incompletely informed—and his only job is to keep in touch with events, understand them, and try to see where they fit in the broad pattern that is making America's destiny. There are several matters about which this writer wishes he could have time for understanding before the tempo of events carries them to the status of fait accompli.

Is this universal conscription bill immediately imperative and is the present form of it the wisest possible? The question is asked for information purely. So far as this writer knows, the answer may be yes. The Senate Military Affairs Committee has approved it and the Senate next week will act upon it. The measure would register 42,000,000 persons—every male from 18 years up to 64. Those between 21 and 45 would be liable for training or service in the Army or Navy. About a million and a half would be drafted during the next 12 months, the first 300,000 or 400,000 before next October.

The legislative sponsors of this universal conscription measure, Senator Burke, of Nebraska, and Representative Wadsworth, of New York, are good men. But one wonders what is the purpose of registering elderly men, up to 64? That was not done during the Great War—the top age of those registered was 45. Are some men now to be drafted for work other than military? We should be more comfortable if that were amply explained.

AND ONE CANNOT help recalling the strange companion suggestion that came out of the Administration—that all youths of 18, both boys and girls, should be drafted for a period of training, the nature of which was not clearly stated. Is that suggestion still alive? Is anything being done to carry it out—or to make the public understand it?

There are many other matters.

This cartel proposal, apparently designed to make the whole Western Hemisphere into one economic unit, to be financed by the United States—is this practicable? Has it been passed upon by men of ability and experience in this field? Credit for originating it is claimed by some of the more callow and least experienced of the New Dealers. Some critics claim the Western Hemisphere is merely a geographical unit, that it is not a natural economic unit.

This recent proposal at Havana, that possessions of European countries on the American continent be administered by a joint trusteeship composed of all the 21 American republics—is this the best way for meeting this problem? The problem is portentous and is made immediate by the German conquest of France, Holland and Denmark, together with a possible outcome of the German attempt to conquer Britain. That those West Indies Islands and other American territory should not pass into German possession is a fixed policy of the United States. In support of this policy, action may be necessary any day.

THERE ARE YET other matters.

What is the prospect of the amendments to the National Labor Relations Act? They have been passed by the House, by a vote of more than 2 to 1, with more than half the Democrats voting in favor. Will the Senate act upon the amendments? One infers that the Administration leadership in the Senate does not press for action. And the Walter-Logan Act, likewise passed by the House by more than 2 to 1, and likewise with more than half the Democrats in favor. Will the Senate act upon this measure? Here again, Administration leadership seems not eager for action.

All these and many other matters depend upon one broad question: Will Congress remain in session more or less continuously until January? President Roosevelt some weeks ago showed disinclination to have Congress here—he at that time thought it could finish up its work and go home before the national conventions. Rather invidiously, he implied that Congress would not have much to do during the summer except make speeches.

Congress, however, merely recessed for the periods of a week each, during the Republican and Democratic conventions. They are now here, apparently following a course of recessing for three days at a time. Most of the members are under temptation to go home. All the House and a third of the Senate are up for reelection. (Except the comparatively few who were not renominated.) Usage calls on them to campaign in their districts and States. But one feels that constituents will not penalize them for remaining at Washington under present conditions.

Mr. Wallace's Aims

By Allan Spalding

What New Horizons?

MOST OF Henry Wallace's critics have either over or under estimated his actual capacities, or have scrupulously avoided any detailed appraisal of them. Writers of articles and radio commentators have, almost without exception, presented a distorted picture of Wallace, although at times the picture was by no means uncomplimentary; some of his admirers have hailed him as a "disinterested spirit," a "prophet," an "ascetic," and even as a "mystic." His enemies have ruthlessly excoriated him and revealed him as a grasping politician and an unconscionable hypocrite. So that Wallace is popularly portrayed either hand in hand with St. Francis, or lost in bitter league with the devil; and most other estimates do not really portray him at all. The current tendency is to revile him for concentrating his power under the tentative new democratic program and no one has stopped actually to consider Wallace, or what he believes.

When the history of the New Deal is written, Wallace will not be remembered as a great politician or statesman. He will be recognized, however, as one of the most significant of that small band of men who brought about a short and amazing social revolution. Wallace lacks both the imagination necessary to become a great leader and the power of logic indispensable to any indubitably preeminent thinker. But his stubborn faith in American democracy is above question, and has continually acted as a solvent for his own desires and ambitions. The continual and sustained enthusiasm of the Roosevelt Administration is due in no small part to Wallace.

HIS BOOKS reveal him as a sound economic thinker, but without much power of sustained coherency. Like Madison, although caught in a more tragic dilemma than the greater man, Wallace perceives that if America is to be saved, action must be immediate; but he is unable to say what definite course action should take. He does, however, in his book, "'New Horizons," lay down an excellent practical groundwork from which any effective action must eventually begin. The remainder of this article will be devoted to a brief discussion of his proposals.

Although Wallace is not an intellectual, he is imbued with a strict sense of social morality that is seldom found outside the most comprehensive and logical philosophical cadres. This, one would guess, is due to a profound expansion of the private individual morality which for generations was severely inculcated into the members of his family, all of whom were deeply religious. The metamorphosis has resulted not merely in a social conception but in a social vision. Wallace pictures an ultimate democracy in which men's hearts are "aflame with the extraordinary beauty of the scientific, artistic and spiritual wealth now before us, if we only reach out confidently, together," and in which the uniqueness of each individual and community must be realized only with reference to the national and world community, by the necessity of individual self-discipline and faith in democracy. This can only be achieved by the same hard inner drive and self-abnegation that impelled early pioneers to conquer the wilderness.

NOW THAT the days of extensive colonization are over, Wallace writes, the days of intensive pioneering must begin. The horizons we must achieve are not less tangible merely because they are inner, not external, ones. They are more difficult to achieve, since they are in constant retreat before our strivings and cannot be measured in gains of land and water. To reach them will require an even more stubborn courage than that possessed by the early settlers. It will necessitate a spontaneous, voluntary collective sacrifice and individual, as well as mass, self-discipline. The effectiveness of a democracy lies in the effectiveness of its people, and the American people have avoided making decisions too long. Now, faced by the greatest peril in their history, they must deny short-term interests for long-term interests, and Wallace is convinced that this is possible, from the experience of the AAA and the NRA. In other words, we must advance by means of an "aroused, educated democracy" or not advance at all.

Wallace's practical economic thinking unites quite naturally with his sense of social morality. He can posit that modern democracy must be founded upon "mathematically moral" principles, and at the same time recognize that for a government to be democratic in the first place, it must achieve economic democracy and political democracy (in time of peace) without blueprint regimentation if our Government can successfully "manage the tariff and the money system, control railroad interest rates, and encourage price and production policies that will maintain a continually balanted relationship between the income of agriculture, labor, and industry." The accomplishment of this somewhat staggering task will be greatly expedited if many outworn but still popular misconceptions are abolished. A few of these fallacies, listed by Wallace, relate to price fixing as a result of cost of production, the relationship between agricultural and industrial incomes, the effects of increasing or decreasing the price of gold, the double-entry nature of any nation's balance of payments, and so on. Wallace also tries to demonstrate that mass rationalization and argument ad hominem will have to be lessened, and the new modern high of popular emotionalism reduced in order for democracy to work effectively and survive. This will also help to prevent the narrow interests of lobbies and pressure groups from blocking the long-term interests of the population.

GOVERNMENT MUST come to function as a sort of partner with business, labor, agriculture and consumers. Wallace has written, "We may not like it, but the hard facts are that for years government has been in business, and business in government, to a point where it is impossible to untangle the mess.

"The policy of partnership between government and business was started long before the Great War, as a result very largely of the Republican attitude on tariff, money and railroads. The important thing now is to find some sensible way of working together."

The public aversion to governmental interference in business has assumed the dimensions of a popular "devil" or bogey. These devils, in Wallace's opinion, must be destroyed and the public be taught to think intelligently and realistically, to preserve their democratic principles under changing conditions. Capitalism must be flexible in order to survive. Democracy must adapt itself to the present, or it will perish.

For Wallace believes that the only reason our policy from 1921 to 1932 did not prove nationally disastrous lies in our infinite resources, both human and geographical. He realizes the New Deal will not prove permanent unless every American citizen is brought to see that "we now demand a new unity, a new hope. There are many spiritual and mental frontiers yet to be conquered, but they lead in many different directions and our hearts have not yet fully warmed to any one of them. They do not point in an obvious single direction as did that downright physical challenge which, for so many generations, existed on the Western edge of our life. Now we have come to the time when we must search our souls and the relationship of our souls and bodies to those of other human beings."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Old Man And Jim

(With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley.)

Old Man never planned very much—
'Ceptin' with Jim—
And Jim was the smartest boy he ever had,
And the old man jes' wrapped up in him!
Never seen him do much
Without takin' it up with Jim;
The fust time was in 1932 when he Made up his mind to be President—
And all 'at I heerd the old man say
Was jes' as he turned to start away,
"Well, good-by, Jim;
Take keer yerse'f!"

II.

'Peared like he was heaps more confident
Jes' looking at Jim—
And liking him all to hisse'f-like, see?
'Cause he was jes' wrapped up in him!
And over and over I mind the day
The old man come and stood around in the way,
During the campaign, a-watchin' Jim—
And down at the deepo a-heerin' him say,
"Well, good-by, Jim:
Take keer yerse'f!"

III.

Never was nuthin' done election time without Jim:
The whole party ust to notice how
The old man 'peared wrapped up in him!
And then in thutty-two they writ back
'At Jim was the fightin'est man we ever had
In the whole dern battle, white or black,
Carryin' the flag thru the bloodiest battle you ever seen,
The old man wound up a letter to him
That made all the other workers green,
And the letter it said: "Tell Jim Good-by,
And take keer hisse'f!"

IV.

Jim went out agin in thutty-six
In fightin' trim
To put the old man across,
And the old man jes' wrapped up in him!
Jim said he'd never had sech luck before—
Guessed Frank was a cinch for four years more,
And the old man and Jim like two peas in a pod,
And even closer than that, I reckon, and
When Jim rid away
From coast to coast I heerd him say:
"Well, good-by, Jim:

V.

Then in 'forty things sorter changed—
Old man got a whim—
Seemed he wuz all wrapped up in something—
And it wasn't Jim!
Jim was left out in the cold and snow;
Old man wouldn't even give him a yes or no;
And then Jim went into new fields, chin up,
His advice jes' thrown to the winds,
And the old man's word ringing in his ears—
"Well, good-by, Jim;
I'LL TAKE KEER MYSE'F!"

Bottoms Up!

I find that I'm a man who's not Inclined to sip long Cuba Libres—
I've always shied from seeing pink
Elephants and yellow zebras.
Although hard drinks are okey-doke,
I'll settle for a cherry-coke!
—Richard Avedon.

Summer in Washington

Going to School and Liking It

By Lucia Giddens.

A hubbub of hammering and sawing announced that scores of youngsters had found a solution to the twin problem of spare time and safety during the summer.

At Powell Junior High School and nine other locations, "hobby shops" are filled with children who are much too earnest to consider themselves as merely tinkering.

Safe off the streets, learning new skills and turning out objects calculated to impress their parents, the children have discovered an outlet for summer-in-town energy.

ROWS of boys and one girl are engaged in a clutter of tasks at Powell, as an example of the city-wide program.

Patricia Bush, 13, and her brother, Jack, 12, of 3500 Thirteenth street northwest, are working on a coffee table and an end table. Between the two of them, they're practically finishing the furnishing of their new home here.

"We just moved here from Oklahoma City a few months ago," Patricia said. "We needed little knickknacks, such as lamps and tables and magazine racks—so Jack and I've been making 'em."

ALONGSIDE such expert young cabinetmakers, a little boy panted slightly over the complexities of his first bookshelf. Although it was a trifle askew, he said he didn't believe his mother would notice the fact.

Louis Cohen, 14, of 2801 Cortland place northwest, was making a photographic enlarger. Pointing to the shiny lamp housing, he explained: "That was a popcorn can, in its day."

Bernard Donnelly, 13, son of Mrs. E. S. Donnelly, president of the school Parent-Teacher Association, was turning out a plant stand to help him pass his craft test in Boy Scout work.

JOHN H. WILLIAMS, instructor at the hobby shop, said that some days the children come in such crowds that they have to be divided into two shifts. The shop will hold comfortably only about 32 students, but on a recent day 39 came in the morning and 37 in the afternoon. Some of the same children attended both periods in their enthusiasm.

Crowds are larger this summer than last, he said, as news of the shops spread. The shops in the various junior high schools open at 10 a. m. every week-day and continue to midafternoon. No fees are charged, and even the materials are furnished by the Community Centers and Playgrounds Department, which are handling the program.

The number of wood shops for white pupils last year, four, was doubled this summer and in addition one of the schools, Macfarland, is experimenting with a metal shop along with its woodwork.

THE junior high schools with shops for white pupils are Eliot, Macfarland, Jefferson, Paul, Langley, Gordon, Hine and Powell.

The two schools which have opened such shops for colored pupils this summer are Banneker and Francis Junior High Schools.

Harry English, assistant director of the Community Centers and Playgrounds Department, sees beyond the immediate outlet given to the children and points out that "we're helping to give them hobbies to interest them long after they stop playing baseball."

Odd Jobs

A Practicing Woman Mechanic

Mrs. Annie E. Gross jacks up a patron's car

By Joe Mathias.

MRS. Annie E. Gross, 58-year-old automobile mechanic, of Fairfax County, Va., wiped a grease smear off her face and chuckled.

"Man, I've been working all my life," she said. "So it comes to me easy."

Mrs. Gross' right arm was deformed at birth, but it doesn't handicap her—"no indeedy." Her left arm is as good as two arms and she can do anything around a garage from changing tires to assembling a motor.

THIS is how she came to get into the garage business:

One day in 1924, her car broke down. She took it to a garage, but the mechanic was too busy to work on it. However, he permitted her to use the garage to make her own repairs, and she did such a good job that he hired her as an assistant.

"I've been in the garage business off and on ever since," she said.

Mrs. Gross was helping her boss install a clutch. It looked like a man's size job, but she just laughed.

"Why man, these are easy times. Many's the time I've had to go down to old Camp Humphrey and lie down in the snow to put axles in trucks."

A life of hard work, first on her father's farm in Prince William County "9 miles from nowhere" and then in the garage business, has given Mrs. Gross a philosophical outlook. Asked if she enjoyed working, she replied:

"Well, there's no use to say I don't. I would have to work anyhow."

Since her husband lost his job last fall as a painter's helper, she has been working steadily at Hevie's Automotive Service, Wilson boulevard and Glebe road, Arlington County.

HER husband tends the livestock on their 6-acre farm near Lincolnia, Va., in Fairfax County, and her oldest son, 35 years old, works in a brickyard. She has another grown son and two grandchildren, aged 3 and 4 years.

Democrats Hear Report On Chicago

Mrs. Tucker Brown Tells Club Women Came Into Own At the Convention

WOMEN of the Democratic Party came into their own at the Chicago convention, Mrs. David Tucker Brown, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, told members of the study group meeting at the club yesterday. Mrs. Brown, who was a member of the women's advisory committee, said most of the planks offered by this body were incorporated in the platform, and the greatest triumph was the 50-50 representation given the women on the resolutions committee. This means that in the future there will be a woman from every State on the platform committee, she said.

Mrs. Brown paid tribute to the serious attitude of the women at the convention and asserted they were not relegated to the background, as in former years, but the men sought their advice and counsel.

BANK WOMEN MEET—Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Saugstad this evening will open their home, Arcturus, on the Potomac River just off Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, to members of the Bank Women's Club of Washington. Arrangements for the visit to their unusual studio home, built entirely by their own hands, are in charge of Miss Alice Whitton, a member of the board of governors of the club.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Saugstad are artists, he having taught wood carving and metal crafts at McKinley Technical High School and she being a portrait painter of note. Mrs. Saugstad is the former Eugenie DeLand, whose father was at one time a director of the Riggs National Bank.

Their home, in addition to being a place of interest in itself, is filled with objects of art and curios from all parts of the world. The dining room of the house, at the request of the Cleveland Museum, they have bequeathed to that institution, to be removed their at their deaths. It is unique in design and Mr. and Mrs. Saugstad have decorated it themselves. They even poured the concrete blocks forming the paths in their gardens and Mr. Saugstad built the ponds, in one of which is a "spring" which can be turned on and off at will.

The bank women will be shown through the house and garden and also will visit Mrs. Saugstad's studio, the guest house and doll house which are on the property.

EVA ROCKER, of the Riggs National Bank, a member of the board of directors of the Bank Women's Club, has recently been elected chairman of the Safe Deposit Section of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association.

Three new members of the club will be present this evening as special guests. They are Mrs. Elizabeth Rowsee, of the Hamilton National Bank; Miss Leona Draeger, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and Mrs. Eleanor Connor, of the National Metropolitan Bank.

Miss Katharine McCalmont is president of the club.

JUNIOR DAUGHTERS BUSY—Under the energetic leadership of Mrs. James H. B. Bogman, of Wellington Villa, Alexanria, the junior section of the District Chapter of the Daughters of the United States Army has taken on new life this summer.

Saturday afternoon the fourth meeting of this active subchapter of the nation-wide organization was held at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Tom Rives in George Washington Park, Alexandria. Recently the Army Daughters took a moonlight cruise down the Potomac, the proceeds of which were for the American Red Cross.

The next meeting is to be held August 17, when Mrs. Bogman will be hostess at an evening wiener roast for the Army girls and their escorts.

RECEIVE AWARD—The Washington alumnae of Delta Zeta Sorority received first prize at the recent national convention of the sorority for their publicity scrapbook and were also given honorable mention for having the largest and most varied collection of work in the talent display. This exhibition, showing the achievement of the sorority members in different fields, is always a feature of the national convention.

New officers elected at the recent conclave held in Mackinac Island, Mich., were: President, Mrs. Hubert M. Lundy, Bloomington, Ind.; alumnae vice president, Miss Florence Hood, Chicago; extension vice president, Mrs. James E. Keezel, Winter Park, Fla.; membership vice president, Mrs. Guy H. Gale, Fort Lewis, Wash.; secretary, Mrs. C. A. Fariss, Portland, Oreg.; treasurer, Miss Frances Westcott, Indianapolis.

15 Child Refugees Enjoying 'Camp' Life at Greenbelt

Fifteen children refugees from Germany and Austria began yesterday to settle down to the routine of "camp" life at Greenbelt, Md., where they are guests of the community for two weeks.

An outing has been arranged for seven girl "campers" by the Girl Scouts of Prince Georges County, to be held today the Girl Scout camp near Good Luck and Edmonston roads.

Greenbelt children have arranged a party for 2:30 p. m. tomorrow and the Rev. Robert Kincheloe of the Community Church plans a message of welcome at Sunday services.

Employment Men to Confer On Defense

100 State Officials To Meet Here Today; Plan Labor Survey

Nearly 100 State employment officials will meet in Washington today to prepare for a Nation-wide inventory of America's workingmen planned by the Social Security Board and the National Defense Commission.

The conference, called by the Social Security Board, will bring together directors of employment security agencies and employment services from every State in the country.

Their three-day discussion will center on the program, announced yesterday, for enlisting 4,500 employment offices in a drive to collect all available facts about labor supplies and labor needs to speed up the national defense.

The inventory was ordered following a report from the Social Security Board's advisory council, urging an eight-point program to streamline operations of the public employment services for the defense emergency.

"The national defense emergency sharpens the need of knowing what workers are available, where they are, and what they can do—or what they could do with minimum training," the council said.

They urged reconditioning public employment services to permit meeting normal and emergency labor needs "with a minimum of time, expense and confusion."

The program outlined yesterday called for employment offices to obtain from employers reports on their present and future labor needs and seek their agreement not to recruit workers outside their own localities before the employment office tries to furnish them.

Workers themselves, employed and unemployed, will be urged to register with their local employment offices, and not to move to new communities without first checking on their chances for work.

The registration will be geared to find likely candidates for public training and retraining courses designed to prepare labor for defense industries.

Italians Don't Like the War, Stewart Says

Agriculture Official Left Rome Two Days Before It Joined Nazis

The Italian people did not welcome their country's entrance into the war, members of the Zonta Club were told yesterday by John L. Stewart, chief of information for the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, Department of Agriculture.

Stewart was United States representative at the fifteenth assembly of the International Institute of Agricultural Relations in Rome, May 20 to 24. He left there just two days before Italy entered the conflict, and returned to Washington only ten days ago. He spoke yesterday at the club luncheon in the Y. W. C. A.

There were posters everywhere in Rome designed to incite feeling against the British, he said, but except for a certain faction, there was little evidence that the propaganda was taking hold. The war was unpopular with the Italians in general, he said.

Stewart sailed from Naples June 8, aboard the Excalibur, the last passenger ship to take the regular Mediterranean route to Egypt, Palestine and back to Greece and Naples.

He was surprised to find the United States in the midst of its defense program when he arrived home, having received little news of this country's activities. The radio news coming here from European commentators is more complete and accurate than that broadcast in English for European consumption, he told the Zontians.

Mud Saves Woman In 75-Foot Plunge

Woodstock, Va., July 24 (AP).—Deep mud saved Mrs. Flossie Jenkins from possible serious injury when she tumbled 75 feet into a quarry near Strasburg last night. She landed feet first in the mud.

Tax on Profits May Produce $700,000,000

Measure Is Expected To Reach Committee Within Two Weeks

The excess profits tax bill now being worked out by Treasury and Congressional experts may produce as much as $700,000,000, it was learned yesterday.

It was further indicated that the ticklish question of computing excess profits may be resolved by a formula based on a combination of a corporation's average income over a period of years and the relation of earnings to invested capital.

However, if the experts are unable to evolve a satisfactory formula combining both elements they are expected to recommend a bill which will calculate excess profits:

(1) On a basis of average income for an arbitrarily determined "base period;"

(2) On a basis of relation between income and capital investment; or

(3) On either basis, leaving the choice up to the corporation paying the tax.

The tax measure, which is designed to hold down profits from the national defense program as well as to help pay for rearmament, is expected to be ready for presentation to the full Ways and Means Committee of the House within two weeks. Final passage by both House and Senate, however, is not looked for before the end of August at the earliest.

A meeting of leading Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee and House Tax subcommittee with Treasury and Congressional tax experts will be held Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, and the bill is expected to be ready for formal consideration by the Ways and Means Committee a few days later. Fairly extensive hearings will be held.

The measure will apply to corporations only, and not to partnerships or individuals, on the theory that individuals are already reached through the higher personal income taxes passed a few weeks ago.

Connally May Defer Bill

One hitch in smooth passage of the excess profits measure may come if Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, insists on pressing forward, as an amendment, his bill to force loans to the Federal Government in wartime.

On the other hand, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, has intimated that he will not attempt to force through his bill for heavy income taxes effective on declaration of war. This measure, which passed the Senate as an amendment to the last tax bill but was thrown out in conference, will be advanced, however, when the long-awaited general tax revision gets under way in the new Congress next year.

Station PDS Presents Coloratura Soprano

Over Station WMAL this morning you will hear classical and semiclassical songs sung by Miss Marjorie Hamlin Miller, the guest artist on the PDS program. Miss Miller attended the Peabody Conservatory of Music, and has appeared on the radio several times. This is Miss Miller's third appearance on the PDS program.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL, by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Reed Recalls His 1932 Help To Roosevelt

Memory Must Be 'Poor as Judgment,' He Says of President

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 24.—James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri, said tonight that if President Roosevelt "has forgotten all my efforts for him in 1932, then his recollections must be as poor as his judgment."

Reed, who has offered to organize independent Democrats to support Wendell L. Willkie, issued a statement in reply to remarks made by President Roosevelt at a press conference yesterday. The President told reporters Reed was well qualified from experience to lead Democrats opposed to the party's Presidential candidate because he had done the same thing in 1932 and 1936 and perhaps in 1928.

Reed said he made a trip from Kansas City to Albany at the request of Mr. Roosevelt during the latter's first campaign in 1932. As a result of that conference, Reed added, he followed Herbert Hoover and made replies to the Republican candidate's speeches at various points, "and I was highly complimented by Mr. Farley and other Democrats."

Reed asserted he aided in the campaign of Alfred E. Smith in 1928 and that "I separated from Mr. Roosevelt when he repudiated the principles of the platform of 1932 upon which he was elected."

Of the President's remark that we all remember that sweatshop matter, Reed denied that he had ever been connected with such an enterprise.

"It is true that Mrs. Reed is in business just as Mrs. Roosevelt is in business, but any statement to the effect that Mrs. Reed has ever run a sweatshop is infamously false and has been found to be false by four United States judges.

"Even if Mr. Roosevelt has little regard for the judgment of courts, his Wage and Hour Administration, if asked, would be compelled to advise him that the wages paid at the Donnelly Garment Co. (of which Mrs. Reed is president) are now and have been far in excess of the wages required under the wage-and-hour law and those paid in union shops in this section of the United States.

"This Mr. Roosevelt could have discovered before he went out of the record for the purpose of making an assault upon a woman who has committed no other offense than to be married to me."

U. S. Trade in June Rises by 8 Per Cent, Despite Wider War

Boosted by a huge increase in the value of war material shipped to the United Kingdom and a large rise in the value of airplanes sent to France before her surrender, American exports in June withstood the shock of Italy's entrance into the war and rose 8 per cent over May, a preliminary Commerce Department study revealed yesterday.

June shipments, though slightly below the peak reached in January, were $344,000,000, more than 40 per cent larger than the average for June, 1939, 1938 or 1937.

Dempseys Going Home To Open Senate Race

By Dudley Harmon

WITH CONGRESS in summer session over defense measures, "fence mending" by Senators and Representatives has had to go mostly by the board. One-third of the membership of the Senate are running for office again, but they're having to do their campaigning with the left hand in order to stick to their jobs here.

Taking advantage of a current lull in Congress, Representative John Dempsey is leaving in a few days to return to New Mexico to start his race for Senator. His opponent will be Dennis Chavez, and politicos say the campaign will be a hot one. Mr. Dempsey has been in the House six years, and has seen most of his bills become law. He recently made the headlines for his work in getting the Hatch bill through the House.

His dark-haired, attractive wife will go with him and expects to stay on at their home in Santa Fe. Representative Dempsey will only be away for about a week. Senator Chavez's office says that the Senator hasn't yet decided when he will be able to get away.

Author, Maj. George Fielding Eliot, Mistaken for Gen. Hugh Johnson

LOUIS DE ROCHEMONT'S dog strolled into the party given by his master and other officials of Time after the showing of "The Ramparts We Watch" on Tuesday. As the animal was almost exactly the same shade as the carpet, he was stepped on right and left, but stuck it out for several hours.

"There's Gen. Hugh Johnson," someone suddenly remarked. It turned out to be Maj. George Fielding Eliot, from whose best selling book on national defense the title of the "Time" film was taken.

Military men, newspaper folk, and diplomats were in the majority at "Time's" party. Admiral and Mrs. Albert Johnson chatted with Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles. From British circles came the Escott Reids, John Foster and Angus Malcolm. Mr. Foster hopes to leave later in the summer for a business trip to California.

The Thurman Arnolds were there (Mr. Arnold's new book, "Bottlenecks of Business," a successor to "Folklore of Capitalism," comes out next month).

Thurman Arnolds Give Pre-Theater Party On Porch of Their Virginia Home

THE ARNOLDS gave a pleasant dinner on the porch of their Virginia home before the movie. The storm kept some away, but determined ones who drove out through the mud included Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, W. L. Batt, one of the volunteers who are working for the National Defense Commission at the request of the President; his son, William; Lloyd Embrie, talented young portrait painter; George Abell and Mr. and Mrs. Quinn.

Hit of the party was Ruth Ophelia Whidden, a colored child dressed in a brief white frock with a red ribbon in her hair. She opened the door for the guests, and handed around heaping platters of fried chicken and ham.

Frazier Hunt Back From Europe Feted by Col. William Shipp

FRAZIER HUNT, famous newspaper correspondent whose ranch in Canada adjoins that of the Duke of Windsor, is in town after a year of European reporting. Col. William Shipp gave a small dinner in his honor last night.

Here at Miss Mary Johnson's apartment after a mad dash over most of Europe is Mrs. Richard Mowrer. The former Rosamond Cole, erstwhile Capital newspaperwoman, she landed in this country in June, leaving her reporter-husband to cover the British Near East Army in Egypt.

Mrs. Mowrer was in Stockholm when war broke out, and then toured Italy and the Balkans with her husband. Her most exciting trip was a tour of French army camps in Syria.

A creator of many of England's leading documentary films, John Grierson has been here on business for the last few days. A Scotsman, he now holds the post of government film commissioner of Canada. Mr. Grierson, who worked as an able seaman on a minesweeper in the last war, has just commissioned a Canadian documentary picture, "The Undefended Frontier," a story of Canadian-United States relations. The Canadian government is producing documentary films now at the rate of one every two weeks.

Mrs. Downe Arrives in U. S.

Mrs. Henry F. Downe, for 25 years a resident of Paris, but equally well known here, where she frequently visited, is among the last of the American refugees to return from France.

Mrs. Downe arrived in New York day before yesterday on the liner Exeter. According to the New York Times, Mrs. Downe was one of the "very few" permitted to inspect the Maginot Line prior to the war. In an interview in New York she is quoted as saying that it was "one of the most invincible fortresses I ever saw."

Mrs. Downe also said, according to the interview, that the Germans conquered France only because of "a complete sellout by the French politicians. You can shriek that out from the housetops."

With her late husband, Mrs. Downe was for many years a leading American hostess in the French capital. Her exquisitely furnished home in the rue Verdi, with its terraced gardens, was the scene of frequent parties. The late Mr. Downe was a member of the board of governors of several leading American charities in Paris and his wife was an active worker for the American Aid Society, which helps to raise money for Americans stranded in Europe.

Last in Washington in 1939, Mrs. Downe was entertained at the White House and by many prominent members of Capital society.

Foxes Now On Motor Trip

Former Evelyn Snider And Husband to Make Home in Takoma Park

Mr. and Mrs. Jean De Witt Fox, who were married on Sunday in the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Takoma Park, will make their home in Takoma Park after a motor trip.

The bride, the former Miss Evelyn Winifred Snider, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dwight Snider. Mr. Fox is the son of Mrs. Ruth Fox, of Glendale, Calif. The Rev. Francis N. Nichol officiated at their wedding.

Mrs. J. Dennie Snider Matron of Honor

Mr. Snider gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown of white marquisette and satin was made with a sweetheart neckline and trimmed with Rembrandt ruching, which also bordered the hem and train. Her finger-tip veil fell from a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses with an orchid center.

Mrs. J. Dennie Snider served as matron of honor for her sister-in-law, wearing yellow net and carrying gladioli and blue delphinium. The other attendants were Mrs. Paul Weirts, who wore pink, and Miss Anne Parker, who chose aqua. Their bouquets were of gladiola. Little Fern Gibson served as flower girl, wearing white net over orchid taffeta.

Reception Follows The Ceremony

Gene Hackleman, of Springfield, Ohio, was best man. The ushers were Jewel Peake and William Buchanan.

A reception on the lawn of the Snider home followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Fox took a prenursing course in Columbia Junior College, Takoma Park, and was later graduated from Washington Sanitarium Training School. Mr. Fox was graduated from the Glendale Union Academy and last year completed his premedical course in Columbia Junior College. He has been appointed sales manager of the Washington College Press and will take his medical course later.

Dr. and Mrs. Dye Leave On California Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, who are making their home at the Wardman Park Hotel this season, left Monday for California. They will visit Los Angeles, the Yosemite National Park and San Francisco.

Dr. Dye, who is in the diplomatic service, will attend the National Foreign Trade convention in San Francisco the latter part of this month, and they will return to Washington about the middle of August.

He will return to California August 15 to attend the University of Southern California.

Eleanor Brower Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Kevan

Purcellville Girl To Make Home In Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The Bethany Methodist Church at Purcellville, Va., was the scene of a colorful wedding at noon yesterday when Miss Eleanor Randolph Brower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ford Brower, of Purcellville, became the bride of Lieut. William Parham Kevan, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parham Kevan, of Petersburg, Va. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. H. Smallwood, pastor of the church.

The color scheme of the church decorations was green and white, with a profusion of Queen Anne's lace and white summer flowers. Mrs. N. B. Hawthorne, jr., of Purcellville, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely costume of white brocade satin, fashioned princess style, with a sweetheart neckline. The skirt was finished with a short train and her fingertip illusion veil fell from a cap of pearls with a spray of orange blossoms across the front. She carried white roses and gypsophelia.

Mary Pattie Maid of Honor

Miss Mary Currell Pattie, of Manassas, Va., the bride's cousin, was the maid of honor. She wore a pink net gown over pink taffeta, made with a full, floor-length skirt, short sleeves and a square neckline. Her headdress was a veil of matching shade, fastened to the head on either side with flowers which matched her bouquet of white snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Marie Kevan, of Petersburg, Va., sister of the bridegroom; Janet Welsh and Yvonne Paxson, of Purcellville, and Gertrude Love, of Charlottesville. Their costumes were of orchid net over taffeta and aqua net over taffeta, made similar to that of the maid of honor, and with matching veils. They carried arm bouquets of pink snapdragons and white cosmos.

The best man was Charles H. Heinemann, jr., of Albany, Ga., and the ushers were Robert, William and Charles Brower 3d, of Purcellville; Benjamin T. Kinsey, Benjamin M. Hill, jr., and Harrison Willcox, all of Petersburg, Va.

Couple on Trip To North Carolina

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents in Purcellville. The couple left later for a wedding trip to Kill Devil Hills, N. C., the bride wearing a blue gabardine suit with white jacket and white accessories. They will reside at Tuscaloosa, Ala., where Lieut. Kevan is on duty at present.

The bride is a graduate of a Washington business school and has been living in Washington for several years. Lieut. Kevan is a graduate of V. M. I. and the United States Military Academy.

William Nights On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Night are en route to Cape Cod following a brief stop in New York City on their wedding trip. Upon their return the couple will live in Binghamton, N. Y. The marriage of the former Miss Elizabeth Dewey took place Saturday, July 20, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Irving Dewey, of Takoma Park, Md. Mr. Night is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Night, of Syracuse, N. Y. The Rev. Paul Schearrer officiated at the 12 o'clock ceremony.

Mrs. Irwin Clarke sang several solos, accompanied by Miss Margaret Sweet on the violin. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white chiffon gown and carried an arm bouquet of shaggy white asters. She wore a string of pearls and a heart-shaped pendant.

The couple dispensed with attendants. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast in the garden of Mrs. Kay's Toll House Tavern.

Down from Syracuse for the wedding were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Night, their daughter, Patricia; Mrs. George Richter, Miss Eleanor Dickinson and Leslie Doremus, of New York.

Mr. Night attended Syracuse University and the Syracuse College of Law.

Daughter Is Born To William Abells

Mr. and Mrs. William Shepherdson Abell announce the birth of a daughter on July 21 at Doctor's Hospital.

Mrs. Abell was the former Patricia O'Callaghan, of Montclair, N. J. Mr. Abell is an attorney.

To Live in Alabama

Mrs. William Lyon Porte, who before her marriage recently to Lieut. Porte was Miss Matile Griswold, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold, of Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Griswold, until recently stationed in Washington, commands the Twenty-ninth Infantry at Fort Benning, where the wedding took place, with military ceremony. Lieut. Porte, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Porte, of Washington. The couple will make their home in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where Lieut. Porte will attend the U. S. Army Flying School

Mrs. Moran Drury Fetes Newlyweds At Country Club

Mrs. Moran Drury was hostess at a mint julep party yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club in honor of Comdr. and Mrs. Edwin Eddagorde who have just returned from a honeymoon. The bride is the former Mrs. Margaret Sunderland.

About 100 guests attended the party, among them the brother and sister-in-law of the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, and members of the Army and Navy set, as well as several diplomats.

Rep. Barton's Son to Marry Chicago Girl

To Wed Jane Barton, Not a Relative, at Oak Park Tomorrow

Of interest to Chicago, New York and Washington is the announcement of the marriage to take place tomorrow of Miss Jane Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Barton, of Oak Park, near Chicago, to Randall Barton, son of Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, of New York and Washington. The young couple are not related. The announcement comes as a complete surprise for no formal announcement of the engagement has been made. The couple were introduced to each other just a few months ago when young Randall Barton made a visit to Chicago.

Bruce Barton, jr., will be his brother's best man. Representative and Mrs. Barton and their daughter, Betty, will attend the wedding.

The bride-to-be attended school in this city and is well known in art circles. The prospective bridegroom studied at Deerfield, Mass., and attended Amherst. He is employed by the General Motors Corporation, in Detroit. After a motor trip the couple will make their home in a Detroit suburb.

Representative Barton is head of the advertising firm of Batten, Barton, Durstin & Osborne. The bride-elect's father is a member of the Chicago branch of the same advertising firm.

Archdukes Otto And Felix in D. C., Empress in Mass.

Archdukes Otto and Felix—the former is pretender to the nonexistent Hapsbourg throne—are in Washington for a few days and are staying at the Shoreham. They are here "to see friends," but no formal parties have been planned in their honor. Both were widely entertained on a visit to the Capital in the spring.

Their mother, the Empress Zita, who arrived in this country by clipper last week, has gone to Royalston, Mass., where an American friend has put a home at her disposal.

To Vacation

Mrs. Thomas Edmiston Drake, Miss Helen Morton Drake and Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will leave tomorrow for a fortnight's vacation on Lake Champlain, near Burlington, Vt.

On the Street Car

"Oh, hello! What on earth are you doing here?"

"Oh, hello! What are you?"

"Oh, I—I just had to go a short distance and I—I didn't see a cab . . .

"That's the way with me—and it's so hot to stand and wait . . "

"Yes, and another thing there are so many accidents. It really makes me nervous to ride in cabs."

"Me too."

"You know these street cars ride very smoothly!"

"They do for a fact!"

"Another thing, you see so many interesting types on a street car."

"Yes, it's really very educational."

"You know, I think it's really good for us to get out once in a while and see how the other half lives."

"So do I. We live too narrow lives.'

"Yes and besides, I think at a time like this we've simply got to get down to simple things."

"So do I! It's good for us!"

"Say, you'll never guess who I ran on to the other day on the street car—Mrs. Wynkoop Bigger!"

"No!"

"Yes! I was waiting for a cab, and a car came along, and I jumped on it to get out of the sun, and who on earth should I see but Mrs. Bigger!

"Of all things!

"Yes, she said they had let their chauffeur go for the summer as things were so uncertain and she didn't like cabs because the drivers talked so much and anyway, well she said she had just taken to riding the street cars."

"Well, I expect a lot of people will be coming to it," before long.

"I don't doubt it."

"Well, of course I wouldn't want to be on a street car in a crowd, but once in a great while like this I don't mind it."

"Me either—for a few blocks.'

"Say, are we getting near Fourteenth street? I have to transfer."

"So do I. Now where on earth is my pass?"

"I'd better see if I have mine—you know I borrowed my maid's to come down town on. I just thought there was no use letting it go to waste."

"Well, I—I just bought one. I thought we'd have it in the family and the children might like to ride—now where on earth did I put it? I always carry it—that is I had it in a folder—oh, here it is!"

"Here's mine—or rather the maid's. Which way do you go?"

"North. Which way do you?"

"Oh, I have to go way out southeast."

"Well, it's been nice seeing you—it's been quite an adventure hasn't it?"

"Yes, quite."

Glamorous Pick-Up for In-Between Blacks

One of the most appealing bits of neckwear seen lately is the Lillian Russell neckpiece and cuff set, borrowed from the fabulous ruffles and flounces of that great beauty's day. This double ruffle collar is of snowy mousseline de soie with a V-neckline which tucks into the top of most dinner or daytime dresses. Because mousseline washes and presses easily this is an accessory note that might well be included in most in-between season wardrobes

Budget Income For Vacation By Planning

THEIR evenings spoiled—so unnecessarily—with talk of money matters! Naturally, the husband resents such use of his leisure time, but what can a wife do? Unbudgeted finances will run wild.

Right when she needs a new permanent, the installment for the refrigerator is due—and however will she pay for Junior's vacation at camp?

Budgeting could end such worries. On a budget you don't wait for needs to arise and then scramble around for the money. You plan ahead—and plan not only for the needs but for the pleasures.

For such items as vacations and personal allowances you set up an Advancement Fund—giving it about 14 per cent of your monthly income, $22.40 if the total is $160. This fund you divide according to your desires; the wife's allowance will be large enough to care for such items as permanents and carfare.

But how can planning make not enough money enough? By finding out what portions of your income you should allot to regular expense — rent, food, household operating—you may find that your spending has been top-heavy.

Perhaps your rent is taking too large a slice of your income. Wise to pay not more than a week's salary for a month's rent. Often, too, you can make economies in your food bill. Examine refrigerator left-overs each morning—see how they can be used. Then add your savings to other funds. Chances are you'll be amazed at how much money you really have.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Doris Dean, Atlanta's Gift to Wrestling, Doesn't Recommend 'Sport' for Reducing

DORIS DEAN is Atlanta's gift to wrestling, the sport that's bringing vaudeville back. Blond and 22, Doris was encouraged to go into the ring by her cousin, Man Mountain Dean. She's been at it two years, she said after a recent bout at the Riverside Stadium here, and loves it.

It's a tough life, she admits. She plans to call it a day in three or four more years and go into the restaurant business back home. She's supposed to run three miles a day to keep in training. She loses a pound during each bout, but doesn't recommend the sport as a reducing exercise. For one thing, she eats it all back the next day; for another, "most ladies just can't take it," she believes.

On the taking end, Doris herself has had to undergo four nasal operations during her wrestling career. She also dishes it out, though. Pointing to a protruding knuckle on her left hand, she said casually, "knocked three teeth out with that the other night."

FLOTSAM OF THE AIR WAVES—"Ladies and gentlemen, this month we honor the foster-mother of the human race: the cow."

SAID-TO-BE-TRUE STORY: Not so many years ago a Washington girl had a brief fling with a dashing chap introduced to her at a party as the Ambassador of—let us say—Melonia. For several weeks he pelted her with flowers and telephoned her every day. In fact, she was trying to decide whether or not to marry him when the bubble burst.

He failed to appear for a date one night, so she called him at the embassy. The Ambassador was polite but made it clear he'd never heard of her; besides, he was 50 and married. He was as mad as she was when he heard the story of the impersonation. At his request, she went to the embassy, inspected a line-up of his servants, but said she could not identify the culprit.

Next day she received a large shipment of flowers and a farewell note from the embassy cook, thanking her for her generosity in not exposing him.

On the day that France asked for an armistice, the wife of a South American diplomat sent flowers to Frau Thomsen and Princess Colonna of the German and Italian embassies.

The only woman who did her Thanksgiving marketing in June is Mrs. Earl L. Packer, wife of the first secretary of the American Legation in Riga, Latvia. While here on leave with her husband last month, she collected quantities of canned sweet potatoes, chestnuts and cranberry sauce to take back with her for a Thanksgiving feast come November. The sad part of the story is that the Packers, now en route to Riga, may arrive to find Latvia's petition to join the Soviet Union has been accepted and that the American Legation is no more. In that case Mrs. Packer, before starting the long trip home, probably will get out her can opener and go to work on her Thanksgiving dinner then and there.

Travelers on a Chevy Chase Circle bus recently would have liked to ask a lot of questions of one of their fellow-passengers. The woman, rising to leave the bus, noticed an acquaintance and said to her, "You remember Edith, don't you? Well, she killed her mother the other day." The second woman looked flabbergasted, as did the other passengers.

"Yes, killed her and then dragged her down the stairs," concluded the woman of few words as she stepped on the treadle and left the bus.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife of Socially Prominent Man of Means Needs Medical Care to Avoid Collapse, Yet Dares Not Seek It Because of His Avarice; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My childhood was spent in a gilded cage. My father was a despot and my mother was at once a saint, a martyr and a heroine. My state of mind, on entering womanhood, was such that I welcomed any semblance or promise of normal living as reward for past suffering. But Fate was intent on testing me further. My marriage would make a chapter worth including in Dante's "Inferno." Thanks to strength of character and certain stern, old-fashioned virtues my mother had inculcated in me, I have managed to survive thus far—although crushed in spirit.

Some years ago, after a long struggle, I succeeded in obtaining my husband's permission to go back to my native country—taking our children, a boy and a girl. This was on condition that I support the three of us out of a small inheritance I had from my godfather, and this I was able to do. (My father had lost everything in Monte Carlo.)

I was happy to be able, at last, to build a peaceful home (a real home) for the three of us. And whatever my financial trials may have been, during this four years' respite, I never once asked my husband for anything. The period was not entirely exempt from fear, however, due to frequent hints in his letters about our return. Then last year he wrote to say the children's education must be completed in the United States and that he was, therefore, ordering me either to come back or send the children to him. (Thus far his paternal interest in his offspring had expressed itself solely in brutal, unjust punishments).

I came back with them. I had no choice. Although we live separately—as his work keeps him in New York City—he pays us occasional visits. And while we are apparently on friendly terms, my nerves cannot stand either his perpetual interference or the sense of his proximity. I am oppressed by his constant hatred and rancor, which express themselves in a hundred little ways. Divorce is out of the question. He is against it. All this is rapidly destroying the last vestiges of my physical and moral endurance—and therein lies my problem.

My husband earns a good income, but out of my own funds I must support myself and the children, which is difficult, in view of living costs in this country. In addition, his position burdens me with considerable and expensive social duties. Yet he pays only for the children's education.

I need very desperately to consult a nerve specialist if I am to avoid a breakdown—or something worse. Sometimes, during sleepless nights, I feel that I am verging on insanity. But how can I afford a doctor's treatment? When he knows who I am he will charge me according to my husband's social situation—with which my funds are by no means commensurate. Should I, therefore, go to him under my maiden name? Would that be fair?

Intuition—or the instinct for self-preservation—tells me there must be good doctors whose fees would be within my budget. We live on $300 a month. And perhaps you can refer me to such a one. But what doctor will ever believe that a lady in my position has not the means to secure his professional services? Please tell me what to do. Thanking you in anticipation, I am very sincerely yours, A. A. W.

Means of Redress Exist And Should Be Invoked

DEAR A. A. W.: You have paid a heavy price in suffering for leading too sheltered a life; for being too much a babe in life's great woods. As I see the picture, nothing except your fright and your ignorance of the mechanics of legal redress (and of your rights before the law) has kept you ground beneath the heel of your husband's despotism these many years.

If he is (as I assume) a citizen of this country, hence subject to its laws, he is inescapably responsible for the financial support of his wife and children—and the fact that you happened to inherit some money in no wise absolves him of this lawful obligation.

Furthermore, his attitude as described affords grounds twice over for divorce (or legal separation) and alimony maintenance of yourself and the children, on grounds (a) of nonsupport and (b) of mental cruelty of such proportions as to render your married life intolerable and undermine your health to the breaking point.

The fact that he is opposed to the idea of divorce need not and SHOULD NOT restrain you from invoking the protection and succor which the law is prepared to give. (And even though your religion, or his, may prohibit "absolute divorce"—which conveys the legal right to marry again—nevertheless, I am sure that if the truth of the situation were disclosed to the proper ecclesiastical authorities, they would concede you the right to seek and obtain "legal separation," or "limited divorce," which is "separation from bed and board.")

You may argue that you cannot afford the expense of divorce, and if that is your belief, then again ignorance is imprisoning you—since in legal contests, where the plaintiff is indisputably the innocently injured party, the defendant usually is ordered to pay the costs of litigation.

Thus, if separate maintenance offers the basic solution of your perilous wretchedness; if you have the courage to embrace that solution, and if your husband does, indeed command "a good income"—then I am sure that any capable lawyer would represent you on a "contingent" basis. That is to say, his belief in (a) the justice of your cause and (b) his competence, would prompt him to act in your behalf, because confident that he could win the case and his own expenses from the defendant.

Concerning the health angle of your problem, it is difficult to say whether you most need psychiatric or medical help. Therefore, the most intelligent step is to see a first-rank diagnostician. Put all thought of expense out of mind. That requirement will be met in due course. Either he will accommodate his fee to your budgetary limitations or he will treat you without immediate regard to cost (telling you to forget about the bill until your health is restored), or he will blandly (and legally and properly) hold your lawfully wedded husband to be his debtor for services rendered to you.

Moreover, no doctor can really help you unless and until he fully understands the financial, social and emotional pressures troubling you. You would be wasting time in consulting any doctor (however skilled and humane) so long as you presented yourself in false guise or withheld from him any of the painful truth. If, after reading these remarks, you wish to telephone me, I shall be glad to give you the names both of a diagnostician and a psychiatrist, in whose respective ability and willingness to give scientific help in the humane spirit of science you may repose the utmost trust.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Perfume Lore

DO YOU know the difference between perfume, toilet water and eau de cologne?

Perfume is the essence of the flowers. The fragrance of the perfume depends upon the flowers from which the oils have been extracted.

Toilet water is cut perfume—that is, the essence of the flowers diluted with alcohol. The alcoholic content acts as an astringent and also preserves the original odor of the flowers.

Eau de cologne is made with a citrus formula. Often the flowers of citrus fruits are gathered and the oils extracted. Only a little of the original essence is preserved in the eau de cologne.

How expensive your perfume is depends upon the rarity of the flowers used. For example, orchids, which are costly in this part of the country, would make an expensive base. Often the essence of several flowers are blended to make one perfume. There is sufficient variety of perfumes to complement the personality of each individual.

One of the newest perfumes on the market is "Tailspin," with a subtle, sophisticated odor. Created by a Frenchman, long renowned for his distinctive perfume fragrances, it is a combination of innumerable flower oils — and whatever ingredients are used to create a haunting, will o' the wisp quality.

Abdominal Exercises Cure Sway Back

Stomach Muscles Need Strengthening; Forward Bending of Little Value, Side Stretch Best to Trim Waist

By Ida Jean Kain

DO YOU have lordosis? Perhaps you do and don't suspect it! That's the fancy term given to an exaggerated incurve at the small of the back. Maybe you think it's just sway back . . . but if you have the slightest suggestion of it, you should steer clear of the back bending exercises.

In fact, backward bends are always recommended with reservations. They are all right for those with very strong backs—mostly dancers and acrobats—who are used to backward bends. But it is surprising how many people in this world have something wrong with their backs and have to be careful in their choice of exercise, and even in their everyday activity. In bending to pick up something from the floor, the back should be kept straight to avoid strain and the bending done with the knees. This is particularly important when anything heavy is lifted. When the back is kept straight the work is put on the legs and arms and the lower back protected.

Forward Bending Valueless.

Ordinarily, forward bending is all right, but as an exercise—bending over to touch fingers to toes—it's mostly showing off! To get results, the bend should be preceded by a thorough upward stretch. But, generally speaking, the best way to give the waistline a trimming is to bend sidewards. Begin with the up-stretch—arms stretched overhead and hands locked together, but with most of the stretch through the midriff. The shoulders should not be allowed to hunch up. Then, holding the hips still, bend directly to the side. Come back to center, stretch slim in the middle again, and then bend to the other side. You can do this a goodly number of times but start with about six.

Or, you can get your side-bend this way . . . Stand sideways to chair, which should be close enough so you can reach it with the left hand. Clasp both hands on top of the head with elbows pointed straight out at the sides. Now bend acutely to the left and try to touch the tip of the elbow to the top of the chair back. Keep knees straight, hips still. Return to position, rest a second, and turn around and bend to right side.

Strengthen Stomach Muscles

Anyone with a tendency to sway back should set out of strengthen the abdominal muscles. Although it doesn't seem possible that your spine could change, the sag of the front muscles, coupled with gravity, does pull the back inward. The incurve of the back is in direct ratio to the outcurve of the abdomen.

To avoid any strain on the back muscles, or on the abdominal organs, take mat exercises lying on the back with knees flexed and soles of the feet flat on the floor. From this position any number of good exercises can be taken. It is amazing what exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles can do to straighten out a sway back.

Care of Cards

Playing cards will last longer and look better if well cared for. As soon as any spots or stains appear, wipe them gently with a cloth dipped in warm water. Pat dry with a clean cloth and lay on a flat surface until the cards are perfectly dry.

Dempseys Going Home To Open Senate Race

By Dudley Harmon

WITH CONGRESS in summer session over defense measures, "fence mending" by Senators and Representatives has had to go mostly by the board. One-third of the membership of the Senate are running for office again, but they're having to do their campaigning with the left hand in order to stick to their jobs here.

Taking advantage of a current lull in Congress, Representative John Dempsey is leaving in a few days to return to New Mexico to start his race for Senator. His opponent will be Dennis Chavez, and politicos say the campaign will be a hot one. Mr. Dempsey has been in the House six years, and has seen most of his bills become law. He recently made the headlines for his work in getting the Hatch bill through the House.

His dark-haired, attractive wife will go with him and expects to stay on at their home in Santa Fe. Representative Dempsey will only be away for about a week. Senator Chavez's office says that the Senator hasn't yet decided when he will be able to get away.

Author, Maj. George Fielding Eliot, Mistaken for Gen. Hugh Johnson

LOUIS DE ROCHEMONT'S dog strolled into the party given by his master and other officials of Time after the showing of "The Ramparts We Watch" on Tuesday. As the animal was almost exactly the same shade as the carpet, he was stepped on right and left, but stuck it out for several hours.

"There's Gen. Hugh Johnson," someone suddenly remarked. It turned out to be Maj. George Fielding Eliot, from whose best selling book on national defense the title of the "Time" film was taken.

Military men, newspaper folk, and diplomats were in the majority at "Time's" party. Admiral and Mrs. Albert Johnson chatted with Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles. From British circles came the Escott Reids, John Foster and Angus Malcolm. Mr. Foster hopes to leave later in the summer for a business trip to California.

The Thurman Arnolds were there (Mr. Arnold's new book, "Bottlenecks of Business," a successor to "Folklore of Capitalism," comes out next month).

Thurman Arnolds Give Pre-Theater Party On Porch of Their Virginia Home

THE ARNOLDS gave a pleasant dinner on the porch of their Virginia home before the movie. The storm kept some away, but determined ones who drove out through the mud included Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, W. L. Batt, one of the volunteers who are working for the National Defense Commission at the request of the President; his son, William; Lloyd Embrie, talented young portrait painter; George Abell and Mr. and Mrs. Quinn.

Hit of the party was Ruth Ophelia Whidden, a colored child dressed in a brief white frock with a red ribbon in her hair. She opened the door for the guests, and handed around heaping platters of fried chicken and ham.

Frazier Hunt Back From Europe Feted by Col. William Shipp

FRAZIER HUNT, famous newspaper correspondent whose ranch in Canada adjoins that of the Duke of Windsor, is in town after a year of European reporting. Col. William Shipp gave a small dinner in his honor last night.

Here at Miss Mary Johnson's apartment after a mad dash over most of Europe is Mrs. Richard Mowrer. The former Rosamond Cole, erstwhile Capital newspaperwoman, she landed in this country in June, leaving her reporter-husband to cover the British Near East Army in Egypt.

Mrs. Mowrer was in Stockholm when war broke out, and then toured Italy and the Balkans with her husband. Her most exciting trip was a tour of French army camps in Syria.

A creator of many of England's leading documentary films, John Grierson has been here on business for the last few days. A Scotsman, he now holds the post of government film commissioner of Canada. Mr. Grierson, who worked as an able seaman on a minesweeper in the last war, has just commissioned a Canadian documentary picture, "The Undefended Frontier," a story of Canadian-United States relations. The Canadian government is producing documentary films now at the rate of one every two weeks.

Mrs. Downe Arrives in U. S.

Mrs. Henry F. Downe, for 25 years a resident of Paris, but equally well known here, where she frequently visited, is among the last of the American refugees to return from France.

Mrs. Downe arrived in New York day before yesterday on the liner Exeter. According to the New York Times, Mrs. Downe was one of the "very few" permitted to inspect the Maginot Line prior to the war. In an interview in New York she is quoted as saying that it was "one of the most invincible fortresses I ever saw."

Mrs. Downe also said, according to the interview, that the Germans conquered France only because of "a complete sellout by the French politicians. You can shriek that out from the housetops."

With her late husband, Mrs. Downe was for many years a leading American hostess in the French capital. Her exquisitely furnished home in the rue Verdi, with its terraced gardens, was the scene of frequent parties. The late Mr. Downe was a member of the board of governors of several leading American charities in Paris and his wife was an active worker for the American Aid Society, which helps to raise money for Americans stranded in Europe.

Last in Washington in 1939, Mrs. Downe was entertained at the White House and by many prominent members of Capital society.

Foxes Now On Motor Trip

Former Evelyn Snider And Husband to Make Home in Takoma Park

Mr. and Mrs. Jean De Witt Fox, who were married on Sunday in the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Takoma Park, will make their home in Takoma Park after a motor trip.

The bride, the former Miss Evelyn Winifred Snider, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dwight Snider. Mr. Fox is the son of Mrs. Ruth Fox, of Glendale, Calif. The Rev. Francis N. Nichol officiated at their wedding.

Mrs. J. Dennie Snider Matron of Honor

Mr. Snider gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown of white marquisette and satin was made with a sweetheart neckline and trimmed with Rembrandt ruching, which also bordered the hem and train. Her finger-tip veil fell from a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses with an orchid center.

Mrs. J. Dennie Snider served as matron of honor for her sister-in-law, wearing yellow net and carrying gladioli and blue delphinium. The other attendants were Mrs. Paul Weirts, who wore pink, and Miss Anne Parker, who chose aqua. Their bouquets were of gladiola. Little Fern Gibson served as flower girl, wearing white net over orchid taffeta.

Reception Follows The Ceremony

Gene Hackleman, of Springfield, Ohio, was best man. The ushers were Jewel Peake and William Buchanan.

A reception on the lawn of the Snider home followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Fox took a prenursing course in Columbia Junior College, Takoma Park, and was later graduated from Washington Sanitarium Training School. Mr. Fox was graduated from the Glendale Union Academy and last year completed his premedical course in Columbia Junior College. He has been appointed sales manager of the Washington College Press and will take his medical course later.

Dr. and Mrs. Dye Leave On California Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, who are making their home at the Wardman Park Hotel this season, left Monday for California. They will visit Los Angeles, the Yosemite National Park and San Francisco.

Dr. Dye, who is in the diplomatic service, will attend the National Foreign Trade convention in San Francisco the latter part of this month, and they will return to Washington about the middle of August.

Wife of Diplomat Visits Mrs. Dick At Newport News

Mrs. C. Mathews Dick has as her guest at her home in Newport, Mrs. Edward Reed. The latter, whose husband is Counselor of the United States Embassy in Rome, arrived in this country from Italy several months ago.

Another Newport visitor is Mrs. John T. Pratt, jr. She is the guest of Mrs. C. Oliver O'Donnell, who, with Mr. O'Donnell, made her home in Washington last winter.

Jack Hartley Visiting Friends Here

Jack Hartley, whose parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. L. B. Hartley, are at Fort Winfield Scott, has arrived in Washington on the Army transport Chateau Thierry for an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Holmes.

He will return to California August 15 to attend the University of Southern California.

Eleanor Brower Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Kevan

Purcellville Girl To Make Home In Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The Bethany Methodist Church at Purcellville, Va., was the scene of a colorful wedding at noon yesterday when Miss Eleanor Randolph Brower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ford Brower, of Purcellville, became the bride of Lieut. William Parham Kevan, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parham Kevan, of Petersburg, Va. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. H. Smallwood, pastor of the church.

The color scheme of the church decorations was green and white, with a profusion of Queen Anne's lace and white summer flowers. Mrs. N. B. Hawthorne, jr., of Purcellville, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely costume of white brocade satin, fashioned princess style, with a sweetheart neckline. The skirt was finished with a short train and her fingertip illusion veil fell from a cap of pearls with a spray of orange blossoms across the front. She carried white roses and gypsophelia.

Mary Pattie Maid of Honor

Miss Mary Currell Pattie, of Manassas, Va., the bride's cousin, was the maid of honor. She wore a pink net gown over pink taffeta, made with a full, floor-length skirt, short sleeves and a square neckline. Her headdress was a veil of matching shade, fastened to the head on either side with flowers which matched her bouquet of white snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Marie Kevan, of Petersburg, Va., sister of the bridegroom; Janet Welsh and Yvonne Paxson, of Purcellville, and Gertrude Love, of Charlottesville. Their costumes were of orchid net over taffeta and aqua net over taffeta, made similar to that of the maid of honor, and with matching veils. They carried arm bouquets of pink snapdragons and white cosmos.

The best man was Charles H. Heinemann, jr., of Albany, Ga., and the ushers were Robert, William and Charles Brower 3d, of Purcellville; Benjamin T. Kinsey, Benjamin M. Hill, jr., and Harrison Willcox, all of Petersburg, Va.

Couple on Trip To North Carolina

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents in Purcellville. The couple left later for a wedding trip to Kill Devil Hills, N. C., the bride wearing a blue gabardine suit with white jacket and white accessories. They will reside at Tuscaloosa, Ala., where Lieut. Kevan is on duty at present.

The bride is a graduate of a Washington business school and has been living in Washington for several years. Lieut. Kevan is a graduate of V. M. I. and the United States Military Academy.

William Nights On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Night are en route to Cape Cod following a brief stop in New York City on their wedding trip. Upon their return the couple will live in Binghamton, N. Y. The marriage of the former Miss Elizabeth Dewey took place Saturday, July 20, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Irving Dewey, of Takoma Park, Md. Mr. Night is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Night, of Syracuse, N. Y. The Rev. Paul Schearrer officiated at the 12 o'clock ceremony.

Mrs. Irwin Clarke sang several solos, accompanied by Miss Margaret Sweet on the violin. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white chiffon gown and carried an arm bouquet of shaggy white asters. She wore a string of pearls and a heart-shaped pendant.

The couple dispensed with attendants. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast in the garden of Mrs. Kay's Toll House Tavern.

Down from Syracuse for the wedding were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Night, their daughter, Patricia; Mrs. George Richter, Miss Eleanor Dickinson and Leslie Doremus, of New York.

Mr. Night attended Syracuse University and the Syracuse College of Law.

Daughter Is Born To William Abells

Mr. and Mrs. William Shepherdson Abell announce the birth of a daughter on July 21 at Doctor's Hospital.

Mrs. Abell was the former Patricia O'Callaghan, of Montclair, N. J. Mr. Abell is an attorney.

To Live in Alabama

Mrs. William Lyon Porte, who before her marriage recently to Lieut. Porte was Miss Matile Griswold, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold, of Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Griswold, until recently stationed in Washington, commands the Twenty-ninth Infantry at Fort Benning, where the wedding took place, with military ceremony. Lieut. Porte, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Porte, of Washington. The couple will make their home in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where Lieut. Porte will attend the U. S. Army Flying School

Mrs. Moran Drury Fetes Newlyweds At Country Club

Mrs. Moran Drury was hostess at a mint julep party yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club in honor of Comdr. and Mrs. Edwin Eddagorde who have just returned from a honeymoon. The bride is the former Mrs. Margaret Sunderland.

About 100 guests attended the party, among them the brother and sister-in-law of the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, and members of the Army and Navy set, as well as several diplomats.

Rep. Barton's Son to Marry Chicago Girl

To Wed Jane Barton, Not a Relative, at Oak Park Tomorrow

Of interest to Chicago, New York and Washington is the announcement of the marriage to take place tomorrow of Miss Jane Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Barton, of Oak Park, near Chicago, to Randall Barton, son of Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, of New York and Washington. The young couple are not related. The announcement comes as a complete surprise for no formal announcement of the engagement has been made. The couple were introduced to each other just a few months ago when young Randall Barton made a visit to Chicago.

Bruce Barton, jr., will be his brother's best man. Representative and Mrs. Barton and their daughter, Betty, will attend the wedding.

The bride-to-be attended school in this city and is well known in art circles. The prospective bridegroom studied at Deerfield, Mass., and attended Amherst. He is employed by the General Motors Corporation, in Detroit. After a motor trip the couple will make their home in a Detroit suburb.

Representative Barton is head of the advertising firm of Batten, Barton, Durstin & Osborne. The bride-elect's father is a member of the Chicago branch of the same advertising firm.

Archdukes Otto And Felix in D. C., Empress in Mass.

Archdukes Otto and Felix—the former is pretender to the nonexistent Hapsbourg throne—are in Washington for a few days and are staying at the Shoreham. They are here "to see friends," but no formal parties have been planned in their honor. Both were widely entertained on a visit to the Capital in the spring.

Their mother, the Empress Zita, who arrived in this country by clipper last week, has gone to Royalston, Mass., where an American friend has put a home at her disposal.

To Vacation

Mrs. Thomas Edmiston Drake, Miss Helen Morton Drake and Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will leave tomorrow for a fortnight's vacation on Lake Champlain, near Burlington, Vt.

On the Street Car

"Oh, hello! What on earth are you doing here?"

"Oh, hello! What are you?"

"Oh, I—I just had to go a short distance and I—I didn't see a cab . . .

"That's the way with me—and it's so hot to stand and wait . . ."

"Yes, and another thing there are so many accidents. It really makes me nervous to ride in cabs."

"Me too."

"You know these street cars ride very smoothly!"

"They do for a fact!"

"Another thing, you see so many interesting types on a street car."

"Yes, it's really very educational."

"You know, I think it's really good for us to get out once in a while and see how the other half lives."

"So do I. We live too narrow lives.'

"Yes and besides, I think at a time like this we've simply got to get down to simple things."

"So do I! It's good for us!"

"Say, you'll never guess who I ran on to the other day on the street car—Mrs. Wynkoop Bigger!"

"No!"

"Yes! I was waiting for a cab, and a car came along, and I jumped on it to get out of the sun, and who on earth should I see but Mrs. Bigger!

"Of all things!

"Yes, she said they had let their chauffeur go for the summer as things were so uncertain and she didn't like cabs because the drivers talked so much and anyway, well she said she had just taken to riding the street cars."

"Well, I expect a lot of people will be coming to it," before long.

"I don't doubt it."

"Well, of course I wouldn't want to be on a street car in a crowd, but once in a great while like this I don't mind it."

"Me either—for a few blocks.'

"Say, are we getting near Fourteenth street? I have to transfer."

"So do I. Now where on earth is my pass?"

"I'd better see if I have mine—you know I borrowed my maid's to come down town on. I just thought there was no use letting it go to waste."

"Well, I—I just bought one. I thought we'd have it in the family and the children might like to ride—now where on earth did I put it? I always carry it—that is I had it in a folder—oh, here it is!"

"Here's mine—or rather the maid's. Which way do you go?"

"North. Which way do you?"

"Oh, I have to go way out southeast."

"Well, it's been nice seeing you—it's been quite an adventure hasn't it?"

"Yes, quite."

Glamorous Pick-Up for In-Between Blacks

One of the most appealing bits of neckwear seen lately is the Lillian Russell neckpiece and cuff set, borrowed from the fabulous ruffles and flounces of that great beauty's day. This double ruffle collar is of snowy mousseline de soie with a V-neckline which tucks into the top of most dinner or daytime dresses. Because mousseline washes and presses easily this is an accessory note that might well be included in most in-between season wardrobes

Budget Income For Vacation By Planning

THEIR evenings spoiled—so unnecessarily—with talk of money matters! Naturally, the husband resents such use of his leisure time, but what can a wife do? Unbudgeted finances will run wild.

Right when she needs a new permanent, the installment for the refrigerator is due—and however will she pay for Junior's vacation at camp?

Budgeting could end such worries. On a budget you don't wait for needs to arise and then scramble around for the money. You plan ahead—and plan not only for the needs but for the pleasures.

For such items as vacations and personal allowances you set up an Advancement Fund—giving it about 14 per cent of your monthly income, $22.40 if the total is $160. This fund you divide according to your desires; the wife's allowance will be large enough to care for such items as permanents and carfare.

But how can planning make no' enough money enough? By finding out what portions of your income you should allot to regular expense — rent, food, household operating—you may find that your spending has been top-heavy.

Perhaps your rent is taking too large a slice of your income. Wise to pay not more than a week's salary for a month's rent. Often, too, you can make economies in your food bill. Examine refrigerator left-overs each morning—see how they can be used. Then add your savings to other funds. Chances are you'll be amazed at how much money you really have.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Doris Dean, Atlanta's Gift to Wrestling, Doesn't Recommend 'Sport' for Reducing

DORIS DEAN is Atlanta's gift to wrestling, the sport that's bringing vaudeville back. Blond and 22, Doris was encouraged to go into the ring by her cousin, Man Mountain Dean. She's been at it two years, she said after a recent bout at the Riverside Stadium here, and loves it.

It's a tough life, she admits. She plans to call it a day in three or four more years and go into the restaurant business back home. She's supposed to run three miles a day to keep in training. She loses a pound during each bout, but doesn't recommend the sport as a reducing exercise. For one thing, she eats it all back the next day; for another, "most ladies just can't take it," she believes.

On the taking end, Doris herself has had to undergo four nasal operations during her wrestling career. She also dishes it out, though. Pointing to a protruding knuckle on her left hand, she said casually, "knocked three teeth out with that the other night."

FLOTSAM OF THE AIR WAVES—"Ladies and gentlemen, this month we honor the foster-mother of the human race: the cow."

SAID-TO-BE-TRUE STORY: Not so many years ago a Washington girl had a brief fling with a dashing chap introduced to her at a party as the Ambassador of—let us say—Melonia. For several weeks he pelted her with flowers and telephoned her every day. In fact, she was trying to decide whether or not to marry him when the bubble burst.

He failed to appear for a date one night, so she called him at the embassy. The Ambassador was polite but made it clear he'd never heard of her; besides, he was 50 and married. He was as mad as she was when he heard the story of the impersonation. At his request, she went to the embassy, inspected a line-up of his servants, but said she could not identify the culprit.

Next day she received a large shipment of flowers and a farewell note from the embassy cook, thanking her for her generosity in not exposing him.

On the day that France asked for an armistice, the wife of a South American diplomat sent flowers to Frau Thomsen and Princess Colonna of the German and Italian embassies.

The only woman who did her Thanksgiving marketing in June is Mrs. Earl L. Packer, wife of the first secretary of the American Legation in Riga, Latvia. While here on leave with her husband last month, she collected quantities of canned sweet potatoes, chestnuts and cranberry sauce to take back with her for a Thanksgiving feast come November. The sad part of the story is that the Packers, now en route to Riga, may arrive to find Latvia's petition to join the Soviet Union has been accepted and that the American Legation is no more. In that case Mrs. Packer, before starting the long trip home, probably will get out her can opener and go to work on her Thanksgiving dinner then and there.

Travelers on a Chevy Chase Circle bus recently would have liked to ask a lot of questions of one of their fellow-passengers. The woman, rising to leave the bus, noticed an acquaintance and said to her, "You remember Edith, don't you? Well, she killed her mother the other day." The second woman looked flabbergasted, as did the other passengers.

"Yes, killed her and then dragged her down the stairs," concluded the woman of few words as she stepped on the treadle and left the bus.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife of Socially Prominent Man of Means Needs Medical Care to Avoid Collapse, Yet Dares Not Seek It Because of His Avarice; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My childhood was spent in a gilded cage. My father was a despot and my mother was at once a saint, a martyr and a heroine. My state of mind, on entering womanhood, was such that I welcomed any semblance or promise of normal living as reward for past suffering. But Fate was intent on testing me further. My marriage would make a chapter worth including in Dante's "Inferno." Thanks to strength of character and certain stern, old-fashioned virtues my mother had inculcated in me, I have managed to survive thus far—although crushed in spirit.

Some years ago, after a long struggle, I succeeded in obtaining my husband's permission to go back to my native country—taking our children, a boy and a girl. This was on condition that I support the three of us out of a small inheritance I had from my godfather, and this I was able to do. (My father had lost everything in Monte Carlo.)

I was happy to be able, at last, to build a peaceful home (a real home) for the three of us. And whatever my financial trials may have been, during this four years' respite, I never once asked my husband for anything. The period was not entirely exempt from fear, however, due to frequent hints in his letters about our return. Then last year he wrote to say the children's education must be completed in the United States and that he was, therefore, ordering me either to come back or send the children to him. (Thus far his paternal interest in his offspring had expressed itself solely in brutal, unjust punishments).

I came back with them. I had no choice. Although we live separately—as his work keeps him in New York City—he pays us occasional visits. And while we are apparently on friendly terms, my nerves cannot stand either his perpetual interference or the sense of his proximity. I am oppressed by his constant hatred and rancor, which express themselves in a hundred little ways. Divorce is out of the question. He is against it. All this is rapidly destroying the last vestiges of my physical and moral endurance—and therein lies my problem.

My husband earns a good income, but out of my own funds I must support myself and the children, which is difficult, in view of living costs in this country. In addition, his position burdens me with considerable and expensive social duties. Yet he pays only for the children's education.

I need very desperately to consult a nerve specialist if I am to avoid a breakdown—or something worse. Sometimes, during sleepless nights, I feel that I am verging on insanity. But how can I afford a doctor's treatment? When he knows who I am he will charge me according to my husband's social situation—with which my funds are by no means commensurate. Should I, therefore, go to him under my maiden name? Would that be fair?

Intuition—or the instinct for self-preservation—tells me there must be good doctors whose fees would be within my budget. We live on $300 a month. And perhaps you can refer me to such a one. But what doctor will ever believe that a lady in my position has not the means to secure his professional services? Please tell me what to do. Thanking you in anticipation, I am very sincerely yours, A. A. W.

Means of Redress Exist And Should Be Invoked

DEAR A. A. W.: You have paid a heavy price in suffering for leading too sheltered a life; for being too much a babe in life's great woods. As I see the picture, nothing except your fright and your ignorance of the mechanics of legal redress (and of your rights before the law) has kept you ground beneath the heel of your husband's despotism these many years.

If he is (as I assume) a citizen of this country, hence subject to its laws, he is inescapably responsible for the financial support of his wife and children—and the fact that you happened to inherit some money in no wise absolves him of this lawful obligation.

Furthermore, his attitude as described affords grounds twice over for divorce (or legal separation) and alimony maintenance of yourself and the children, on grounds (a) of nonsupport and (b) of mental cruelty of such proportions as to render your married life intolerable and undermine your health to the breaking point.

The fact that he is opposed to the idea of divorce need not and SHOULD NOT restrain you from invoking the protection and succor which the law is prepared to give. (And even though your religion, or his, may prohibit "absolute divorce"—which conveys the legal right to marry again—nevertheless, I am sure that if the truth of the situation were disclosed to the proper ecclesiastical authorities, they would concede you the right to seek and obtain "legal separation," or "limited divorce," which is "separation from bed and board.")

You may argue that you cannot afford the expense of divorce, and if that is your belief, then again ignorance is imprisoning you—since in legal contests, where the plaintiff is indisputably the innocently injured party, the defendant usually is ordered to pay the costs of litigation.

Thus, if separate maintenance offers the basic solution of your perilous wretchedness; if you have the courage to embrace that solution, and if your husband does, indeed command "a good income"—then I am sure that any capable lawyer would represent you on a "contingent" basis. That is to say, his belief in (a) the justice of your cause and (b) his competence, would prompt him to act in your behalf, because confident that he could win the case and his own expenses from the defendant.

Concerning the health angle of your problem, it is difficult to say whether you most need psychiatric or medical help. Therefore, the most intelligent step is to see a first-rank diagnostician. Put all thought of expense out of mind. That requirement will be met in due course. Either he will accommodate his fee to your budgetary limitations or he will treat you without immediate regard to cost (telling you to forget about the bill until your health is restored), or he will blandly (and legally and properly) hold your lawfully wedded husband to be his debtor for services rendered to you.

Moreover, no doctor can really help you unless and until he fully understands the financial, social and emotional pressures troubling you. You would be wasting time in consulting any doctor (however skilled and humane) so long as you presented yourself in false guise or withheld from him any of the painful truth. If, after reading these remarks, you wish to telephone me, I shall be glad to give you the names both of a diagnostician and a psychiatrist, in whose respective ability and willingness to give scientific help in the humane spirit of science you may repose the utmost trust. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Abdominal Exercises Cure Sway Back

By Ida Jean Kain

DO YOU have lordosis? Perhaps you do and don't suspect it! That's the fancy term given to an exaggerated incurve at the small of the back. Maybe you think it's just sway back . . . but if you have the slightest suggestion of it, you should steer clear of the back bending exercises.

In fact, backward bends are always recommended with reservations. They are all right for those with very strong backs—mostly dancers and acrobats—who are used to backward bends. But it is surprising how many people in this world have something wrong with their backs and have to be careful in their choice of exercise, and even in their everyday activity. In bending to pick up something from the floor, the back should be kept straight to avoid strain and the bending done with the knees. This is particularly important when anything heavy is lifted. When the back is kept straight the work is put on the legs and arms and the lower back protected.

Forward Bending Valueless.

Ordinarily, forward bending is all right, but as an exercise—bending over to touch fingers to toes—it's mostly showing off! To get results, the bend should be preceded by a thorough upward stretch. But, generally speaking, the best way to give the waistline a trimming is to bend sidewards. Begin with the up-stretch—arms stretched overhead and hands locked together, but with most of the stretch through the midriff. The shoulders should not be allowed to hunch up. Then, holding the hips still, bend directly to the side. Come back to center, stretch slim in the middle again, and then bend to the other side. You can do this a goodly number of times but start with about six.

Or, you can get your side-bend this way . . . Stand sideways to chair, which should be close enough so you can reach it with the left hand. Clasp both hands on top of the head with elbows pointed straight out at the sides. Now bend acutely to the left and try to touch the tip of the elbow to the top of the chair back. Keep knees straight, hips still. Return to position, rest a second, and turn around and bend to right side.

Strengthen Stomach Muscles

Anyone with a tendency to sway back should set out of strengthen the abdominal muscles. Although it doesn't seem possible that your spine could change, the sag of the front muscles, coupled with gravity, does pull the back inward. The incurve of the back is in direct ratio to the outcurve of the abdomen.

To avoid any strain on the back muscles, or on the abdominal organs, take mat exercises lying on the back with knees flexed and soles of the feet flat on the floor. From this position any number of good exercises can be taken. It is amazing what exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles can do to straighten out a sway back.

Care of Cards

Playing cards will last longer and look better if well cared for. As soon as any spots or stains appear, wipe them gently with a cloth dipped in warm water. Pat dry with a clean cloth and lay on a flat surface until the cards are perfectly dry.

Beauty Secrets

Perfume Lore

DO YOU know the difference between perfume, toilet water and eau de cologne?

Perfume is the essence of the flowers. The fragrance of the perfume depends upon the flowers from which the oils have been extracted.

Toilet water is cut perfume—that is, the essence of the flowers diluted with alcohol. The alcoholic content acts as an astringent and also preserves the original odor of the flowers.

Eau de cologne is made with a citrus formula. Often the flowers of citrus fruits are gathered and the oils extracted. Only a little of the original essence is preserved in the eau de cologne.

How expensive your perfume is depends upon the rarity of the flowers used. For example, orchids, which are costly in this part of the country, would make an expensive base. Often the essence of several flowers are blended to make one perfume. There is sufficient variety of perfumes to complement the personality of each individual.

One of the newest perfumes on the market is "Tailspin," with a subtle, sophisticated odor. Created by a Frenchman, long renowned for his distinctive perfume fragrances, it is a combination of innumerable flower oils — and whatever ingredients are used to create a haunting, will o' the wisp quality.

Frank Bond's Funeral Rites Set for Today

Former Chief Clerk Of Land Office Dies 8 Days After Fall

Funeral services will be held in the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 10 a. m. today for Frank Bond, 84, noted expert on bird lore and former chief clerk of the Land Office, who died in Georgetown Hospital Monday night.

In failing health for several months, Mr. Bond died eight days after suffering a head injury in an accidental fall in his home, 3127 Newark street northwest.

Widely known as a naturalist for many years, Mr. Bond made a noteworthy contribution to the science of ornithology after his retirement from public service.

At the Library of Congress he compiled an index of more than 2,000 ornithological artists, some of whom dated back as early as the eighth century.

Bird Painter

He was an accomplished bird painter himself and held the basic patent on a process of mixing which produced a metallic effect in colors. He was the first ornithologist to describe for scientists the flight of prairie chickens which he had observed for many years on a farm in Johnson County, Iowa, where he was born.

In the dining room of his home in Washington he had installed a bird "cafeteria," or feeding shelf, where he observed more than 30 species of birds. He owned a lot across the street from the house on which he provided a sanctuary for birds by permitting heavy growth of swale and shrubbery.

He was a Mayflower descendant on his father's side and his mother's ancestors were among the early Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam.

He left the University of Iowa a collection of 500 birds of the Mississippi Valley when he graduated there and made a collection of mountain birds which he later gave to the Cheyenne, Wyo., High School.

Former Newspaper Publisher

In Cheyenne after leaving college he published a newspaper and served on the city council, the board of education and in the first State Legislature from 1890 until just before he came to Washington in 1902.

He worked here first with the late Elwood Mead, irrigation expert, in the Department of Agriculture, before going to the Land Office, where he became chief clerk in 1907.

He was chairman of the United States Geographic Board for nine years until the organization was absorbed by the Interior Department as the United States Board of Geographic Names. Mr. Bond retired in 1933.

In 1883 Mr. Bond married Henrietta Wallis, of Davenport, Iowa, who with their son, Rolf Wallace Bond, of Nebraska, survives.

ContractBridge

This question concerns the correct play of today's hand. You are the declarer, South, at three no trump. How would you plan the hand so as to be as sure as possible of winning game?

Today's Hand

♣ A 9 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 NT.	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♡.

The Answer

With the heart opening declarer is sure of two heart tricks, two spades and a diamond, and he needs four club tricks to make sure of the game. That is the point of the hand. South will be satisfied to take four clubs, but he wants to make sure of them.

On winning the heart hand declarer leads a low club from his own hand. When West discards, dummy puts up the queen. It now makes no difference whether East wins or ducks, because South's ace will kill either the king or ten according to East's lay and East will be held to one club trick and then the ace of spades will bring in the long club.

If West had held all four clubs the low club lead from South would still bring in four club tricks without trouble. But declarer must avoid laying down the club ace, and he must avoid entering dummy with the ace of spades in order to lead clubs. Either line of play might cost him a club trick.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Wife of Senator Davis Dies; Leader in Lodge Activities

Passes Away at 51 In Atlantic City After Long Illness

MRS. JAMES J. DAVIS

Mrs. Jean Rodenbaugh Davis, wife of Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, died yesterday in Atlantic City, N. J., after an eight-month illness. She was 51.

A leader in social and fraternal circles, Mrs. Davis was the first grand regent of the Women of the Moose and the only woman ever to sit as a member of the supreme executive committee of the Loyal Order of the Moose and on the board of Mooseheart governors.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dodenbaugh, she was born on their farm near Pittsburgh, Pa. She taught in a Pittsburgh business college before her marriage to Senator Davis in 1914.

Mrs. Davis was well known as official hostess here for her husband since 1921, when he was appointed Secretary of Labor by President Harding. The Davis home is at 3012 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mrs. Davis was a member of many fraternal organizations and clubs including the Academy of Friendship of the Women of the Moose, of which she was first president; Protected Home Circle of Sharon, Pa.; Foresters of America, Order of the Eastern Star, Daughters of the American Revolution, Women's Welsh Club of Washington; League of Republican Women, Women's Congressional Club and the Women's Senate Luncheon Club.

She attended Luther Place Memorial Church and was long active at Walter Reed Hospital as a member of the Grey Ladies.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Davis is survived by her mother, Mrs. John E. Rodenbaugh; a son, James J., jr.; four daughters, Jane, Jean, Joan and Jewell Davis, and a sister, Mrs. Davis J. Davis, of Pittsburgh.

Private funeral services will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the home.

Wage-Hour Board To Redefine Classes

The Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division will begin a four-day final hearing at 10 a. m. today in the Willard Hotel on a redefinition of executive, administrative and professional employes and outside salesmen.

Representatives of management and labor in the publishing, communications, transportation and public utilities industries will testify.

Rockville Rites For James T. Bean

The funeral of James T. Bean, 81, retired farmer and lifelong resident of Montgomery County, who died Tuesday evening at his home in Rockville after a long illness, will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow from St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. The Rev. John J. Coady, pastor, will conduct the services. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, near Rockville.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Jane Bean, and a sister, Mrs. Sophonia Magruder, of Washington.

Raskob, Mrs. Al Smith Wear Willkie Buttons

New York, July 24 (AP).—John J. Raskob, formerly high in the Democratic Party's councils, appeared at the World's Fair tonight wearing a "Willkie-for-President" button.

Wearing a similar button was Mrs Alfred E. Smith, wife of the former New York Governor, whose campaign as a Democratic Presidential nominee Raskob conducted in 1928. They came to watch Smith judge a barber shop quartet contest.

Gen. Wise, Hero Of Belleau Wood, Is Dead

Marine Veteran Famed For Remark, 'Retreat Hell, We Just Got Here'

Brig Gen. Frederic May Wise, 62, Marine Corps hero of the battle of Belleau Wood and well-known author, died yesterday at United States Naval Hospital after a long illness.

Gen. Wise, veteran of 27 years service with the Marines at the time of his retirement in 1926, was best know for his now famous retort when he was advised to retire:

"Retreat hell, we just got here!"

Then a lieutenant colonel, he had just arrived at the Belleau Wood front with the second battalion, Fifth Marine Regiment. Scorning the advice of the French, he charged into the battle.

Won Croix de Guerre

For seven days the battalion, which had moved up with orders to hold the position for 24 hours, held hitherto advancing Germans and was instrumental in turning the tide of battle in favor of the Allies.

For his service at Belleau Wood, and earlier at Soissons, he was awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm, and was cited by the commander-in-chief of the A. E. F.

From August, 1918, to January, 1919, Gen. Wise commanded the fifty-ninth Infantry Regiment of the Fourth Division, participating in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, and the march into Germany. For "exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service" he was awarded Distinguished Service medals of both Army and Navy.

Funeral Tomorrow

Gen. Wise also fought in the Boxer Rebellion, and in the occupation of Vera Cruz, Mexico, and saw service in Haiti, at Portsmouth, N. H., and at Quantico, Va.

He was the author of a book, entitled "A Marine Tells It To You," and other publications.

Funeral services for Gen. Wise will be at St. Matthews' Cathedral at 10 a. m. tomorrow. The Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey will officiate, assisted by Lieut. John F. Robinson, Chaplain Corps, U. S. N. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Ft. Myer Gives Big Send-off To Col. Patton

Col. George S. Patton, jr., commander of the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer, is returning to his "first love"—but his leave-taking at the Army post yesterday was anything but cheerful.

Since 1938, Col. Patton has commanded the horse cavalry at Fort Myer. Within a week, he will report to Fort Benning, Ga., to take over a mechanized brigade.

As first tank officer of the United States Army during the World War, his prime interests lie in mechanized fighting units—but it was hard to guess that yesterday as he patted the heads of cavalry horses drawn up in formation to bid him farewell.

One of Army's Best Horsemen

There were tears in the eyes of the veteran officer as he left Fort Myer, escorted by a squadron of horsemen and two armored cars. The entire post—officers, their families and enlisted men—turned out to wish him Godspeed.

Although an expert on mechanization, Col. Patton is one of the Army's best horsemen.

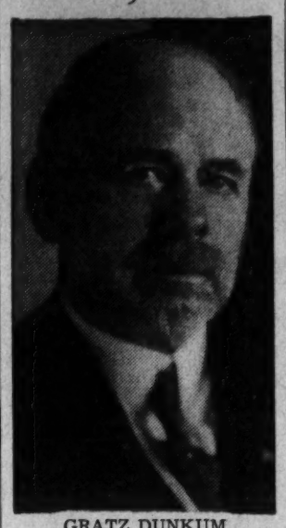
On November 17, 1917, he was assigned by Gen. Pershing to organize the American tank brigade, which he later led into the Meuse-Argonne campaign on foot. He was critically wounded while attempting to rally disorganized infantry into fighting positions under protection of the tanks.

Attended French Tank School

Subsequently he attended the French Tank School, introduced tank maneuvers into the A. E. F.

Col. Patton holds the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star citation and the Congressional Life Saving Medal of Honor.

Gratz Dunkum, Civic, Masonic Leader, Dies



GRATZ DUNKUM

Former Virginian Was a Member of D. C. School Board

Gratz E. Dunkum, 68, civic leader, prominent Mason and a member of the District Board of Education, died last night at Garfield Hospital. He was taken to the hospital two weeks ago after collapsing of a stomach disorder at his home, 5522 Colorado avenue northwest.

Mr. Dunkum was a native of Virginia and was largely a self-educated man. For the past 50 years he has been active in business, religious and fraternal organizations in Washington. A friend had characterized him as "the most graciously determined of limelight evaders."

A former grand master of the Washington Masons and patron of the Eastern Star, Mr. Dunkum was also chairman of the United Masonic Temple Committee. He was vice president of the East Washington Savings Bank for many years.

For several terms he was moderator of the District Association of Baptist Churches and was chairman of the extension board of Calvary Baptist Church. For 30 years he was district manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and was president of the Topham Leather Goods Co.

Mr. Dunkum was appointed to the School Board April 5, 1937.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Louise Dunkum, and a son, Gratz E. Dunkum, jr.

Ernest R. Decker, Veterans' Legal Consultant, Dies

Ernest R. Decker, 45, legal consultant in the Veterans' Administration, died yesterday at his home, 809 Sheridan street northwest.

A native of Grantville, Mass., Mr. Decker was educated at the University of Vermont, took his bachelor of laws degree at the University of Maine and his master's degree in law at Georgetown University.

During the World War he served with the Army Air Corps and retired as a lieutenant.

He had been associated with the Veterans' Administration since 1919, having served in St. Louis and Buffalo before coming here nine years ago.

Mr. Decker was a member of Phi Alpha Delta Fraternity, a charter member of Fort Stevens Post, American Legion, and was a member of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and Disabled Emergency Officers of the World War.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Frances E. Decker; two children, Raymond G. and Margaret Decker; his father, S. W. Decker, and a brother, Sherman M. Decker, both of Westfield, Mass.

Funeral rites will be at 9 a. m. tomorrow at Ryan's funeral home, 317 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. H. L. Chivers To Be Buried At Ft. Lincoln

Physician Was Son Of Pioneer in Electrics; Had Stage Career

Dr. Henry Lee Chivers, 57, former actor, physician and son of John Chivers, pioneer in electricity, died yesterday at his home, 3110 Twenty-sixth street northeast, after a long illness.

A native of Richmond, Va., Dr. Chivers was the son of Maria Snowden Lee, cousin of Adelina Patti, and a pianist of note who once played before Queen Victoria, of England.

His father was a member of the firm that installed the first arc light in England, at Taunton. He was also a noted yachtsman and friend of Sir Thomas Lipton and was the nephew of Sir Isaac Pitman, originator of the Pitman shorthand method.

Dr. Chivers was educated at Cambridge University and at St. Thomas Medical School in London. He was a charter member of the Scottish Rite Masonic Lodge in Manchester, England.

An accomplished actor, Dr. Chivers toured with the D'Oyly Carte Light Opera Company and appeared on the legitimate stage with Bruce McCrae and Olga Nethersole, famous actors of their day. He was a member of the Junior Garrick Club of New York.

Dr. Chivers practiced medicine in Boston, Mass., before coming here nine years ago. He had been retired several years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marie Quinn Chivers; and two daughters, Miss Emily Maria Chivers and Mrs. Virginia Lee Warner, all of Washington.

Funeral rites will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mother, 14, Baby Die in Childbirth

A 14-year-old colored school girl, Grace Bishop, of near Fairland, Md., died at Freedmen's Hospital at 9:15 a. m. yesterday, four hours after giving birth to a 6-pound son. The baby died six hours later.

Physicians said the girl suffered a convulsion at her home Tuesday afternoon and was brought to the hospital by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bishop, who believed she was suffering from epilepsy. The girl was large for her age, weighing about 160 pounds.

Sergt. Leroy Snyder, of the Montgomery County (Md.) police, said the girl attended school in Washington. Her father is a farm laborer.

Transports Land Reinforcements At Gibraltar

La Linea, Spain, July 24 (AP).—Canadian and Australian reinforcements disembarked from military transports today to guard Gibraltar, Britain's key Mediterranean fortress.

Despite the governor's daily pleas for civilians to evacuate the settlement to make room for fighting men, there are still some 9,000 civilians left.

Transports also brought quantities of foodstuffs and war supplies of all kinds—antiaircraft guns, planes, light and heavy artillery.

Same Thief Suspected In 3 Purse Snatchings

Pocketbooks of three women were snatched last night, police believe by the same young white man, who made his escape each time in a sedan driven by an accomplice.

The victims were Mrs. Janette Benson, Shoreham Hotel housekeeper, who lost $2.50, keys and papers at the entrance to Rock Creek drive near the hotel; Mrs. Eber Woodruff, whose pocketbook contained 16 cents and a compact when it was snatched in front of her home, 3708 Ingomar street northwest, and Ruth Wulfsohn, of 3514 Runnymede place northwest, who lost only her purse, keys and papers in front of 6001 Western avenue northwest.

Meanwhile, an attempted pocketbook snatching last night resulted in the arrest of James Belcher, colored, 27, of 800 N street northwest. Mary Brown, colored, of 1313 Q street northwest, told police the suspect knocked her down at Fifteenth and R streets northwest and grabbed her purse, but was captured by several other colored men after she screamed.

'Kismet' to Be Presented At Sylvan Tonight

With the largest cast to appear in a Sylvan Theater production in several seasons, "Kismet" will be presented at 7:30 p. m. today under the auspices of the Community and Playgrounds Department and the National Capital Parks Office.

More than 52 characters will appear in the drama, which is directed by Pauline E. Oak. The actors are members of the Eckington-Roosevelt Players. A concert by the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Band will precede the play. In case of rain the play will be presented Friday evening.

Pedestrian, 7, Is Bicycle Victim

Struck by a bicycle while crossing Fifty-seventh street in the 300 block northeast, 7-year-old Ernell Smith, colored, of 5618 Dix street northeast, was taken to Gallinger Hospital yesterday with leg injuries. The bicycle, police reported, was ridden by Samuel James, colored, 18, of 512 Fifty-eighth street northeast.

Warning! Don't Cash Any $10,000 Bills

Banks and business places last night were warned to be on the lookout for anyone attempting to cash two $10,000 bills, two $1,000 bills or a $500 bill, proceeds of a race track "shakedown" at West Palm Beach, Fla.

The money was taken from a New York businessman by two race track "touts," it was said, after he refused to be victim of their confidence game. Information about the money and the suspects was forwarded from New York.

Bones of 3-Toed Horses Found

Bones of three-toed horses about the size of sheep, and the skull and jaws of a protoceros, a queer six-horned creature remotely related to deer and antelope, are among new fossil discoveries in the Badlands of South Dakota, the National Geographic Society reported here yesterday.

Fossil bones of 73 specimens of extinct animals of the American West have been found in the last six weeks by an expedition under the auspices of the society and the South Dakota State School of Mines.

Defunct Bank's Assets Sold Out for $1,750

Remaining assets of the closed Bank of Brightwood brought $1,750 at a public sale yesterday, according to Receiver Frederick J. Young. Book value of the defunct institution was estimated at $275,114.70.

The Bank of Brightwood closed July 13, 1932, and since has paid depositors 63½ per cent in four dividends amounting to $504,941.

The remaining assets were sold yesterday to Meyer Steinberg, of Baltimore, a "professional buyer," said Young. He could not predict when final dividends would be available to depositors.

Safecracking Job Nets Thieves $30.20

Police last night were searching for yeggmen who yesterday burned open a safe at the Brockway Motor Co., 608 Rhode Island avenue northeast, and escaped with $30.20. William E. Wilson, an employe, told police the intruders employed an acetylene torch. Tools valued at $150 also were stolen.

7,800 'Employables' In Need, Board Told

Mrs. John J. O'Connor (left), national president of Travelers Aid, and Mrs. Louise Roberts, Council of Social Agencies director, at Board of Public Welfare Hearing

Inadequacy of the local relief fund has shut the door of assistance to more than 7,800 needy persons, it was charged yesterday by Morris Klass as the welfare board closed its public meetings on the 1942 budget.

Similar charges of the inadequacy of the $900,000 general relief fund were made by Florence Plotnick, secretary of the District Workers' Alliance, who called for a $3,000,000 fund for 1942 and immediate use of the $1,110,000 District surplus to aid the needy, and Sidney R. Katz, secretary of the Washington Industrial Union Council.

Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service Agency, appeared for the Council of Social Agencies and the Monday Evening Club. He said 3,365 persons on April 10 were certified as being just as much in need as the 11,300 persons on the WPA rolls, "but they are still waiting for a chance to go to work." Another group of 2,000 in need and able to work were dropped from the list because work projects suitable to their abilities could not be found and 2,500 persons were laid off by WPA on June 1, he asserted. These, he continued, are in need but are denied relief because they are "employable."

Miss Plotnick said that there are now 37,000 out of work in the District with the possibility of "hunger, disease and crime" staring them in the face this winter.

Harry Wender, first vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said the federation indorsed the food-stamp plan, a farm for alcoholics and legislation against charity rackets.

Speaking of the food-stamp plan, Wender said: "I don't know where the opposition to this plan has come from, but it is a very desirable project for the District."

Sidney Katz also indorsed the food plan and urged the Welfare Board to request a sum of $150,000 to set a revolving fund necessary in the operation of the plan.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, of the League of Women Voters, urged might go to seek aid, instead, as at present, the agencies which direct a person "from one place to the other."

The Rev. Dr. John Mixon, representing the Federation of Churches, asked for a better program for the unemployed employables, an adequate staff of case workers and better facilities for the transients.

George Cleary, of the Catholic Charities and the St. Vincent de Paul Society, recommended more case workers and a better program for the employables.

A letter was read by Robert E. Bondy, welfare director, from Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, stating:

"The Board of Education will continue to seek from Congress adequate funds to insure the education of shut-in, handicapped children and hopes Congress will see fit to make education of these children a part of the educational system of the District."

A. J. Driscoll (left), new member of board; Mrs. Ann O'Flaherty, of the board, and Harry Wender, president of Southwest Citizens Association more funds for relief, particularly for the unemployed employables; an increase in case workers; approval of the stamp plan, and more aid to the group between the ages of 16-18.

Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, chairman of the public welfare committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, called for an increase in the public assistance funds; extension of protective services in the home and extension of projects in the WPA.

Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, national president of the Travelers Aid Society, representing the transient committee of the Council of Social Agencies, asked for more consideration of the transient problem in the District. She recommended more shelter homes and a central intake bureau, where the transient

The advisability of setting up a farm for inebriates, recommended at Tuesday's meeting by Vincent Sacardi, was questioned by Dr. Henry J. Crosson, board member, who said in his 50 years of practice in medicine he had never seen a human being "restrained from alcoholics by physical means."

At the conclusion of the hearings yesterday, Bondy said a special meeting of the board would be held tomorrow to consider "certain phases" of the budget. The regular meeting of the board will be held next Monday.

U. S. Will Drop Probe of Attack On Rockville Sect

The Department of Justice has decided to drop its investigation of an attack in Montgomery County on members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect at Rockville, June 19, Henry A. Schweinhaut, chief of the Civil Liberties section, announced yesterday.

"We had the matter under consideration, but we consider the case closed by the action of the county," Schweinhaut said. County authorities, he added, "have done the job that had to be done."

The attack, growing out of refusal of members of the sect to salute the American flag, resulted in dismissal of County Police Chief Charles Orme. Ten persons charged in the attack were acquitted

Md. Man Held As Wife-Slayer

Freeman J. Hawkins, colored, 31, of Rockville, Md., was jailed by Montgomery County police yesterday on a charge of murdering his wife, Edna, 31, near their home Tuesday night.

Acting Chief Roy Bodmer said Hawkins gave himself up at the Rockville police station several hours after his wife had been slain with a shotgun as she fled to a neighbor's home.

Three witnesses, including a stepdaughter, Estelle Wims, told police the shooting occurred following an argument between Hawkins and his wife.

Defense Plan Jams U. S. Offices

5,000 Government Workers to Be Moved To Make Room for Expanded Agencies

5,000 U. S. Employes Shifted in Effort To Find Desk Space

Nearly 5,000 Government employes in ten agencies will move to new offices within the next three weeks to give more room for expanding defense agencies, Public Buildings officials announced yesterday.

W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings, said that the Government is now occupying about 20,700,000 square feet of office space in 290 Washington buildings, including 4,300,000 feet in rented buildings. While pressure for more space has become acute as a result of the defense program, officials said, the total space in use has increased by only a few thousand feet in recent weeks. So far, it was explained, crowding has been eased by more efficient use of available space.

The major moves, announced yesterday, affected the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Social Security Board.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will move from the old Commerce Building, 1825 H street northwest, into the new Lafayette Building at Fifteenth and I streets northwest. The latter was constructed with the aid of an RFC loan and will be rented back to the Government, officials said.

The old Commerce Building will be turned over to the Social Security Board for use of its Old Age Insurance Division, now scattered in the Potomac Park Apartments, Twenty-first and C streets northwest; the Arlington Hotel and Temporary Building No. 2, Twentieth and New York avenue northwest.

Into the vacant Potomac Park Apartments and the Temporary Building No. 2 will go employes of the National Defense Council and the War Department.

A former roller skating rink at Delaware avenue and Canal street southwest is being converted into offices for the alien registration work of the Justice Department.

Commodity Credit Corporation employes, now sharing space in the old Commerce Building, will move to the Risek Building, 1737 L street northwest.

Several units of the Civil Service Commission assigned to defense activities will be moved into the Atlantic Building, 928 F street northwest, formerly used by the Forest Service.

Civil Aeronautics Authority employes who have been assigned to direct the civilian training program will be given offices in the Superior Motors Building, 1501 Fourteenth street northwest.

Securities and Exchange Commission offices have been consolidated at 1424 K street northwest, and the Federal Communications Commission will get the space vacated by the SEC in the International Building, 1319 F street northwest.

An office building at 1510 H street has been leased for the Office of Government Reports in addition to their quarters in the Commercial Building at Fourteenth and G streets northwest.

Chincoteague To Corral Wild Ponies Today

Chincoteague, Va., July 24 (AP).—Chincoteague's fishermen will turn cowboys tomorrow for the annual pony drive on this Atlantic Coast isle.

The pony penning Thursday morning will be the big event of a local holiday which also will include pony races, attempts at "bronc busting," a capsize drill by coast-guardsmen, boat races and prize fights.

The ponies will be herded from out of the marshes of Chincoteague, Piney and other islands, and driven into waterfront pens in this town. There some will be branded and buyers will make their selections.

The whole celebration, or carnival, will continue to Saturday under the sponsorship of the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Department, but Thursday's events constitute the main ones.

Residents of the offshore island, which is about eight miles long and a mile wide, and connected with the mainland by a bridge, have made usual preparations to care for large numbers of visitors from Maryland, Deleware and Virginia.

Violinist, 29, Draws Applause From 7,000 At Watergate With His Violin and Exertion

Black's Orchestra And Lively Program Delight Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Frank Black conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night at the Potomac Watergate. Soloists: Philip Frank, violinist. Program: Overture to "Die Fledermaus" (Strauss), Symphony No. 4 in A major (Mendelssohn), Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), "Blue Danube Waltz" (Strauss), "Symphonie Espagnole" (Lalo), "My Country" (Wilson).

For his second appearance as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at the Potomac Watergate last evening Frank Black selected a program that pleased his thousands of auditors with its general liveliness. With the exception of one American composition by Mortimer Wilson, all of the music struck responsive chords of memory and made listening an agreeable pastime for a summer night, when attention is apt to wander.

To Johann Strauss the younger was accorded the honor of two places on the program, one filled by the inevitable "Blue Danube" waltz and the other by the sprightly overture to "The Flittermouse." It still remains an unexplained puzzle why so few of Strauss' dances are heard, in view of the fact that he was an indubitable master of contagious tunes and turned out waltzes, polkas and quadrilles by the hundred. All but two of his 17 operettas are also negelcted, and it would be a welcome change to hear now and then the overtures to "Indigo," "Jakuba," "Simplizius" or "Ritter Pasman."

The major work of the concert was Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony, one of the most engaging travel pictures ever written because of its complete capture of the spirit of a land alien to the composer. Mendelssohn began it in Rome, while his impressions were vivid, finished it in Berlin, took the score with him to England, and conducted the first performance with the London Philharmonic on May 13, 1833. He was not quite satisfied with it, however, and the symphony as we hear it today was the result of a thorough revision. Even after re-writing it, he withheld it from the printer, and it was not published until four years after his death.

After the Italian excursion came a musical visit to Nuremberg for Wagner's plangent prelude to "Die Meistersinger." Mr. Black gave it a forceful reading filled with rhythmic urgency and well-built climaxes of sonorous weight.

The violin soloist, Philip Frank, is a young American who has just returned from the South American tour of the N. B. C. Orchestra with Arturo Toscanini. He gave an admirable display of his abilities in Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," playing with technical surety and tonal beauty. Despite the humidity which relaxes strings, he kept his intonation remarkably accurate, and he made seemingly light work of the virtuoso passages that are put in for the benefit of Pablo de Sarasate.

The concert closed with the scenic fantasy, "My Country," by Mortimer Wilson, who was born in Chariton, Iowa, in 1876 and died eight years ago in New York. This descriptive piece of his is so soundly constructed, so colorful in instrumentation, and so sincere in motivation as to make one curious to hear his five symphonies which seem to have escaped the notice of American conductors.

Dr. Frank Black (left), guest conductor, and Philip Frank, guest soloist, at intermission

"A nice fiddler," musicians in the National Symphony Orchestra called him.

"A very talented boy," Conductor Frank Black called him.

Back to the barge for four bows, the audience of 7,000 at last night's Watergate Sunset Symphony called him.

A 29-year-old Brooklyn boy named Philip Frank, he played Edourad Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole with a flourish that brought whistles and cheers from the Watergate bowl, in the canoes and the cruisers in the channel, on the grass of Abe Lincoln's side yard.

They liked him, and they liked the number he selected.

"Sympathetic to my temperament," was Frank's reason for selecting it.

Wringing wet from the exertion of playing it, the young violinist peeled off his pin-striped coat backstage and explained:

"I was in Rio with Toscanini and the N. B. C. Symphony when I received the invitation to play here. Perhaps the Spanish atmosphere had something to do with it. Anyway, I selected it immediately. It expresses something that suits me."

Holding his $4,000 Rogeri violin high, he played the passionate and brilliant composition with the exertion of a pitcher throwing a screwball. He used to play baseball in Brooklyn.

Esther Jane Smith, 10, from St. Louis, can't look over, so she looks through the balustrade

Some of the crowd listens to the music from "out of bounds"

The audience liked him, and they liked the National Symphony's playing under Dr. Black, the National Broadcasting Co's music director, conducting in the final of his two-concert guest appearance, to the tune of three encores.

Whistles greeted his presentation of Johann Strauss' "On the Beautiful Danube," played on the edge of a Potomac made brown by heavy rains. Whistles and cheers greeted his own arrangement of Jerome Kern's "Old Man River," played as an encore.

The audience liked an unscheduled pantomime that was staged to the accompaniment of Robert Sanders' "Saturday Night," another encore.

As the hill-billy music with the classical approach rang out across the bowl, one of the canoes alongside the orchestra barge silently slipped out past a rope designed as a barrier and came to a stop in the center of the moat that separates the barge from the audience. Its pilot lay down his paddle and arranged himself in a reclining position on the canoe's bottom to hear the music from that excellent point of vantage.

Then, silently into the moat slipped another boat, rowed by a policeman. The canoe's pilot sat up and looked around. The policeman motioned to him. And silently the two boats slipped out of the limelight, as the "Saturday night" music ended.

The applause was tremendous.

D. C.'s Heads Bar 'Open Meetings'

Bate's Suggestion Rejected; Vital Matters Already Discussed Openly

The suggestion of Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, that the District Commissioners hold at least two open meetings a month met with a cool reception at the District Building yesterday, despite the high temperature.

Bates, who, for 14 years, was mayor of Salem, Mass., condemned what he called "secret sessions" of the District heads and said he knew of no other city in the country that bars the public from the proceedings of its governing body.

The Commissioners, in reply, expressed the opinion that as most of their proceedings are of an uninteresting character, such as awarding sewer contracts, that the public would soon become bored with the meetings.

Moreover, they insisted, their position is somewhat like that of the President's Cabinet, and who ever heard of the public being invited to sit in on one of those meetings?

John Russell Young, the newest Commissioner, explained he is a firm believer in the principle of public hearings.

"But a board meeting is dull and has to do with routine business which would interest none.

Whenever questions of broad public policy are involved, such as the preparation of the annual budget, public hearings are held, he added.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, Jr., agreed with Young that the Commissioners are pretty much like a cabinet or the administration of a government department, and that the Secretary of War does not invite the public in when he administers routine affairs of the War Department.

Houghton, Coffey Bow in First Triple Tie in 20 Years In State Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Out of a two-day battle for the Maryland Open championship marked by a record entry, a rained-out tournament and the first triple tie in 20 years, emerged Cliff Spencer, the tee-shot artist from East Potomac, as a second-time champion.

Spencer won the title for the second time in four years yesterday afternoon at Columbia Club in a three-way playoff with the the four-time champion from Beaver Dam, Al Houghton, and Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., professional. The trio deadlocked with 142's at the end of the regulation 36 holes and Spencer won the playoff by two shots with a 71 to Coffey's 73 and a 75 by the fast-tiring Houghton.

The playoff was for glory and the title alone, as the pros divided first, second and third money before leaving the tee, netting $90 each. Fourth prize of $30 went to Wiffey Cox, Congressional professional, whose 145 on Tuesday stood up as Ralph Beach finished yesterday morning with three bogeys on the last five holes.

Miller Wins Amateur Honors

George F. Miller's 145 stood up for low amateur honors, however, the host club member's score topping a 147 by Spencer Overton and 148 of Otto Greiner by two and three shots, respectively.

Spencer, Coffey and Houghton all finished their rained-out rounds yesterday morning, starting at 9 o'clock. The new champion had eight holes to play when caught in Tuesday's cloudburst and he played them in one under par, with a 3-foot putt for a birdie on the sixteenth, and a par on the eighteenth as features. His total was 72-70, 142.

Houghton, who had no ill effects from his fall in the shower after playing through the downpour on Tuesday, had five holes to play and he posted the first 142, playing the five holes in five pars, making 17 pars in all for the second 18.

Coffey Had to Be Watched

But Coffey was the man they had to watch. Runner-up to Spencer when he won in 1937, the Winchester pro was apparently on the way to his first major title when he led the field with 69 and one even par for eight holes when play was halted on Tuesday. He started with Beach and Mel Shorey and slipped right away with a bogey five.

Coffee parred 10 and 11 but he lost his lead on 13 and 14 by missing both greens and going over par on each. Here he needed par to finish to tie the 142's of Houghton and Spencer. He carefully parred 15, 16 and 17 but he pulled an iron shot on the last hole in the trap. He chipped the ball 6 feet past the cup and then dropped the putt for a tie, 69-73, 142.

The play-off started to be a walk-away and suddenly tightened into an interesting match. Spencer knocked in birdie putts on 7 and 8 to go one under par to take a four stroke lead over Coffee and five over Houghton.

Wasted Shots

Here Cliff started wasting shots, and before he could get a par, he lost three strokes to each by going over par on the next three holes. Houghton pulled into contention by holing a niblick approach shot 50 feet off the green on the fifteenth, but he went right out again by three-putting the sixteenth green. Spencer pushed Coffey two strokes back with a timely birdie on the seventeenth and it was all over when they both parred the finishing hole.

After a raggedly played out nine, Coffey settled down by playing the last nine holes in as many pars, eight the regulation way. Spencer was the class of the field, however, barring his mid-round lapse. Houghton was admittedly tired and his third consecutive bogey on the fourth hole caused the Beaver Dam mentor to lose interest. Not until he holed his approach on the fifteenth, was he given much consideration. Al called it his worst round of the year. His drives were consistently 50 and 75 yards back of the others.

Most of the players who had part of their final nine holes rained out did not show up yesterday to complete the rounds, only the ones with a chance to finish in the money.

Lew Worsham, Burning Tree, and Johnny Bass, Baltimore, who finished before the rain, were left out of the money with 146, as was Gene Larkin with 147. Leo Walper came back to finish and posted 148. Mel Shorey 149 and Eddie Stevens 151.

The eight amateur winners were,

Weatherly's Homer Beats Macks, 7-6

Indians Outfielder's Circuit Blow Comes With One On; Smith Is Winning Hurler

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 24.—Roy Weatherly's two-run homer was the decisive factor today as the Cleveland Indians turned in their fifth straight triumph to stay a half-game behind the league-leading Detroit Tigers. Southpaw Al Smith received credit for the 7-to-6 victory over Philadelphia.

Neither Chubby Dean, the Athletics' starter, nor Smith, who posted his tenth triumph of the season, went the distance. The Tribe gained a 7-1 lead off Dean and Herman Besse before the Athletics rallied for five runs in the sixth, sending Smith to the showers. Harry Eisenstat finally stopped the Philadelphia scoring.

Bob Feller, kingpin of the Cleveland mound staff, was hit in the face by a thrown ball during pregame practice but was not seriously hurt and warmed up in the bull pen in the eighth inning. A moist towel was applied for a time to his left cheek and jaw after he walked in the way of a practice throw by Keith Monroe, a rookie sandlotter working out with the Indians.

Greenberg, Higgins Hit Home Runs

Detroit Takes 7-0 Lead by Third; Griffs Stage Rally In Late Innings

By Shirly Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, July 24.—Sidney Hudson was getting the league's best home-run pitch over the plate today, and the Tigers were knocking it out of the park. We're just hinting broadly that the result today was very unfavorable to the Nats. Detroit won the ball game, 7 to 5.

Home runs provided the impetus for five of the Tigers' tallies. Hudson, who has been party to more homers than any pitcher in the league, made his sixteenth home-run pitch of the season to Hank Greenberg in the first inning with one on base. The Tigers stepped up production in the third inning when Frank Higgins swatted a homer with two on base.

The Nats were out of the ball game almost before they were in it. They were trailing, 7 to 0, by the end of the third inning, to the vociferous delight of the 6,044 shirt-sleeved customers who sweltered on Detroit's hottest afternoon of the year.

Hutchinson Routed In Seventh.

The Washington athletes tried to make a battle out of it, though, in the late innings. They suddenly turned on young Freddie Hutchinson, who had been pitching three-hit ball, and drove him out of the box in the seventh. They drove out his successor, Tom Seats, too, and had the tying runs on base in both the seventh and the eighth, but Al Benton, the Tigers' No. 1 relief pitcher, cooled 'em off in the last two innings.

Joe Krakauskas did a noble job of keeping the Nats in the ball game after taking up the pitching at the start of the fourth inning. He pitched four consecutive innings of scoreless ball, and Walter Masterson turned in a hitless inning.

Hudson didn't have it today. One of his first acts was to pitch a double to Dick Bartell in the first inning, and only a great play by Buddy Myer deprived McCosky of a hit on the next pitch. Charley Gehringer scored Bartell with a single to center and then along came Greenberg with his eighteenth home run of the season—a blast into the leftfield upper deck—and the Tigers had a 3-0 lead.

Tigers Get 4 More Runs

In the third they came back and got four more. McCosky singled to center and Greenberg snigled to left. Then the Tigers started swinging for distance. York doubled off the rightfield wall for one run, and Higgins sort of nudged the ball into the leftfield bleachers for his eleventh homer which was laden with three more runs.

The Nats went to a great deal of trouble to achieve nothing in the first inning. George Case doubled to left to start the game and Lewis followed with a single to left. Case held up at third and dashed for home when Greenberg's throw to the plate caromed off Hutchinson's glove and rolled wild. Case was out when Hutchinson retrived the ball and threw to the plate.

The Nats had only three hits to show for themselves until the sixth inning, when they finally came up with a pair of runs. Lewis doubled down the rightfield line and Walker scored him with a single to center. Travis forced Walker, but West and Bloodworth produced singles that scored Travis. Hutchinson helped himself out of this situation with a brilliant stop of Pofahl's smash into the box to start a double play.

Nats Threaten in Seventh

It was in the seventh that the Nats threatened to tie the score. Jake Early led off with a single to center and Krakauskas astounded everybody with a single to left. George Case filled the bases with

Three Former Champs Bow in Publinx Golf

Andy Oliveri, Last District Player, Loses to Oklahoman, 6 and 5, in 1st Round; Comedalists Set 2-Round Pace

By the United Press

Detroit, July 24.—Hot shots of the qualifying rounds stormed through two rounds of hectic play in the National Public Links Golf Tournament today, knocking out three former champions and two of last year's semifinalists.

Leading the field into the third round were the young comedalists who set a new qualifying record of 138 yesterday—Worth Stimits, jr., of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Ed Furgol, Utica, N. Y., metal worker—who will meet tomorrow in an 18-hole showdown.

First of importance to fall was Andy Szwedko, Pittsburgh steel worker, who waded all the way through the bulky field at Baltimore last year. He lost to Bill Bublis, of Chicago, 3 and 2, marking the first time in six years he had failed to progress beyond the opening round.

Kauffman Beaten

Two other champions also dropped under fire. Carl Kauffman, of Pittsburgh, 41-year-old driving range owner, who won three straight titles starting in 1927, defeated Ed Garfield, of Cleveland, 4 and 2, then lost to Jack Larose, of Detroit, 2 and 1.

Dave Mitchell, Atlanta veteran, who won the 1934 championship, faded in the first round, losing to Bill Doll, of Louisville, 1 up.

The District of Columbia four-man contingent was on the way home in its entirety after Andy Oliveri, the lone qualifier, was beaten by Labron Harris, of Guthrie, Okla., 6 and 5, in the first round.

Oliveri started 5-5-5 against a par of 4-4-4 and was three down as Harris matched regulation figures. The Washington public links champion held the margin to three at the turn, but Harris started back with three consecutive birdies and a

N.B.A. Lightweight Champion Scores Over Castiglione

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—Sammy Angott, of Louisville, Ky., the National Boxing Association's lightweight champion, outpointed young Nick Castiglione, of Chicago in ten rounds at Mills Stadium tonight.

Angott, who weighed 135¼ against 135½ for Castiglione, received the unanimous verdict of the referee and two judges. It was an overweight bout and Angott's title was not at stake.

Angott clearly outpointed the Chicago youth, who has only a couple years of professional boxing experience, but the hardest blows were scored by Castiglione. He shook up Angott in the first round with a right to the chin and repeated in the third. However, Angott's superior speed and ring generalship gave him his margin of victory.

Milwaukee Splits Two With Toledo

Milwaukee, July 24 (AP).—The Milwaukee Brewers took the first game of a doubleheader with Toledo here this afternoon, 12 to 9, but dropped the second battle, 4 to 2 in ten innings. The second game was scheduled for seven frames.

Harry Kimberlin, Toledo curveball specialist, turned in a fine game to win the second battle, holding Milwaukee to eight hits.

Harry Taylor drove in what proved to be the winning run in the third extra inning of the second game. The Mudhens blasted three Milwaukee hurlers for 16 hits.

Leonard to Face Tigers' Newhouser In Today's Game

Detroit, July 24.—Dutch Leonard returns to the pitching mound tomorrow for the Nats in his first outing since suffering a bruised wrist on his pitching hand last Sunday. He will attempt to give the Nats the edge in the three-game series with the Tigers.

Leonard's pitching opponent will be Harold Newhouser, prize rookie southpaw of the Eigers. Newhouser was beaten in his last start against the Nats.

A. A. U. Swim Deadline Tonight

Midnight tonight is the entry deadline for the District A. A. U. diving and 440-yard men's and women's free-style swimming championships. The events will be held Monday night at the Airport Pool.

Prominent entries received to date include Jimmy Russell, of Baltimore, winner the last two years, Bill Tarbert, D. C. diving champion, and a team from the St. George's Dragon Club, of New York.

Rodin Captures Feature Race At Empire City

Scores Head Decision Over Spanish Duke; Abmeres Runs Third

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 24.—Joseph Wormser's Rodin, a one-time member of the J. E. Widener Stable, and R. C. Thatcher's Spanish Duke thrilled a crowd of 11,269 here today when they finished heads apart as named in the Pocantico (Class "D") Handicap. Rodin, favorite in the field of four at $5 for $2, had to step the mile and a furlong in 1:51 2-5, only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record, to make the grade.

Paul Codd's Abmeres, recent conqueror of Rodin at a shorter distance, picked up 2 pounds today and finished a soundly beaten third, five lengths behind. Orcades was a laboring last.

There was no show betting on the feature because of the small field. The good-sized throng wagered $79,128 on the event, which made the five-race total $392,860. Cooler weather prevailed this afternoon and the racing strip had returned to fast condition.

Orcades, third in the recent Newcastle Handicap at Delaware, was sent out to make the pace by Wayne Wright. The filly weakened nearing the far turn and allowed Abmeres to gain a narrow lead around the bend. Spanish Duke, meanwhile, had been under wraps in last place and waiting to make his move. This he did entering the stretch. Rodin, third in the early running, moved with him. The Wormser 4-year-old and Spanish Duke were lapped as they drove through the last furlong fighting for command. Irving Anderson kept Rodin's head in front by virtue of powerful handling.

San Jose State Gridders to Fly To Six Contests

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 24.—Air liners will carry the San Jose State College football team to all its out-of-town games this fall.

United Airlines officials said the college had chartered two planes for use on trips to Butte, Mont.; Logan, Utah; Portland, Oreg., and Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Fresno, Calif.

The complete party will total 42. Famed Glenn Scobey "Pop" Warner serves as advisory coach at San Jose under Ben Winkelman.

3 Receive Fines From Ford Frick

New York, July 24 (AP).—Pete Coscarart and Whitlow Wyatt of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Lonny Frey of the Cincinnati Reds were fined $25 each today by President Ford of the National League as an aftermath of yesterday's fight at Ebbets Field.

Coscarart and Frey started a fight that involved several players and were ejected. Frick said he fined Wyatt because he personally saw the Brooklyn pitcher hit Frey several times with his glove.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Detroit, July 24.—Golf's periodic revolution is now taking place in Detroit. The National Public Links Tournament is in progress here. It's Bastille Week on the links. The peepul are traipsing up and down the fairways, having a go at the ancient old game that once was reserved for the gentle folks who knew how to look down their noses at anything less than white flannels and monogrammed blouses.

This is the week when cash-and-carry golf—cash before you step on the tee and carry your own clubs—puts on the dog. In their national tournament, the public links players—the file clerks, the foundry workers, the school kids and the cops off the beat—invade the course and the clubhouse of the smug bourgeoise. And under United States Golf Association supervision, for the U. S. G. A. provides the scorers, the referees and all tournament officials just like one of the big, swanky tournaments, see?

Fifty-one weeks out of the year, the public links hordes are content with their bumpy greens and crab-grass fairways, but this week they feast on a big-league course. There are caddies for all and waiters scurry around the clubhouse grounds in contrast to the self-service at home. Public links golf this week goes from cafeteria style to table d'hote.

They're all here this week—Mike Szwedko, the big Pittsburgh iron worker who can do things to that little ball; Charley Ferrera, the San Francisco steel puddler who twice won the National Public Links title; Arthur Armstrong, the Hawaiian shipping clerk who gets his way paid to the tournament annually by popular subscription in Honolulu; Charley Harter, the meat packer from Indianapolis, who shot a qualifying round of 69; and a veritable cross-section of folks from every point in the Nation who can't afford the rap at private clubs.

There's none of the snootiness that somehow attaches itself to club tournaments. The boys just go out there and play the best kind of golf they know how, and often it's good enough to win such as the National Amateur. They're not particular about their golfing costumes. Here this week, as usual, the eyeshade is a popular accessory. You can put the public links golfer on a private course, but you can't take his eyeshade away from him.

The folks who think sartorial get-up is half of golf's battle would have thrown a faint if they had watched young A. D. Turrentine, the public links champion of Durham, N. C., step up to the first tee in his qualifying round. A cotton shirt is good enough for him, and he wears his hair cropped right down to the scalp. Spike shoes, humph. A pair of blue rubber sneakers gets him around the course well enough.

But if there was any disposition to laugh when he started to play—he gripped the club crosshanded, among other things—there was no complaint with the results he got. Two hundred and fifty yards down the middle went his first drive, and he carded a respectable 76 for the round.

He never took a lesson, has been playing golf only three years, and at his rate of improvement he can spot most big-shot amateurs two up in a couple of years and beat 'em.

Public links golf may not be fashionable for folks with gobs of money to spend, but it's a heap sight more sociable according to lean, gaunt-looking Carl F. Kauffman, of Pittsburgh, the only three-time winner of the National Public Links title.

"This is the finest golf tournament in the country," says Kauffman. "No high-hat stuff, no snobbishness around the public links. We don't try to outdress each other or see who can spend the most money on clubs and outfits. We play for the fun of it and we get the most fun out of it, I know.

"I belonged to a private club in Pittsburgh for three years and I couldn't stand the pace. I could afford to play golf but not country-club golf. It was costing me between $700 and $1,000 a year with caddy fees and equipment and entertainment. As far as I was concerned that was too much and there are other people who are paying too much for their golf but haven't the sense to admit it."

The U. S. G. A., as we were saying, has taken kindly to the public links tournament and, in fact, is showing some signs of being a bit logical after years of narrow admiration of the game. To its everlasting credit it handled the case of Mr. Kauffmann with human-like wisdom. Three years ago his health failed, and he had to seek outdoor employment. He erected a driving range. When his entry for the public links tournament was submitted, the U. S. G. A. looked suspiciously at Kauffman's business and forthwith labelled him a professional.

But when Kauffman submitted all of the facts, making a point of the fact that he went into the golf business as a health measure, and testifying furthermore that he had never driven a ball off his own range, the U. S. G. A. relaxed its rules and accepted his entry.

Miss Bernhard, Grant Defeated at Sea Bright

Mary Hardwick Downs Defending Champion; Bitsy Bows to Henry Prusoff; Gil Hunt Wins in Singles, Mixed Doubles

By the Associated Press

Sea Bright, N. J., July 24.—Defending Women's Champion Helen Bernhard, of New York, and fifth-seeded Bryan M. Grant, jr., of Atlanta, were eliminated today in the third round of the Sea Bright Invitation Tennis Tournament.

England's flame-haired Mary R. Hardwick, second ranking player in her homeland, defeated Miss Bernhard in the longest singles match of the day, 4—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Henry Prusoff, 27-year-old Seattle veteran, cut down Grant, 6—2, 6—3.

The Atlanta mite, rated seventh nationally—three notches ahead of Prusoff—caught the big Westerner at the peak of his slashing game and could not cope with the blistering shot barrage.

Other favorites moved along into the men's quarter-finals, but four winners were forced to three sets.

Three young Californians—Jack Kramer, Owen Anderson and George Toley—put up courageous bids to stay in the competition. Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., defending champion, lost his first set of the tournament, defeating Kramer, 6—1, 3—6, 6—2.

Bobby Riggs, Chicago, eliminated Anderson, sound-hitting Los Angeles stylist, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, and Elwood T. Cooke, Portland, Oreg., ousted George A. Toley, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1.

Sidney B. Wood, jr., New Yorker who was playing his best tennis half a dozen years ago, removed Isadore Bellis, Philadelphia, while his former Davis Cup teammate, Wilmer L. Allison, Austin Tex., was yielding in straight sets to young Frank Kovacs, of Oakland.

Gil Hunt Advances

Other places in the round of eight were gained by Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., Washington, winner over National Junior net king, Ted Schroeder, jr., Glendale, Calif., and Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., conqueror of Ladislav Hecht, former Czech ace.

Hunt, Washington's lone entry, lost in the first round of the men's doubles but came through in the mixed doubles. In the former, he paired with Bitsy Grant to lose a hard 9—7, 6—4 match to Sidney B. Wood, jr., and Francis X. Shields. In the mixed event he paired with Hope Knowles, Philadelphia to down Katherine Winthrop and John Van Ryn, 6—2, 6—4.

Alice Marble, queen of the courts at home and abroad, led advance to the semifinal round, where she will meet Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, Mass., winner today over young Louise Brough, Beverley Hills, Calif.

Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, gained the other semifinal place with a victory over Mrs. John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex.

Senate Meets Cabmen

Senate Beer's crack softball club will attempt to break the winning streak of the Diamond Cabmen today at 5:30 at the Raymond Playgrounds, Tenth and Spring road northwest.

Lew Worsham Ties Own Mark At Burning Tree

Lewis Worsham tied his own non-competitive course record over his home layout yesterday at Burning Tree with a six under par 66. The young professional was playing with Thomas Riggs.

After starting with five pars, Worsham birdied 6 and 9 and was over par on 7 and 8 for an out nine of par 36. His putter was red hot on the back nine, as six birdies and three pars added up to a six under par 30 and the 66. He had eight birdies in all.

Most of the dozen District entries in the National P. G. A. qualifying rounds tomorrow at Five Farms will play the layout in a practice round today. The pros all plan to stay in nearby Towson, Md., tonight, as the drive from Washington to Five Farms takes a lot out of a player who has 36 holes ahead.

The boys all want to qualify this year as the scene of the championship, Hershey, Pa., is only 120 miles distant. Wiffy Cox, who has always played Five Farms well, Cliff Spencer and Al Houghton will be favorites in the field of 30 on records to date. The low four scores will represent the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. body in the national championship.

Gov. Clamps Down On Saratoga Gambling

Albany, N. Y., July 24 (INS).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman today clamped down on alleged gambling and vice at Saratoga, N. Y., only four days before the opening of the historic race track there.

Calling upon Saratoga County officials for suppression of "criminal offenses," Gov. Lehman said the action was taken after he received a complaint alleging "the existence of gambling and other violations of law."

Billy Soose Pounds Out 10-Round Decision Over Ken Overlin

7,000 Cheer Nontitle Bout At Scranton

Washington Boxer Victim of Year's Major Ring Upset In Rainy Setting

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

The two judges, Mike Bernstein, of Wilkes Barre, and Roy Edwards, of Williamsport, voted for Soose, while Referee Jack Walton, of Scranton voted for Overlin.

Most of the large contingent of New York boxing writers who witnessed this most important bout in the Anthracite region in 14 years, did not agree with the decision. The United Press gave Soose only three rounds, scored two even and credited Overlin with the other five.

However, it must be emphasized that the slender dark-haired Soose came on like a ball of fire in the closing rounds and indicated that he probably would have stopped Playboy Ken had the bout been scheduled for the championship distance of 15 sessions.

Ring Slippery

The last half of the bout was fought out in rain that reached a downpour as the battle ended. The ring became so slippery that Overlin's feet went out from under him and he fell to the floor for the only trip to the canvas during the bout.

Most of the fans stood up and put their ringside seats over their heads and others protected themselves with wearing apparel. It was a scene reminiscent of the first Dempsey-Tunney encounter at Philadelphia.

Overlin, unbeaten in 19 previous fights, forced the milling in the first half of the fight, landing barrage after barrage of hooks to slender Billy's head and body. Ken took the first two rounds, according to United Press scoring, but Billy opened up in the third and staggered Ken twice with hard straight rights to the head. Overlin fought back furiously, but Soose had a decided margin in this frame.

Overlin Rallies

Overlin weathered several hard shots to the head early in the fourth round, but rallied to fight on even terms for the session.

Champion Ken came on with rain in the fifth and launched a hooking attack that he continued through the sixth and seventh to take those three sessions. Soose started his closing rally in the eighth when he staggered Overlin with three hard rights to the head. However, Overlin fought back to make this round even. Soose stepped up his tempo in the ninth and tenth and belted the champion around the ring with such surprising zest that the rain-drenched crowd went semi-delirious. Regardless of damage to personal appearance or wearing apparel, the fans remained rooted, electrified by the surprising spectacle.

Both Overweight

There was no title at stake tonight, because of a weight agreement that sent both men into the ring scaling more than 160 pounds. Overlin registered 163 pounds, just three-fourths of a pound more than Belting Billy.

Tonight's gate was unofficially estimated at $10,000, a satisfactory gross for the syndicate of wealthy Scranton sportsmen who are campaigning to bring big-time boxing back to the coal mines. They are already negotiating for a return Overlin-Soose battle in which the title will be at stake.

Three Trojans Chosen For All-Star Eleven

End, Guard, Quarterback, Are Choice of Grid Fans for Annual Clash Against Pro Champions at Soldiers Field, August 29

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 24.—The Nation's football fans paid eloquent tribute today to Southern California's great 1939 eleven by placing three Trojans in the starting line-up for the College All-Stars' game with the Green Bay Packers in Soldier Field August 29.

A total of 6,575,957 votes were cast in 47 States, determining the personnel of the 72-player squad for the annual charity spectacle between the college seniors of last fall and the pro champions.

The players who received the largest total of votes at their respective positions compose the starting line-up.

Kinnick Outstanding

Nile Kinnick, of Iowa, who sparkplugged the Hawkeye machine to dazzling heights, was the only player to poll more than a million votes, leading the halfbacks with 1,189,076 votes.

The three Trojans accorded spots in the kickoff group were Bill Fisk, end; Harry Smith, guard, and Quarterback Ambrose Schindler.

Tackles—Nick Cutlich, Northwestern, 792,827; Joe Boyd, Texas A. and M., 773,256.

Guards—Smith, 846,318; Jim Logan, Indiana, 781,347.

Centers—Clyde Turner, Hardin-Simmons, 784,993.

Quarterback—Schindler, 759,312.

Halfbacks—Kinnick, 1,189,076; Lou Brock, Purdue, 936,482.

Fullback — Joe Tuesing, Notre Dame, 981,276.

Thus Southern California is the only school to rate more than one starter. From a sectional standpoint the Midwest leads with six starters, compared to three for the Pacific Coast, and two from the Southwest.

3 Other Trojans Listed

Southern California placed three others on the squad, giving them six in all, one less than Notre Dame, which led in this respect. Northwestern placed five on the squad and Iowa and Purdue four each.

The collegians will gather at Evanston, Ill., August 11 to begin 18 days of practice, the same period allotted to the Packers to prepare for the game. In six past games, the pros have won two, the college boys two and two ended in tie games.

Proceeds of the game, which usually draws about 80,000, will go to three charities designated by the Chicago Tribune, originator and sponsor of the contest.

Walters Wins 15th As Reds Stretch Lead

30,102 Watch Dodgers Lose Third in Row To Cincinnati and Fall Eight Back; Tex Carleton Routed in Second Inning

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 24.—Bucky Walters mastered the Brooklyn Dodgers with seven-hit pitching tonight for his fifteenth victory of the season as the Cincinnati Reds rapped out a 6-to-3 decision and increased their National League lead to eight games.

The Reds routed Tex Carleton with a four-run flurry in the second inning and never were in danger, although Dolph Camilli took some of the edge off their triumph by hitting his eighth home run of the season with Joe Medwick on base and two out in the ninth inning.

Reds Sweep Series

It was the seventeenth victory in 19 games for the Reds, whose sweep of this three-game series gave them a record of seven wins in their last eight games with the Dodgers.

Walters worked effortlessly toward his goal, giving no walks and keeping out of trouble except in the second and ninth stanzes. The first run off him came on successive doubles by Dixie Walker and Jim Wasdell.

The crowd of 30,102 lost most of its enthusiasm when the Reds scored a run in the first frame on Lonny Frey's double and Frank McCormick's single and was left completely limp by the four-run frame that followed.

Goodman Triples

With one out, Mike McCormick, Billy Myers and Walters hit successive singles and then with two out Frey singled and Ival Goodman tripled.

This ushered in Luke Hamlin, who put out the fire, but was victimized by his teammates for the other Red run in the fourth. Myers opened that inning with a single and Walters laid down a perfect bunt, which he beat out as Catcher Babe Phelps threw wild into right-field, where Wasdell juggled the ball while Myers scurried home.

Bimelech to Be Retired After This Season, Is Report

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., July 24.—The Courier-Journal says it has learned "on good authority" that Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, winner of the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and second in the Kentucky Derby this year, will be retired to the stud at the end of the present racing season.

The newspaper says the 3-year-old son of Black Tony—La Troienne will be taken to Bradley's Idle Hour farm near Lexington, Ky.

The Courier-Journal quotes its source as saying Bradley made the decision after Bimlech failed to win the Derby and that the colonel "has always been more enthusiastic about breeding horses than winning big purses."

Red Sox Fined $500 for Signing 'Blank' Contract With Player

Chicago, July 24.—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis announced today that he had fined the Boston Red Sox of the American League $500 for signing a "blank" contract with Lawrence Jansen, a minor league player.

Jansen was declared a free agent and the Boston club and its minor league affiliates were prohibited from having any dealings with him for three years.

Landis said the club violated a ruling of May 20, 1938, which forbids signing players to blank contracts in which a club's name subsequently is inserted and the player ordered to report to that club.

Landis charged that Ernie Johnson, a Boston scout, had signed Jansen to a contract which was forwarded to Billy Evans, director of Boston minor league affiliates, with directions to withhold it until notification to promulgate because Jansen was playing in a league which prohibited players from signing contracts.

He said the notification was withheld and that Jansen was sent to a semi-pro club where Boston players are given try-outs.

Chisox Down Red Sox, 12-10; Sixth Straight

Both Teams Collect Total of 34 Hits, Including 6 Homers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 24.—Chicago's White Sox and Boston's Red Sox got hot in their own right today and in better than 100-degree temperature boomed out 34 hits totaling 64 bases.

Chicago got the decision, its sixth in a row, 12 to 10.

The barrage included six home runs, three triples and six doubles and brought into action seven pitchers, three by the White Sox.

Despite the White Sox big first inning, which produced a 6-to-1 lead, Boston had the tying runs on base in the ninth when the side was retired.

Yanks Waste Six-Run Lead To Lose, 14-12

Judnich's Homer Wins for Browns in 9th; 11 Hurlers Toil

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 24.—The world champion New York Yankees came apart at the seams today, losing a 14 to 12 debacle to the St. Louis Browns when Walt Judnich hit his eighteenth home run of the year with one on in the ninth.

It was the fifth straight defeat for the Yanks, who skidded within a game of the second division in the American League.

What made the outcome all the more shocking was that New York had gained a six-run lead in the first inning when Bill Dickey hit a home run with the bases loaded and Joe Gordon hit one with them empty. Joe DiMaggio and Tom Henrich also hit homers for the Yanks, but their pitching collapsed.

The Yanks used six hurlers and the Browns five to give up 28 hits and 13 walks. Steve Sundra, who won 11 games and lost only one last year, was charged with his second defeat in 24 hours. He hasn't won a game and has lost five this year.

He went to the mound in the ninth, after the Yanks had scored two runs to tie the score, and pitched to two batters.

Bees Come From Behind, Beat Cubs, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 24.—The Boston Bees snapped a six-game losing streak today by coming from behind twice to nip the Chicago Cubs, 4-3. The triumph, insured when Carvel Rowell tripled in Buddy Hassett with the deciding run in the seventh inning, was the third Dick Errickson has gained over the Cubs this season.

Errickson held the opposition to 10 scattered hits while his aroused teammates pounded Claude Passeau for 13, including three extra-basers.

Rabbit Warstler, obtained from the Bees for the $7,500 waiver price, celebrated his tenth anniversary in major league baseball by relieving Bob Mattick at shortstop for the Cubs in the third inning.

In his debut with the Chicagoans, he went hitless in two times at bat.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

NEW YORK, July 24.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

Well, we guess Judge Landis will be forced to bar Jim Farley from baseball the day Jim takes over the Yankees. The judge is fanatically opposed to anyone who has an interest in horse racing, as witness his tacit embargo on Rogers Hornsby, and it so happens that Jim hasn't missed a Derby for years. And doesn't plan to miss the next one; in fact, Jim wouldn't be adverse to a good tip . . . The victory of Tony Zale over Al Hostak for the N. B. A.'s middleweight crown just about clears up the muddled situation. For Zale's managers, Art Winch and Sam Pian, are as friendly to Mike Jacobs as Hostak's handlers were hostile—Winch and Pian having practically started Mike in the promotion business by turning over Barney Ross for Mike's first show. A Zale vs. Ken Overlin match probably will be one of the indoor shows at the Garden this winter.

CONSIDINE

Wow! What a great getaway that mayor of Salt Lake City, Ab Jenkins, could make . . . The backers of the new trotting track at Roosevelt Raceway have invested about $100,000 in the venture. The auto racing layout cost more than a million, and George Marshall, one of its prime movers, got out before the first of the two races held there . . . Dunbar Bostwick, owner of the winter book favorite for the Hambletonian, Kuno, says that night racing is more natural than day racing because the horse, like most other animals, is a nocturnal being and would prefer to doze through an afternoon . . . which is no surprise to a lot of horse players.

Zeke Bonura is the guy who didn't have to join the Navy to see the world . . . Whatever became of Dizy Dean? . . . When Phil Rizzuto comes up to the Yanks from Kansas City next season he will remind old timers of Rabbit Maranville, for he is little and he catches infield flies against his stomach. The main dissimilarity is that he's a better hitter in a slump than the Rabbit was in a streak.

The site of the Louis-Baer fight is still unsettled. Mike Jacobs is leaving today or tomorrow on a trip which will take him to Chicago, Detroit and the Coast, looking for the best bid . . . Mike's chief worry should be devising some scheme to get Baer mad at Louis. Not that it would do Max any particular good, but it would make for a much better fight. Max can no longer fight unless he works himself into a hysterical hatred of his opponent (to wit Galento and Farr) but Louis is about as hard to dislike as his cartoon counterpart, Joe Palooka . . . One of the tragic busts of the turf had a great silver lining in him. It was (and is) Lord Dewar's Challenger. He was unbeaten as a 2-year-old in England. Dewar died, which meant that Challenger could not race as a 3-year-old—that being a solemn old rule among the racing gentlemen of England, to guard against the purchase of promising colts of lately deceased owners by some bounder who had just made his money. John Dewar, the late lord's nephew, thus sold Challenger to the American horseman, W. L. Brann and R. S. Castle for $50,000, even though he was favored to win the derby at Epsom.

Just before the colt could be shipped to America he was frightened by a bird flying out of a bush one day and nearly skewered himself on a barbed wire fence. He recovered, after there was talk of destroying him, but he never amounted to much—finishing far behind Mike Hall in the 1931 $100,000 Coffroth Handicap. Challenger was retired to stud—and eventually he begot Challedon, winner already of five times Challenger's purchase price.

The democratization of lawn tennis was never more pointedly brought out than on Tuesday when Welby Van Horn met defeat at the hands of Izzy Bellis . . . An effort will be made soon to change the New York State Athletic Commission's hand-bandaging rules. The new rule would give the fighters two yards of adhesive and ten yards of gauze for each hand, instead of a yard of tape and five yards of gauze . . . Latest hands to crack under too flimsy wrapping were those of promising young Jackie Donovan, the Buffalo boy Joe McCarthy has been boosting for a year . . . The football Giants have come up with two more small college grid stars: 215-pound Myron Clarton, a tackle from Whittier (Calif.) College, and Weenie Bynum, 165-pound skat-back from Centenary.

The cry, "Fore!" in golf has been in use for nearly 300 years, Robert Clark writes in his book, "Golf, a Royal and Ancient Game." James II started it in 1681 by hiring one Andrew Dickson to station himself down the fairways and watch where his blinkin' majesty's shots landed. At first he was known as a "before," and it was customary to give a yell to the lout to make him pay attention before hitting that feather-stuffed kroflite. In less time than it takes to spell your name by stirring alphabet soup (1771) the St. Andrews Club formally pronounced such caddies as "fore caddies," and a brief 85 years later the Black Heath Golf Club ruled that fore caddies must wear red caps and carry red flags "to warn the passersby."

Florimel Captures 2-Year-Old Trot At Pawtucket

Pawtucket, R. I., July 24 (AP).—E. Roland Harriman's Florimel raced impressively against nine other juveniles to win the American 2-year-old trot, feature event of the Grand Circuit program today.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Harriman were here to see the filly turn both heats in 2:10½, winning the first from W. H. Strang, jr., His Excellency and the second from Benny Franks' Lucy Hanover.

The purse totaled $4,480.82.

Cherry Trifle Drives to Victory in Inaugural at Bel Air Track

3-Year-Old Pays $5.30 As Favorite

Jockey Vesseli Returns to Saddle After Suspension To Ride Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bel Air, Md., July 24.—Cherry Trifle, a 3-year-old who performed in excellent style at the recent Delaware Park meeting, was all business here this afternoon and drove to a length-and-a-half victory in the Bel Air Inaugural, featuring opening day here. The son of Questionnaire and Cherry Tart made good in the role of a $5.50 favorite in the test over the 7-furlong course.

Using their programs for fans, 8,000 customers reported for the sport of kings as conducted by the Harford County Fair Association here at Maryland's newest track. Despite a heavy track that added an extra hazard to wagering, the betting was some of the best ever made here. More than $64,000 went through the tote on the first four races.

Racing in the colors of the Knollwood Stable and ridden by Jockey A. Vesseli, who returned to the saddle after a suspension, Cherry Trifle had no chance to loaf. Licketysplit set the early pace some three lengths in front of Cherry Trifle and Red Wrack. It was not until approaching the far turn that Licketysplit stopped and Red Wrack and Cherry Trifle came up to contest for the lead. After a short tussle, the latter drew clear and Vesseli pounded away thereafter in front. Irish Moon came with a bold rush in the early stretch, but hung in the closing stages.

Cherry Trifle was clocked in 1:32, very ordinary time, even over the deep, heavy track.

From a monetary angle, the daily double was the high point of the day, R. H. Heighe's Stadium won the first event to pay $27.20 and Mary A. McElwee's Julie Macaw took the second race at an individual mutuel of $21.70. Those who couped the "6 and 2" pair took down a double pay-off of $479.80.

The first steeplechase of the summer season went to J. H. C. Forbes' Axacan. The 9-year-old came from behind to get to the front and coasted home four lengths in front of H. Howard's Fire Light.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STADIUM, $27.20, $8.80, $5.20; MAYFERN, $4.20, $3.10; SHOTAGIN, $9.00.

STADIUM, well placed from start, raced extremely wide, responded willingly when placed to hard drive and wore down MAYFERN inside sixteenth pole. The latter disposed of SHOTAGIN to get to front, set good pace, but weakened badly in final 70 yards while under strong handling. SHOTAGIN was sent to front under hustling tactics between horses and weakened gradually through stretch run.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place same. Went to post 2:47. Off 2:49. Winner, Mary A. McElwee's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JULIE MACAW, $21.70, $8.10, $5.70; SCHLEY AL, $4.10, $3.40; BARRACA (entry), $4.10.

JULIE MACAW went to front going to first turn, saved ground while setting pace and won easily. SCHLEY AL was slow to get into best stride, worked way to contention and was eased up while holding BARRACA safe.

Daily Double, STADIUM and JULIE MACAW, Paid $479.80

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $600; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:16½. Off 3:18. Winner, J. H. C. Forbes' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AXACAN, $9.90, $4.90, $3.50; FIRE LIGHT, $3.80, $3.50; TAM O' SHANTER, $4.00.

AXACAN, steadied for the opening mile, saved ground while improving position, disposed of FIRE LIGHT to get to front and was running easily at end. FIRE LIGHT set good pace, withstood early challenges of CAPSTAN, but could not resist winner while holding others safe. TAM O' SHANTER was rated early, moved up menacingly after mile and weakened gradually thereafter. JUSTA BUD was well placed early, ran off course on inside, came in and was not a factor thereafter.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:52. Off 3:53⅕. Winner, Mrs. C. B. Inscoe's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOCTOR'S NURSE, $9.40, $5.60, $3.80; RED ROBIN, $29.80, $12.40; HONEY MAID, $6.20.

DOCTOR'S NURSE, first away, withstood early bids of SEASONAL, drew out and was in hand while winning far off. RED ROBIN, slow to begin, worked way to contention and closed under drive. HONEY MAID responded to urging on backstretch to move up menacingly and tired gradually thereafter. SARANITE went evenly and could not reach contention. SEASONAL forced early pace and stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:26. Off 4:27½. Winner, Knollwood Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHERRY TRIFLE, $5.30, $4.20, $3.50; IRISH MOON, $9.00, $4.70; RED WROCK, $2.90.

CHERRY TRIFLE, forward factor from start, responded gamely when placed to drive, took command with good energy and was kept to pressure to end. IRISH MOON could not keep up early, came with good energy through stretch and weakened right at close. RED WRACK was in thick of early contention, took brief lead at far turn and tired.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57½. Off 4:58. Winner, A. Derrico's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE TOUCH, $16.40, $6.60, $3.80; DARBY DU, $7.30, $3.50; QUATREDOM, $3.70.

SURE TOUCH, steadied along early, came wide for racing room while improving position, forced to front in stretch, but had to be kept to extreme pressure to stave off closing challenge of DARBY DU. The latter trailed for three-quarters, responded gamely when shaken up and closed with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:28. Off 5:29½. Winner, D. Galotta's br. m. (5), by Minotaur—Rachel Potter. Trained by V. Arthur. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHALOTAUR, $5.30, $3.80, $3.30; WORTH OWNING, $8.50, $5.80; SCARLET O, $5.60.

CHALOTAUR, closest to SCARLET O's pace from start, responded gamely when placed to prove, took command and just lasted under vigorous handling. WORTH OWNING saved ground to improve position, moved up with bold rush in midstretch and barely failed to set up. FOXTON worked way to contention entering stretch and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:02. Off 6:03. Winner, J. W. Heinicke's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFFICIATE, $5.60, $3.30, $2.70; SEALOCH, $4.80, $3.40; CHARLES F, $3.30.

OFFICIATE, steadied while closest to pace of WELSH STAR, took command when latter stopped and swerved through stretch under hard drive. SEALOCH could not keep up early, moved up boldly at far turn and hung in final stages. CHARLES F saved ground early, but could not threaten seriously while strongly ridden.

Selections at Bel Air.

Dear Al:

Because the race train from Washington cannot arrive in time to allow patrons ample time to line up their bets, the post time here has been changed from 2 p. m. to 2:15 p. m. The air-conditioned special, with a diner, leaves Union Station at 11:55 a. m., according to Agent W. P. Cox. My assistant, in charge of digging up funnies, comes through with this one: On a small track one of the jockeys had been approached to take part in a boat race. He was determined to break it up. When the start came he hustled his horse to the front, opened a five-length lead and coasted home ten on top. When he returned to the unsaddling ring, he glanced at the results board and was surprised to see a sign reading "Foul Claimed." Before he could get up to the stewards, he looked again and his number was being taken down. "What did you disqualify me for?" asked the jockey. "Why, there wasn't a horse close to me during the entire race. I couldn't have fouled anybody." The steward looked him in the eyes and replied, "You have got to stay 60 feet from that inside rail and 60 feet from that outside rail." Enough of that. I understand Art Brown is going fishing. Imagine one sucker trying to catch another sucker. George C. Everhart has purchased Limerick and Bay Drop from C. M. Feltner. He hopes to make a steeplechaser out of Limerick. Other tracks were heavily represented here yesterday. Harold Bester, of Hagerstown; Joseph Farrell, of Bowie; Matt Daiger and Dave Woods, of Pimlico, and others put in appearances. BILL.

First race—On the Beam had plenty of bad racing luck at Hagerstown. Should like this longer track and is as fit as hands make horses. Clay Hill is a fair sort, but appears to be too heavily weighted with 121 pounds. He Rolls has been rested and should give a good account of himself.

Second race—Tavern, second on the also eligible list, would defeat a field of this sort if sent postward. Appears capable of handling the 114-pound assignment. More Poise turned in a good effort last out and is dangerous. Geodesian is in clever hands and could awaken.

Third race—Baffler has trained in good fashion and may be the right one in a rather open affair. War Port has plenty of speed and knows his way over this course. Quakerstreet to take care of the minor award.

Fourth race—Levena appears the best suited of those gathered for this sprint. This one has been rested and should take it all. Fair Haired could not make the turns at the other track and should go well here. Navigation appears to be sliding.

Fifth race—Summer Stock jogged in front of two fields at the other town. Can sprint or go a route and gets in light. I see no reason for mistakes. Blind Brook was consistent at Charles Town and should appreciate this track. Bellthorn will be dangerous if in action.

Sixth race—Elton Head probably is the best of this lot. Gets the top assignment and I'm going to string along. Quilk Vine had a rough trip last out and is better than that race. James Pal has worked well and could be a threat.

Seventh race—Perfect Liar appears well placed in this field. Likes the route and is fit and ready. Kenner has plenty of speed and should turn in a good race. Trostar will be a threat if sent postward.

Eighth race—Black Demon returned to form last out and should turn back oppposition of this caliber. Custer has speed enough to take command and may be hard to dislodge. Sun Sweep stumbled in that last.

Best bet—Summer Stock.

Reliance Upsets O'Donnell's in Post Industrial League, 8-7

Late-Inning Rallies Aid In Victory

Danny Howard, Dick McHale Provide Home Runs, Latter Clinches Game

An extra-base barrage in the last three innnigs gave Reliance an upset 8-7 victory over O'Donnell's in a Post Industrial League game yesterday on the Ellipse.

The favored Sea Grill nine was coasting with a 6-1 lead when Reliance struck with four runs in the seventh. Three singles, a triple by McNeill and Danny Howard's homer figured in the rally.

Trailing 7-5 in the last of the ninth, Howard led off with a double, England was safe on an error and McHale blasted a home run with two on base to clinch the game.

Paul Jones, Joe Cox Meet On Mat Tonight

Battle Royal Also On Card at Griffith Stadium

A feature bout between Paul Jones, the strapping figure-four scissors king from Texas, and Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, and a battle royal between five tough grapplers, are among the highlights on tonight's wrestling show at Griffith Stadium.

Jones and Cox will clash in a finish bout, with the giant Texan seeking his fourth straight. Already Jones has disposed of Emil Dusek, Ed Newman and the Golden Terror, the one-time maskless marvel, in his three appearances since returning to Washington after a four-year absence.

Jones whipped the Terror last week, after whacking him plumb over the noggin with a ringside chair. And in the end the two were dueling with chairs before Referee Casey Berger stepped in.

Cox will pit his powerful arm stretch against Jones' scissors. In his last shot here Cox also scored over the Golden Terror.

In the battle royal Reb Russell, Tommy O'Toole, Tommy Rae, Abie Coleman and Jack Drake will go after one another. The winner, according to Promoter Joe Turner, will be rewarded with a match with the Jones-Cox victor.

A semi-windup match brings together Frank Sexton, former Ohio State athlete, and Warren Bockwinkle, one-time St. Louis University athlete.

Ralph Garibaldi and Curly Dunchin clash in a 30-minute bout opening the card at 8:30.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

George Case merits the chief award in the Man of the Month contest in the point distribution on the basis of yesterday's game.

To Case, six points, because he made three of the Nats hits, including a double, and lent an important single to the seventh inning rally.

To Joe Krakauskas, five points, because he pitched shut out ball in a five-inning relief role and hit an important single.

To Buddy Lewis, four points, because he singled, doubled and played a brilliant game in rightfield.

To G. Walker, two points, because he drove in two of the Nats' runs. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	51	Dutch Leonard	19
Buddy Myer	49	Rene Monteagudo	17
George Case	36	Alex Carrasquel	10
Rick Ferrell	35	Joe Krakauskas	5
Ken Chase	33	Jimmy Bloodworth	5

Challedon in First Workout At Hollywood

Gallops Mile in Preparation for Cup Race Saturday

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 24.—W. L. Brann's Challedon went through his first hard workout on California soil today, running a mile under restraint between races at Hollywood Park in preparation for the approaching $50,000 Gold Cup Handicap.

Galloping alone with his regular exercise boy up, the Maryland 4-year-old was clocked in 1 minute 39 4-5 for the mile, and breezed on out for another furlong in 1:53 2-5. Clockers on the backstretch said Challendon was under tight rein throughout the work.

Kayak II, Charles S. Howard's hope in the big race Saturday, galloped the mile in 1 minute 38 seconds last week, but was not under the restraint Challedon was today.

Jockey Basil James flew into Los Angeles from New York earlier today. He will guide Can't Wait for the Myron Selznick Stable in the Gold Cup.

the Nats' third straight hit—a single to left—and Hutchinson was ordered to the showers.

Tom Seats was Del Baker's pitching choice at this point and his first act was to walk Lewis and force in a run. The Nats' attack then bogged. Walker and Travis hit into force plays, but two runs scored. When West walked, Benton got the pitching job and obliged the Tigers by fanning Bloodworth for the third out.

In the eighth, trailing 7-5, the Nats again got the tying runs on base, but only after two were out. Pinch Hitter Welaj walked and Case singled to left, but Benton whiffed Buddy Lewis to take care of that situation and in the ninth the Nats couldn't get to first base, to coin an expression.

Ft. Stevens Juniors Win in Playoff

Fort Stevens Juniors won a playoff of Sunday's 9-9 tie over Police and Fire Post, 2-1, in the American Legion Junior Baseball League yesterday at Walter Reed.

Weisenberg, pitching for the winners, loaded the bases with two out in the ninth and forced in a run with a hit batsman. He fanned Pohutsky to retire the side.

Williams Opens Training Here Tomorrow

Will Hold Workout At Turner's Arena For McDowell Bout

Joe Louis' welterweight protege, Holman Williams, regarded by the Brown Bomber as the man to succeed Henry Armstrong as world's champion, will pitch his training camp at Turner's Arena tomorrow to complete drills for his 10-round date with Wild Bill McDowell next Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

Expected here with Williams is Louis' ace trainer and developer, Jack (Chappie) Blackburne, who, too, is predicting Holman will be next champion.

Louis will not arrive until Monday morning. The great heavyweight king will referee the six-round semiwindup between Gilbert Mayo, of Alexandria, and Vince Truminello, of Baltimore. It is quite fitting that he handle this match, since Joe is a product of the Golden Gloves ranks, and Mayo and Truminello are Golden Gloves champions in their respective cities.

McDowell, who has been training at Madame Beys, N. J., will arrive here Saturday for a two-day workout.

Williams will drill publicly, starting at 1:30 at the arena tomorrow. He will train on Saturday also.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has completed his supporting card for the Williams-McDowell mixed scrap. Joe Turner says it's the best "Gabe ever has put on."

A six-rounder finds Johnny Dean, colorful Irisher, meeting El Brookman, of Washington. Another six shows Oscar Wright, the Philadelphia Black Thunderbolt, opposing Jackie Carter, local lad, in a mixed bout. Two colored heavies—Joe Price and Jimmy Green, meet in a four, and Maxie Long, of Dallas, who, 'tis said, bears a sharp resemblance to Max Baer, makes his debut here in a four against Eddie Camps, of Allentown, Pa. Long and Camps are light heavyweights.

Tickets continue at the popular prices, and are on sale at Turner's Arena.

Stimits, Furgol and 18-year-old Charley Lind, Denver High School boy, were marked men all day because of their spectacular shooting during the qualifying rounds. Lind, only a stroke behind the leaders, nevertheless was considered a "medal play freak" who would fold under match play pressure until he whipped two veteran match players today.

Beats Springer

Stimits first defeated Marshal Springer, of Chicago, 3 and 1. Then he ran into real trouble—F. E. Ames, Beaumont, Tex., machinist who carried him all the way to the twentieth hole before cracking. Ames approached over the tenth green into a trap and blasted across the green coming back, taking a six to Stimits' match-winning five.

Furgol, favorite of the gallery because of his crippled left arm, disposed of Edward Ebel, of Minneapolis, 3 and 2, then whipped Bill Fritz, of San Francisco, 2 up. It was Fritz who upset Art Armstrong, of Honolulu, semifinalist last year.

Lind, who said he's "been unconscious all week and that cup looks as big as a bushel basket," walked through two matches as if in a dream. He knocked over Roger Skidmore, of Louisville, 1 up, then eliminated Walter Gilliam, of San Mateo, Calif., 1 up after winning three on the first nine holes. Gilliam had a 68 on one of his qualifying rounds.

Another favorite on the march is Lou Jennings, bookkeeper in a Portland, Oreg., bank, who ripped par consistently in practice rounds at Rackham municipal course. He defeated Bill Korns, of Salt Lake City, 6 and 5, and Samuel Musico, Pittsburgh, 6 and 2.

A Ninth-Hole Candy Bar Helps You Golf Players

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 24.—If you're having trouble with your golf score, keep your head down, your eye on the ball and chaw on a candy bar along about the seventh or ninth hole.

The candy addition to this time-worn advice was inserted today by Dr. Paul Michael, of Oakland, Calif., who reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association on blood sugar studies on 30 male golfers, 30 to 45 years old, with handicaps of from 10 to 27.

"More ketogenic types of lunch (high in fat) and consumption of sugar or candy at the seventh or ninth hole," Dr. Michael reported, "resulted in definite decreases in untoward symptoms, and, on the whole, better scores."

Sugar in the blood provides immediately available food for muscle energy.

Doubt Not Wins Allowance Race at Suffolk

Gelding Runs Distance In Season's Best Time at Track

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 24.—Mrs. T. Christopher's Doubt Not, 4-year-old gelded son of Burgoo King, ran three quarters in 1:10 2-5, fastest of the New England season, and won the Boylston $1,200 allowance sprint for 3-year-olds and upward today at Suffolk Downs.

Doubt Not, in his fifth win of the year and his third at the Downs, had four lengths over Rodney C. Groff's Forever Prince, which, in turn, had a nose over Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time. B. P. Woodson's Leading Article ran fourth in the field of seven.

The winner paid $3.80, $2.60, $2.40. Forever Prince paid $3.80 and $2.60. Rough Time paid $3.20 to show.

Marston Hurls May To Victory Over Allied

Buss Marston pitched a 4-0, four-hit shutout for May Hardware over Allied Roofing in the first game of a playoff series in the Northeast Commercial League yesterday on Langdon Field. He also made two of his team's four hits.

Furniture Sales Reported Steady In Six Months

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 24 (AP).—Furniture orders for the first half of 1940 showed little variation from those for the similar period of last year, Seidman & Seidman, business accountants, reported today, but the survey indicated an improvement would finally be shown when the heavier bookings of the July market were cleared.

No changes occurred in furniture employment during the month of June, either in numbers or wages paid. Compared with the same month of last year, however, there was an employe increase of 4 per cent, a pay roll increase of 7 per cent, and a pay roll advance for the six months as a whole of about 11 per cent.

The report says: "There is every indication that home building is headed for its best year in more than a decade; furniture should soon begin to more definitely feel the effects of this building upsurge."

Thompson's Cuts Loss in Period

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—John R. Thompson today reported during the period from January 1 to June 14 a loss of $66,290, after nonrecurring credits and expenses in connection with lease adjustments, as compared with $148,585 in the corresponding period a year ago.

The company stated that although four restaurants were closed during the past 24 weeks, sales were only $12,044 less than last year, or $5,108,362 during the 1939 period as compared with $5,096,318 in the like 1940 period.

The company operates restaurants in Chicago, New York, Washington, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Memphis and various other cities.

Second Period Profits Up 39% Over Year Ago

Heavy Industry, Rails Lead in First 150 Reporting Firms

By the Associated Press

New York, July 24.—Profits of the first 150 corporations to report for the second quarter of 1940 were 39 per cent larger than the same period a year ago, an Associated Press survey showed today.

Excluding the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., whose earnings accounted for approximately one quarter of the total, the companies rolled up profits 52 per cent larger than a year ago.

Sufficient reports have not yet been received to afford trustworthy comparisons of the performance of various industries, but from the data on hand it appears the parade to better profits was led by heavy industry and the railroads. The petroleum industry also showed a notable gain.

The only group which, on the basis of current reports, seems destined to fall behind the same period last year is the food division, where many manufacturers have had profit margins reduced by increased cost of wheat, corn and other grains.

Second quarter earnings statements received so far show the largest gains for the steel industry and the railroads, but important units in both industries must be heard from before an adequate comparison can be made. Manufacturers of machinery, railroad equipment, electrical supplies and auto accessories are also among the leaders.

Makers of chemicals and building materials and equipment showed more moderate gains.

The improvement in earnings was not confined to a few large companies, but was spread over a broad area. Of the first 150 companies to report, 114 had larger profits or smaller deficits than a year ago. Only 36 made poorer showings.

Ex-Treasury Aide Joins Big Board

New York, July 24 (AP).—Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the United States Treasury, has been named a governor of the New York Stock Exchange, representing the general public, the exchange announced today.

Magill, born in Auburn, Ill., 44 years ago, culminated a term of service with the U. S. Treasury Department begun in 1923 when he resigned as Undersecretary in 1938 after nearly two years in that post. He teaches tax law at Columbia University.

Wheat, Corn Buoyant on Heat Wave

Cotton Also Improves, Ends 50 to 65 Cents A Bale Higher

By the Associated Press

Wheat and corn paced irregularly higher commodity futures yesterday.

Mounting temperatures in the corn belt brought heavy demand for that grain at Chicago which carried prices at one time to 4 cents a bushel higher. Profit taking cut down improvement to 1¼@2⅝ cents a bushel at the close. Wheat finished 1⅛@1½ cents up.

Cotton at New York advanced 50 to 65 cents a bale and hides for future delivery improved .13 to .17 of a cent a pound.

Other futures making modest progress at New York included cottonseed oil, wool tops, No. 1 silk and copper.

Unchanged to lower were lead, Santos coffee, sugar and cocoa. Straits tin lost ⅛ to ½ cent a pound.

The Associated Press index of 35 important wholesale commodities dropped to a new 1940 low at 69.62 from 69.66 on Tuesday. The index is based on 1926 prices as 100.

Fisher and Stout Plan Low-Price Plane Output

Detroit, July 24 (AP).—Fred J. Fisher, one of the foundess of the Fisher Body Corporation and William B. Stout, pioneer Detroit aeronautical engineer, have joined forces, it was learned today, in an effort to get an all-metal low price plane into mass production.

The arrangement was confirmed jointly today by Fisher and Stout.

The new plane, which will be in the experimental stages for at least six months, will be a high-wing monoplane, with engine mounted in the rear and driving a push propeller. It will seat two persons side-by-side in a pear-shaped body forward of the wing, cruise at 110 miles an hour and land at 35, Stout asserted.

Security Sales Halved in June

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission reported yesterday that total sales on national securities exchanges during June were less than half of the May volume.

The market value of June sales was $650,779,911, a decline of 59 per cent from the May total but only 4.8 per cent under June, 1939. The number of shares of stock sold totaled 25,370,137, a decrease of 62.8 from May. The principal amount of bonds sold was $134,596,868, which was 38.7 per cent under May.

Foreign Markets

London, July 24 (AP).—Quotations were marked up in the stock exchange today, as general reaction to the Government's budget message appeared favorable.

Gilt-edge securities staged a last-minute rally. Industrials, especially tobaccos, which drew a less than expected tax, advanced. Department store stocks were firm on the theory that the new taxes would not unduly interfere with retail trade. Dividend hopes again advanced domestic rails.

The low yield market extended the advance of Tuesday. War loan 3½s were quoted £99½. Kaffirs, coppers and other base metals continued their advance. Rubbers were steady.

Liverpool.—Trade calling and outside buying, principally in near months, resulted in a further advance in cotton futures today. Announcement that yarn quotations would be based on October instead of July aided sentiment. Java was reported to have placed a large order for cambrics at Lancashire. Final prices were 9 to 15 points higher.

Foreign Reports Intensify Stock Blight; Turnover at 22-Year Low as List Dips

New York, July 24.—The blight which the world upheaval and growing apprehensions of American involvement has placed upon financial markets was intensified yesterday. Coinciding with new and alarming foreign developments and more positive indications that the United States may be placed on a footing akin to war, speculative interest in stocks reached a 22-year low.

Bonds were likewise dull and foreign exchange transactions followed a routine pattern. Only in commodity sections, notably the grains, was there any evidence of life, and here the activity was caused by the disaster factor—hot weather and lack of moisture in important crop areas.

On the Stock Exchange only 195,200 shares changed hands in the five-hour session, a new low since 1918. According to unofficial records, it was the bottom for a full day since the 165,091 share turnover on September 19, 1918. At that time, premature peace reports were current. The previous 22-year low was established on Thursday of last week, with 221,640 shares.

Minor Dip Recorded

The composite for the 100 stocks was off 0.17 point, losses centering principally in the steels and other war issues, although all groups except the utilities were lower for the day.

The market ignored or responded only apathetically to favorable business news.

Keeping stocks and bonds in the rut, however, were such developments as the confiscation of the British oil interest in Rumania by that government and indications that Hungary and Bulgaria are pressing claim for Transylvania and southern Dobruja; the signing of a trade treaty between Germany and Turkey; a speed-up in the Nazi air raids on British towns and shipping, a declaration by a high United States staff officer before the military affairs committee of the House that the emergency now existing warrants the country going on a war footing; and early signs that the Havana conference will face an enormous initial problem of controlling or eliminating "fifth column" activities.

Loft Active, Lower

Loft was the most active stock of the day at 8,600 shares and a closing price ⅝ lower. Steel common and Bethlehem both fell back although the latter's third quarter earnings are due today and are expected to be good. Coppers, electric manufacturing and oils mostly held within a narrow range. Standard of New Jersey was down ¾ on the Rumanian news. Its Rumanian subsidiary probably accounts for about one-quarter of Rumanian output. The aircrafts followed the general pattern, although earnings continue to feature corporate reports.

Traders in listed bonds were no more inclined toward activity than their brethren in the equities department. Turnover was only $3,630,000, with the tone soft. United States Treasury securities dipped only by smallest fractions, as attention turned to the new issue of guaranteed CCC notes. Best grade corporate bonds were quiet, with variations small and irregular. The speculative departments showed some activity, but only in spots.

Foreign dollar issues were marked generally lower, as the intensification of the war between Britain and Germany was awaited. Canadian, Australian and German bonds lost ground, while Italians held to former levels. Bonds of the German-occupied countries drifted lower.

Power Output At Highest Level Since February

New York, July 24 (AP).—Consumption of electric power in the week ended July 20 rose to the highest level since the first week of February, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

A major factor in the expansion, utility circles pointed out, is the unusually high rate of industrial activity throughout the country.

Output totaled 2,524,084,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of 1.6 per cent over the previous week's 2,483,342,000 and up 10 per cent from the 2,294,588,000 of the corresponding period last year.

The rise, larger than seasonally expected, lifted the Associated Press index of electric power production to 128.5 from 128.0 in the previous week and 119.2 a year ago. The index, with 1929-30 as 100, is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend.

New Englnad, 5.4; Middle Atlantic, 9.6; Central Industrial, 16.9; West Central, 3.9; Southern States, 6.5; Rocky Mountain, 18.1; Pacific Coast, 4.4.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—Hog prices declined 10 to 15 further today, the top falling to 6.65 sparingly. Cattle were generally 15 to 25 lower. Lambs were steady.

Opening slow and uneven, hog prices were steady to 10 lower at first, but in later trade were mostly 10 to 15 off. Receipts totaled only 14,000 with 4,000 direct to packers. Best wholesale pork loins fell to 17 a pound.

Strictly good and choice grades of cattle opened 15 to 25 lower, but 25 or more lower was generally bid. Today's run consisted primarily of steers with good and choice grades predominating. Choice to prime Nebraskas sold at 11.85.

Unfilled Orders Top $110,000,000; British Would Take All

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 24.—The Glenn L. Martin Co. reported today that its backlog of unfilled orders was in excess of $110,000,000 as of June 30, 1940, while its financial statement showed net sales for the second quarter of the year reached an all-time high of $11,201,082.

The exact amount of unfilled orders, the company explained, depended upon the extent to which it may be decided to expand production for the British purchasing commission. The British have said they would take all the airplanes the Martin Co. can produce in 18 months.

Net sales for the first six months of 1940 reached $20,112,476.42, while net income for that period was $4,291,489.85, equal to $3.92 per share on the 1,094,532 shares of common stock outstanding. Net income for the second quarter, after reflected substantial increases in income tax reserves, was $2,128,819.98, equal to $1.95 per share.

The company paid a dividend of $1 per share on July 19, the second in its history. The first was paid last December.

A plan to decentralize operations at Martin's Middle River plant and possible location of a new aircraft manufacturing unit at Municipal Airport also was announced. Martin said the company was facing a need for expansion and added a survey was being made to find a location for at least one more plant and possibly two or three additional factories.

Blanket Approval Of Utility's Plan Refused by SEC

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission has tentatively denied an application by Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation for a ruling that proposed voluntary changes by the company would make it an integrated system within the meaning of the so-called "death sentence" of the Holding Company Act.

The commission has set July 31 for reargument of the case, however.

While expecting to approve some of the Columbia Gas proposals, the commission tentatively declined to give general approval or to grant the request for an additional finding that nothing more need be done to meet the geographical requirements of the law.

British Empire shipments accounted for nearly all the $116,018,899 worth of gold imported into the United States in the week ended July 17.

These shipments, announced yesterday by the Commerce Department, included $56,068,788 from the United Kingdom, $46,053,109 from Canada, and $5,116,644 from Australia.

The total was about $48,000,000 less than the preceding week, but on about a par with preceding weeks. Other shipments included $2,060,064 from Portugal, $1,950,000 from Spain, and $2,635,135 from Yugoslavia.

Export totals were $3,705 of gold and $3,086 of silver.

Kettering Given $140,000 Bonus

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission disclosed yesterday that Charles F. Kettering, of Dayton, Ohio, officer and director of General Motors Corporation, had received a bonus of stock having a present value of more than $140,000.

Kettering, a noted research engineer, received 3,283 shares of General Motors $10 par common stock as compensation on April 10. This was shown in the commission's supplementary report of transactions by officers, directors and principal owners of corporations during May. The Kettering report was received too late for the April summary.

Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, reported the sale of his entire 15,000 shares of Gannett Co., Inc., $7 participating preferred stock, which he had acquired in April by conversion or exchange of 30,000 shares of Class A common stock.

THE GIRL ACROSS THE STREET RENTS A ROOM HERE, PRETENDING IT'S FOR HERSELF—
THAT NIGHT A MAN SLIPS IN TAKES ALL HIS MEALS IN—HAS NEVER BEEN SEEN HERE, EXCEPT BY ME—
SHE SIGNALS HIM FROM ACROSS THE STREET WITH A FLASHLIGHT AT NIGHT—
HER MESSAGES ARE IN CZECH—SHE SAYS SHE'S WATCHED—HER LANDLADY SAYS FOREIGNERS ASK QUESTIONS ABOUT HER—AND THEY'RE NOT WANTED BY THE POLICE—ALL RIGHT—THEN IT'S TIME FOR ME TO MOVE IN!

Listen! with Glynn

You're going to hear more from Elwood, Ind., later. It's the home town of Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential nominee, and he's going to make his acceptance speech from there August 17.

But tonight, well before Mr. Willkie speaks for himself, you'll be able to hear his neighbors speak for him on C. B. S.'s "Vox Pop" program, on WJSV at 6:30. Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth are interviewing his childhood friends and acquaintances in the quiet Indiana town. One of the speakers is to be Miss Mary Cox, teacher in Elwood for more than 50 years now. She remembers the Republican choice as a pupil way back when. Among the incidents she recalls is a spanking she had to administer in the classic tradition to the now august gentleman. And you'll hear all about it. Later on "Vox Pop" is to bring the same sort of broadcast from Hyde Park, N. Y., the discussion subject being another well known gentleman in politics.

Cherchez la femme note: Lloyd Dennis, WJSV's program director, was out for a few minutes yesterday when a telephone call was referred to him by Harry Crow, WJSV's auditor. So we'll never know who it was. "Is this the auditing department?" the sweet, feminine voice asked, "I'd like to arrange for an audition, please."

Today's Radio Highlights

11:15 a. m., WOL—The Navy Band plays in the Sail Loft of the Washington Navy Yard, Charles Benter conducting: "Across the Atlantic," Alexander; "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar; "Minnehaha," Bernard; "Hail America," Drumm; "Midshipman," Jordan; "Thoughts of Thee," Mrs. Alfred Gillette; "If I Had My Way," Klein and "The Adjutant," Weldon.

5:30, WOL—Shannon Allen, of the Department of the Interior, continues his discourses on America's natural resources and the problems of their conservation.

7, WJSV—Superstitious? Of course, you are, for there are any number of ways to be superstitious and on Jim McWilliam's Ask-It-Basket these curiosities of folklore are the evening's subject.

7, WOL—It's time we called attention to Fulton Lewis, jr.'s recent traveling. Between covering the Philadelphia and Chicago conventions, he looked into airplane setups in California. In Washington two days ago, he's now down with Barnet Nover and other on-the-ball journalists covering the Pan-American Conference in Havana. Steve McCormick is taking over his first four minutes with capital news.

7:30, WJSV—Winifred Moore is a blind prodigy who reads a Braille music book with her feet while playing the piano. She illustrates on Strange as It Seems.

8, WRC—Raymond Massey, Shirley Ross, Allan Jenkins and Mildred Dilling look in on Bing Crosby.

9, WRC—Don Quixote is Rudy Vallee's role for the evening with Billy House, the rotund one, as his Sancho Panza and Gracie MacDonald as Dulcinea del Toboso. Maxie Rosenbloom wonders what Dulcinea should "tell de bozo."

9:30, WMAL—Izler Solomon, 30-year-old conductor of the Illinois Symphony Orchestra, leads one of Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal: Nicolai's Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and the Chaikovski fourth are programmed.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Flight of Fancy — BY MILTON CANIFF

PARACHUTES! THINK WE COULD DO IT?
I THINK WE'RE CRAZY TO EVEN TRY IT.... BUT! .... COME ON! KOWLOON AIRPORT, DRIVER!
HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE HU SHEE PLANS TO GET TO THIS TEMPLE ROCK PRISON, IF WE HAVE TO THINK ABOUT PARACHUTING?
SHE'S PROBABLY BEEN PLOTTING FOR WEEKS... THESE YOUNG CHINESE GALS ARE DARN CLEVER, AS YOU MAY HAVE HEARD!
I'D LIKE TO CHARTER A PLANE FOR A PRIVATE FLIGHT!
INDEED!
AS YOU POSSIBLY KNOW, YOUNG MAN, THERE IS A WAR IN PROGRESS! WE ALLOW NO PRIVATE FLIGHTS FROM THIS FIELD! GOOD DAY!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

THERE Y'ARE, MR. SCREED! THAT'S AS BIG AS I CAN BLOW UP THAT HAND WITHOUT LOSIN' ALL TH' DETAIL!
THANKS, GEORGE! THAT'S GOOD ENOUGH! LOOK AT THIS, JOHN!
YOUR DOUBLE WORE AN UNUSUAL SIGNET RING! ONE THAT MIGHT BE TRACED TO THE OWNER!
YES, LUKE.. BUT "J" MIGHT STAND FOR "JOHN"!
UM-HUM.. THAT'S NOT SO GOOD! WE MAY NEVER BE ABLE TO PIN THIS FRAME-UP ON YOUR POLITICAL OPPONENT, THE "HONORABLE" CLEM SWILLER...
HOWEVER, WHAT WE'VE ALREADY FOUND OUT SHOULD SQUARE YOU WITH YOUR WIFE, EH?
THAT MEANS MORE TO ME THAN ANY GOVERNOR'S CHAIR.. BUT, FROM NOW ON, YOU'RE GOING TO SEE A CAMPAIGNING CYCLONE IN ACTION!

DONALD DUCK — Wet Paint—Do Not Touch! — BY WALT DISNEY

SLAM!
JONES
HE SAID HE WOULDN'T PAY IT.
UNCA DONALD! THE PAINT WAS NO GOOD!
OH, HE DID, DID HE?
WATCH ME! I'LL GET THE MONEY, OR THE PAINT!

MICKEY FINN — "Sure Shot" Phil! — BY LANK LEONARD

SO MICKEY LOSE-A DA STRIPES AND GO BACK WALKA DA BEAT, EH, PHIL?
THAT'S RIGHT, COVINO!—AND HERE COMES THE LITTLE YELLOW RAT THAT'S RESPONSIBLE FOR IT!
HOW MUCH FOR THIS NICE RIPE TOMATO, COVINO?
TAKA THISA ONE, PHIL—FOR NOTHING! —IT'S RIPER!
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

DIXIE DUGAN — Living in Comfort — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

BUT WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN SLEEPING, MA?
ON A COT
WHERE ON EARTH IS THERE ROOM FOR A COT?
I'LL SHOW YOU
SEE?? IT'S REALLY NOT SO BAD— AND I'M CLOSE TO MY WORK WHEN I GET BREAKFAST FOR THE TOURISTS
WELL — THIS IS THE LAST STRAW!!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN, DEAR?

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Last Chance — BY FRANK V. MARTINEK

OUT OF RANGE OF WINSLOW'S CRUISER THE SCORPION'S BIG GUNS BLAST AWAY.
SKIPPER! WE'RE SUNK UNLESS—
NOT YET! THE NAVY GAVE US ONE FINAL ACE IN THE HOLE, COME ON!
SEE? A BRAND NEW TYPE OF TORPEDO
BUT GREAT GUNS! WE CAN'T SEE THE TARGET!
THAT WON'T BOTHER THIS TORPEDO, OLD BOY! BELIEVE IT OR NOT, IT'S GOT BRAINS!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

THE DOOR'S UNLOCKED, CHIEF! BUT THERE'S A LIGHT INSIDE!
GO ON! WE GOT NO TIME TO WORRY 'BOUT THAT, STEVE!
OUR PURSUERS WENT ON PAST! AT LAST, WE CAN CATCH OUR BREATH HERE!
YEP! WE GONNA NEED ALL BREATH WE C'N CATCH, TOO!
BOY! I DON'T KNOW WHERE WE ARE—OR WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN TO US—BUT WE CAN SURE BE MISERABLE IN COMFORT!
YEP! BUT PRETTY FLOWERS SOMETIMES HIDE BEAR TRAP!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

IS THIS YOUR HORSE, MISS?
---OOOH!
SHE MUST HAVE BEEN HURT WHEN THE HORSE THREW HER, KING!
GIVE ME YOUR CANTEEN, KID!
LEAVE ME ALONE! I DON'T NEED YOUR HELP!
JUST DRINK THIS WATER—THEN KID AND I WILL TAKE YOU HOME!
